THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE SHEAF OF WHEAT

And the Flowers That Go Between.

The amount of flowers in the first illustration is made purposely scanty to plainly illustrate the principle of today's discussion, namely, that all lines of a design should have a common source. To explain, the lines of this design can be found by making a very simple drawing. two or three lines to represent the position of the wheat straws from the tie upwards, and the same from the tie downwards. Then add one line to represent the general direction of the principal group of roses on the right side of the center of the sheaf, and another to show the stem of the roses which stands out higher on the sheaf than the others. Add another line for the other group, the one on the left, being careful to trace the lines in to the point of the tie on the sheaf. They are all drawn in toward the tie on the center of the sheaf. Then some of them scatter again, outwards, like the wheat straws below the tie. From this standpoint our piece is correct according to a well known principle of art.

We will state it again for emphasis: All lines of a design should tend to a common source or center. Growing out of this principle, naturally enough, is the lesson of the sheaf and the roses. They appear to have been cut just as if they were found growing together and to have been bound in the same bundle. Does this not appear to you as being the true motive for the combination of the wheat and flowers, rather than the common practice of making a flat bunch of the flowers and laying it on top of the sheaf?

The stems of the flowers thus arranged may not all be seen, but the position of the flowers will tend to show their whereabouts. Some can be set under the sheaf and the flower pulled through the wheat. The lines that are shown of the stems among the wheat can be much larger and heavier. Foliage in the way of ferns or vines can be added, and the piece made more or less elaborate as the case requires. Ribbon, if used, should be tied tight as though the whole bundle were held together by this tie alone. Where ribbon is used, remove the tie that comes with the wheat. Otherwise the tie will be too bulky.

In getting the flowers in among the wheat it is not necessary to insert all the flowers individually. In the illustration two or three groups were made according to the principles for making clusters, and these small clusters were wired together securely and set into the sheaf after the surplus foliage was removed. If a flower strays out of place or the stem breaks and bends back, never mind. It is so much the better. Only fasten it securely where it lies. This design also enables one to make a better showing with a small amount of flowers.

With Valley and Adiantum.

The second illustration is an elaboration of the first, using lily of the valley instead of the roses, and introducing adiantums as extra foliage. It is a series of sheaves with a background added. The material used is three large sheaves of wheat, 150 adiantum and 150 valley. The wheat ties of the sheaves were removed for purposes of convenience in this case, although they might have been left on as far as appearances are concerned. The intention was not so much to give an impression of a made-up piece, but to find the most convenient and substantial mounting. A rectangular panel of thirty inches length made of light wood, or one of the ordinary wire frame is made. If the wood panel is used the sphagnum should be packed on about two inches thick and wrapped over and over closely around the back and front. If it is a wire panel the usual method of lining, filling and wrapping is followed. If the latter is used the sheaves must be tied on over the sphagnum, but if the former is used they must be nailed through the sphagnum into the wood back of the panel.

The left sheaf is placed so as to project slightly over the edge of the panel, with its center about the center of the panel vertically. The top sheaf is placed with about one-third of its height projecting over the top of the panel, and the third sheaf back slightly from the right edge of the panel, and so that its top is below the center of the panel horizontally. When the sheaves are on, not much of the sphagnum will be seen, only patches here and there; but we will not be in a hurry to cover up the patches yet awhile. Stem about 100 of the valley in clusters of two or three, sheathed with a leaf of their own foliage. In cases like this, where there is no danger of the picks protruding at the back of the frame, use the whole picks wired. Many florists use these exclusively, but it is better to have both kinds and choose to suit the occasion. The groups of valley in this piece lie against the panel, so there is plenty of depth to the moss filling. In arranging the valley with the sheaves follow the same plan of design as was outlined for the first sheaf and the roses. For the upper sheaf make an ordinary spray of about two dozen valley. Next make a staple from a heavy, yet pliable, wire; lay the spray flat against the moss, close to the left side of the upper sheaf, a little higher on the panel than the upper sheaf is placed. Pin it firmly to the sphagnum with the staple. Continue this process with the stemmed bunches of valley through the top sheaf, following out the design of the roses and wheat in the first illustration. Run the stem ends of the small valley group firmly into the sphagnum fan-shaped until the upper sheaf is closely decorated as shown.

Then start in on the lower sheaf, scattering the bunches a little more, as the last illustration shows clearly. A few clusters are placed up among the wheat heads, their stems following the direction toward the tie of the sheaf. Some are peeping out, only partly visible, and others are closely grouped down toward the center of the sheaf. But all, one way or another, radiate from the wheat tie as a center, except those on the lower left corner of the panel and the two erect groups, one above another, to the right of the lower sheaf. It can readily be seen that these take their source from the background and not from the centers of any of the sheaves. This is the intention. Together with the fern leaves, these latter patches of valley are a part of the background. The adiantums are stemmed long, two or three to a pick, and inserted under the sheaves so as to cover the sphagnum. They are sprayed out freely all over the panel. Two good sized groups are thrust into the left sheaf so as to give the impression of having been cut and bound with it.

With the severe lines formed by the wheat being tied into formal shape, it is advisable to give the flowers and green all the freedom possible. Strive to attain the happy medium in the finished piece of a decisive character softened with natural touches. G. B.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums for Stock.

You may be given hints of important work just now, yet the all-absorbing matter for the next three weeks will be getting out your orders. The extremely dull and cold May has kept our customers quiet. They are in no hurry this spring, but when it does come warm there will be a dreadful rush.

If not already done, you should spare help to plant out your own stock for future propagation. There are many things of which a few small plants will suffice even if not put out until the Fourth of July, but with the most important of all summer bedding plants, the geranium, this will not do. If you expect a big lot of healthy cuttings in September or October you must plant out healthy, vigorous plants now and give them plenty of room. Geraniums are usually planted about one foot apart. At this distance they make a mass of leaf and bloom, but the growth is too much drawn up to be strong and on your own place for stock they are better at least eighteen inches apart, and get them growing well.

More than once we have seen some excellent variety sell entirely out. This is bad management. If they had been in the ground, with flowers and buds picked off, you would have been all right for the future.

Some Standard Sorts.

It is not every year we get a new geranium that completely fills all requirements. Possibly some varieties do better than others in certain localities. There are many splendid kinds, but it is not advisable to grow many. It only makes extra work keeping them labeled and where two or three varieties are almost identical, choose one and let the others go. A fine flower of peculiar shade of color is of no value if the plant is not a healthy grower. Semi-doubles are almost entirely used for bedding. Among familiar varieties that cannot be beaten are S. A. Nutt, crimson; Alphonse Ricard, orange scarlet; Mme. Barney, pink; Beaute Poitevine, salmon; A. H. Trego, bright scarlet, very large; John Doyle, vermilion scarlet; Jean Viaud, light pink; Mrs. Frances Perkins, bright clear pink; Fiancee, white. Telegraph is a single cerise scarlet of great vigor, free flowering and said to be a great acquisition. Gloire de France is such a pretty flower it should be grown, even if it is not the best of bedders, almost white with bright salmon center. There is one large salmon single indispensable for bedding, Mrs. E. G. Hill.

Try Some Novelties.

If your trade is selling on the market, or retailing a few of a kind mostly, then a greater variety is desired and many beautiful kinds can be grown. It costs but a trifle to try a half dozen of a few new varieties. In fact, it is the proper way to improve your collection. We once knew fifty zonal geraniums by their leaf and habit without seeing the flower, but as our business now is almost entirely filling flower beds and we are only asked for scarlet, or pink, or salmon, this number of varieties is no longer necessary. Yet what a pleasure it is, or should be, to buy half a dozen new kinds and watch their growth and opening flowers with the expectation that they will be all that Messrs. Slip & Cutting's catalogue pictured them. Of the many things that have been written and quoted about the late Joe Jefferson, one that is a compliment to our calling and most pleasant to relate is a letter to an old friend. He said: "The saddest feature of old age is the absence of expectation, and that is why I have become an enthusiastic gardener, for gardening is all expectation."

Silver-Leaved Geraniums.

Of late the bronze-leaved geraniums have very much dropped in favor, but the silver-leaved Mountain of Snow and the compact little Mme. Salleroi are largely used. Get some out before you have only scrubs left. We do not make as much of the ivy-leaved section as they do in Europe. They grow very fast when hot weather comes and soon cease to flower, but where their roots are more confined, as in vases, veranda or window boxes and also in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, they are beautiful plants and in no section has there been such wonderful improvement. Plant out at once a good stock of your standard kinds, as well as a few plants of the newer introductions. A good semi-double ivy-leaved geranium in a 5-inch pot and supported with two or three slender stakes will sell on our market better than S. A. Nutt. They do not sell for flower gardens, but for the humble cottage windows and, though they may sell singly, there are many thousands of windows to receive them.

A Sheaf of Wheat with Valley and Adiantum.

Tulips in the Parterre at Lincoln Park, Chicago, May, 1905.

Fuchsias.

In the winter I reminded you to select a few plants of your earliest propagated fuchsias, grow them as large as you could and not sell them, for from such plants well ripened in October you must get your cuttings. Now do not sell them. You have plenty of others. Keep these strong plants and in a few weeks plunge them out of doors and keep them well watered and you will have wood on them that will give you strong cuttings. Little, weak plants of fuchsias will never give cuttings that will make the best plants.

Cannas.

The canna is now of the first importance. Well supplied, as you may think you are, they will all go and it is far better in every way that you grow your own stock. They are so easily kept during winter that there is no excuse for being short of good roots in March, but you cannot have them unless they are planted out now.

Like others of our popular flowers, new varieties are not all improvements, but it is most interesting and inexpensive to try a plant or two of the novelties. We often think of many a good thing we have grown just because we have happened to see it. If we had not seen it we might not have possessed it for two or three years and as we cannot see all the good things we must risk buying some that are no improvements to obtain a gem or two.

Hydrangea Otaksa.

Plants that were propagated in February and have been kept in the light would have been better shifted two weeks ago. If you take the good advice of Mr. Peterson you will put three of these 2½-inch plants into a 5-inch pot or six plants into a 6-inch pot and now they should be plunged out of doors in the broad sun, where it is convenient to water them, for they want plenty of water from the middle to the end of July. Pinch out the top of each plant and they will make side shoots, but two, or at most three, breaks to each plant is enough. They will in early September need another shift of two inches; that is, if in a 5-inch pot shift to a 7-inch and then again plunge them in the sun. At all shifts a heavy, fresh loam with a fourth of rotted cow manure is what they want and they should be potted firmly. This is an important point. We hope to allude to later treatment at a more seasonable time. Hydrangeas are now imported and give fine flowers, but what we have seen of the imported plants are not as dwarf, handsome plants as the home-grown ones.

Planting Lawn Beds.

I want to say a little about the operation of planting our flower beds. As we have had occasion to remark, if it is a bed of geraniums or cannas with some edging and it amounts to $15 or $20, we would rather one of our experienced men should do it for our customers, as results will be better, both for immediate appearance and future welfare. We sometimes find that the planting is not the only thing to do, for the bed is still as it was left last fall. The digging should never be done without charge.

With small plants like echeverias, santolinas and alternantheras it is a simple thing to squeeze the plants into the soft ground. A good sprinkling with the hose will start them going and a slight stirring of the soil before it is quite dry will prevent the soil from baking. This method, however, is not always satisfactory with larger plants, such as our fine flowering geraniums. I am sure it is time and labor well spent to make a hole of ample size, put in the plant and enough soil to surround the ball and give it a good firming, but do not fill up the little excavation. Water each plant thoroughly. You know then that the ball of roots and the ground immediately around the ball are well saturated. In a few minutes the water has soaked away and then fill in with the dry earth you took out with the trowel. That will act as a mulch and be worth five waterings on the surface. Many flower beds are foolishly rounded up and in that case it is very difficult to water on the surface and get it to penetrate. A soaking would wash the loose soil onto the grass and not thoroughly wet all the roots. This plan may and does take a little longer, but it is work well done.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

When is it best to cease stopping early chrysanthemum plants, that is to say, pinch them back, and to choose the three desirable shoots? E. V.

Supposing you have a young plant four or five inches high and you will plant it about the middle of June: If it is growing tall, stop it now. If later, and only two or three inches high at planting time, let it get a good start in the bed and then pinch the top out. If you get three shoots you have all you want and must keep any more growths rubbed off. If you should only get two shoots from the stopped plant, then choose the strongest growth and in a few weeks pinch it again. You will then get two shoots.

Now I want E. V., who must be a reader of the REVIEW, to observe carefully each week what C. H. Totty has to say about chrysanthemums. He is an explicit writer and an expert grower and versed in all the lore of the queen of the autumn, as well as all the wrinkles that produce a commercial flower and an exhibition monster. "Read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" all he says of Mistress Mum. W. S.

LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Please inform me when and how to thin out permanent lily of the valley beds. What distance apart should the plants stand? E. V.

The best month in which to separate your valley roots would be October. The leaf is about gone then and the roots dormant. I should advise you to make at least two grades of the roots: The large pips that will flower the following spring and the weaker that may not flower for two years. That is, of course, providing you want to increase your stock to that extent.

Plant six inches between the rows by two inches between pips. We moved some last year, making new beds of some of the strong roots, and they are now flowering finely. Dig the ground deeply and manure well. It is often recommended that valley should be planted in partial shade. That does not seem to us essential. It may help the flower but not the plant. You should plant in beds of such size that you can easily put up a few boards to support glass, sash or frames covered with cheese-cloth, which will greatly help the quality of flowers and prevent a storm from ruining the crop. We think we cut spikes last spring from such a bed a little finer in every respect than the finest forced flowers we have yet happened to see. This sash protection is only needed for a few weeks, unless you want them in flower a week or so earlier, which can easily be done. W. S.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Cultivating and Watering.

Now that you have your planting all done you should keep after the cultivating systematically. Just as soon after each rain as it will do to work the ground, you should go through the rows with the cultivator and break up the surface. If it does not rain for a week, go through them again at least once each week. The first cultivating after each rain should be rather deep, but the others need be only deep enough to break up the surface. This cultivating is of immense value to the plants during a long dry spell and, while it does not cause them to grow as rapidly as frequent rains do, it keeps them from burning and keeps the plants in a healthy, slow growing state.

I have always preferred this frequent cultivating to any artificial watering in the field and I claim that except in the most extremely dry seasons you can produce a better plant for housing with the cultivator than you can by the use of the sprinkler. The plants may not run so large, but they will be hardier and stockier and will stand up better when transplanted, because they are not so soft and sappy. They will take hold of the new soil quicker and the quality of the blooms produced early in the season will be better.

Every few weeks, according to the weeds, you will need to go through them with the hoe, hoeing out the weeds and breaking up the soil between the plants in the row.

If you have planted a lot for summer blooming, of course the above does not apply to them. You want a rapid growth on them and nothing will do it better than a good supply of water. A good mulch of old manure and a daily watering will produce a strong, rapid growth and good blooms. If you cannot mulch them, keep the top of the soil loosened up well, as it will act similar to a mulch in holding in the moisture.

LAWSON.

Will Mrs. Lawson do better if shifted as needed and kept in the house until time to plant on the bench, or should it be planted in the field like other varieties?

L. M. B.

There are three ways to handle Mrs. Lawson successfully and it seems to be a toss-up as to which is the best. The very highest grade of blooms is produced under each method and it seems to be simply a question of care and attention to details. The method we prefer is to plant on the beds early in May from 3-inch or smaller pots, according to when the cuttings were propagated. The second way is to pot into 4-inch early in May and plunge outdoors until June or July and then plant them on the beds. The third method is to plant in the field along with the other varieties and plant into the house early in July. It is getting late now for planting in the field, so I would advise you to employ either one of the first two methods. A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATIONS BURN.

My carnations are burning very badly with glass shaded on the south side, houses running east and west. I put it to the watering which my foreman does during midday, but he says our glass, which is B grade, does it. Who is right?

S. M.

I hardly think that watering during midday would cause your carnations to burn. It often happens that part of our carnations are watered between eleven and twelve o'clock and we have never had any trouble along that line. I can not say, however, that the B glass is responsible for it, either. B glass is not considered as good as A glass, on account of the imperfections, and most growers prefer to pay the difference in price and use the A grade.

Before you argue any further, however, I would suggest that you make sure whether the burning is not caused by thrips. At this time of the year, when the sun is hot, there is much complaint of the petals burning after having been punctured by the thrips. Take a half open bloom or a bud just before unfolding and pull it apart and look for a little tan or brown insect about one-sixteenth of an inch long and quite active. If you find any of these you need argue no further. Send for a can of To-bak-ine Liquid and apply it according to directions every evening for a week and then about three times weekly until your plants are clean. I have said a good deal lately in my notes about how to fight and prevent this pest from gaining a foothold on your place and it might pay you to look over your back numbers of the Review.

If it is caused by the B glass, the burning will be in streaks, running east and west, along the bench and you can soon locate the spot that does the focusing and by painting the under side of the glass with a thin coat of white lead you can stop the burning. A. F. J. Baur.

PLANTING.

In the planting of grafted stock, great care should be taken to have the point of union below the surface, so that it will never be exposed to drying influences, which are fatal to this class of stock. This method of planting also encourages the formation of roots on the scion, giving the plants all the benefits to be derived from own-root stock.

It is also a safe plan to give grafted stock supports as soon as planted, as in case of hard syringing or accidental brushing against, the scions are easily detached. Beauties, because of their quick, succulent growth, should also be supported as early as possible, so that they maintain an upright position and stand up to the syringe, which makes it so much easier to keep off red spider.

Cutting, Packing and Shipping.

Memorial week, with all its bustle, cares and troubles, is now with us and a few remarks on the cutting, care and packing of stock may be of some service. Judging from past experience we may still look for the work of the pickler, but I am glad to observe that this practice is in a great measure being abandoned and particularly so by the younger growers, which augurs well for the future. It is foolish and suicidal to ship out stock after it is thirty-six hours old and it must have been well cared for to make it safe even at that age, as the distance to be traveled, carelessness of the express companies and sudden change of temperature to which we are subject at this season, may cause a shipment of that class of stock to become a dead loss, causing disappointment to your customer, loss of confidence and causing irritation between yourself and customer and eventually loss of orders.

Use clean, white paper next the blooms when packing, as this gives a good appearance, even to inferior stock, whereas dirty, crumpled paper and careless packing causes the very best of stock to look mussy.

Wrap well and tidily and cord the boxes in such a way that they can be handled easily.

To facilitate the prompt and expeditious delivery of stock, the address and routing instructions should be clearly and distinctly written, as expressmen are usually too busy at this season to spend much time on deciphering puzzles in that form.

Now a word to the customer. If the stock received is not quite so good at the end of the week as it was at the beginning, remember that the grower also has his troubles and that his customer frequently insists on having shipments when stock is scarce and has to be cut tight in order to accommodate him and if sales begin to fall off he is sure to get his share of the blame. Do not insist on having stock of that kind, as disappointment is sure to follow and disposing of such has the effect of giving your stock and methods a bad name.

RIBES.

PUT a neat sign in your window: "Funeral or gift flowers delivered by telegraph anywhere in the United States." When you have taken an order refer to the page of "Leading Retail Florists" in the REVIEW and select a man to whom to telegraph the order. You will find it a very satisfactory source of business.

A GOOD PINK PEONY.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a pink peony which is being offered in moderate quantities by the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago. The blooms were cut at Sarcoxie, Mo., where they are being grown for E. E. Pieser, who owns the stock. The color is a pleasing permanent shade of light pink and Mr. Pieser has bought all the plants he could find of this variety. He says that it is the most remarkable keeper of which he knows and he believes that it has a very bright future as a cut flower.

NOTES ON THE PEONY.

[The following is a portion of an address by Robert T. Jackson, before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16, 1905.]

According to Baker there are about two dozen species of peonies. He lists twenty-two species with their synonyms. Lynch lists and describes twenty-five species. Excepting P. tenuifolia and perhaps P. Wittmanniana (which is somewhat difficult to grow), most of the species are said to be not striking as garden flowers, and are of interest principally to the collector. They might of course be of value in hybridizing, to break the blood of cultivated forms.

The earliest peony to bloom is P. tenuifolia, both the single and double forms, which appear in May. The flowers, though small, are of brilliant coloring, and well worth growing. Next in succession comes P. officinalis var. rubra, the old-fashioned double red peony of our grandmother's garden. Its superb color, freedom of bloom and large size when well grown render it one of the best of peonies and indispensable. P. officinalis var. rosea, a fine nearly cherry red variety of much merit, and var. alba, which is a delicate pink on opening, changing to white before fading, are important additions, both as being good peonies, and as coming early and therefore extending the season of bloom. Other varieties of officinalis are listed in foreign catalogues, but I have not seen them.

Tree peonies, or P. moutan varieties, come with the officinalis and extend over to the season of the Chinese peonies. Peonia moutan, according to authorities, is not known in the wild state, being known only in cultivation, first in China and Japan, where it has been grown for a very long period. Prof. Charles S. Sargent writes me that he does not know of it in the wild state, but believes that it will sooner or later turn up. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that a large growing shrubby species, and the only shrubby species of the genus, should be known only as a cultivated plant. Tree peonies are not as easy to grow as herbaceous peonies, are less hardy and more difficult to propagate, also it is not as easy to get really choice varieties. As far as known, all the tree peonies in the market are grafted on moutan, albiflora or officinalis stock. August Dessert claims that they do best grown on moutan stock, although it is difficult to get roots of this stock large enough. He says that they use Sinensis (a variety of albiflora) stock and cut scions with two or more eyes and so disposed that at least one eye is beneath the surface of the ground; this eye greatly encourages the formation of roots in the graft.

Kelway gives interesting notes on raising moutan seedlings and in regard to grafting says: "First procure a sufficient quantity of tubers of P. Sinensis; cut these into lengths of about six inches; then take grafts from the sorts you wish to increase and insert these into the upper end of the tuber in the ordinary way of cleft-grafting, tie securely and cover the junction with grafting wax so as to exclude the air. These should now be potted into 5-inch pots, using a rich compost; the pots should be plunged into frames unheated; give a good watering, and cover the frames with a thin mat to partially exclude light. In the winter they should have an extra mat to protect them from severe frost. The best time to perform this operation is August and September." Tree peonies do well on officinalis stock, as I know from experience. The Japanese, I believe, graft on moutan stock alone; but one difficulty with that is that shoots from the stock can not be distinguished from shoots from the scion until blooming, whereas shoots from albiflora or officinalis stock are detected at once. Layering as suggested by some writers, though slow, would doubtless yield most satisfactory plants.

The Chinese peonies of the Peonia albiflora stock come next in season of bloom. The varieties as known appear to be the results of variation of the stock, hybridization, or the crossing with other species, having entered in very little if at all, as far as one can judge from the character of the foliage. They are in bloom about the first of June for the earlier varieties and extend into July for the last blooms of the later varieties. The single varieties are usually among the earliest to bloom, but some double varieties are nearly as early. In the past two years, the early Richardson seedling, George B. Sowerby, has been in full bloom on June 4. The latest of the choice seedlings raised by Mr. Richardson, named Milton Hill, last year had secondary blooms still left in July. We may therefore by selection, starting with P. tenuifolia, get about six weeks or a little more of flowering season for peonies. It would be desirable for dealers in peonies in their catalogues to give more explicit statements of season of bloom, especially the earliest and latest varieties, as an aid to purchasers.

In considering the qualities of a peony, color and form are of the first importance. Freedom of bloom is also an important feature, for some varieties, while of good form and color, are such shy bloomers that they are not desirable for the general cultivator with few varieties. Extra freedom of bloom, on the other hand, is a feature especially desirable. One other point of much importance is strength of stem. Many fine peonies have such weak stems that they flop over hopelessly from their own weight. Others stand erect, thereby developing their flowers much better and showing off to infinitely greater advantage in the garden. Lasting quality both on the plant and as cut flowers, is a feature of importance, especially to the dealer in cut blooms.

Seedlings of P. albiflora varieties require four to six years to bloom. The seed should be planted as soon as ripe in rich mellow soil; if protected by frames so much the better. They are best left without disturbance until blooming, but if planted too thickly, will have to be transplanted. Very double flowers rarely set seed, yet an occasional capsule will develop on an otherwise sterile plant. Harrison says that "seedlings will often bloom single for years and then turn double." I have never seen such a case. Doubtless seedlings may improve in size and quality with age, but as far as my experience has gone, the first bloom, if strong, is a very close indication of what may be expected as the permanent character of a seedling.

It would be highly desirable for peony dealers to insert in their catalogues after the names of varieties the name of the originator. It is only fair credit, and adds much to the interest in these and other plants to know something of their history, who raised them and when. This is done somewhat, but rarely systematically as it should be. Messrs. W. A. Peterson, of Chicago, and C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, Long Island, in their catalogues for 1904, note the originators of peonies very fully, also the Lemoines of Nancy, France, do the same, though not as fully; on the other hand, the Kelways, of Langport, England, list their own seedlings, but ignore the names of other growers.

John F. Cowell.

JOHN F. COWELL.

John F. Cowell is a Buffalonian, but Boston claims him as her own, for he was born in one of the suburbs of that city and spent his early life in landscape gardening in that vicinity. So early as at the age of 18 years he undertook landscape operations of considerable magnitude on his own account and it was in his early life that he became familiar with all the practices of horticulture, gaining a particularly thorough knowledge of hard-wooded plants. At a little later date he became a teacher of botany and, after spending some years in travel, he located at Buffalo. At first he was engaged in railroad construction, in the engineering department, but he spent ten years in the schools of Buffalo as an instructor. In 1894 he entered the employ of the park department, taking charge of South park when it was little more than a barren tract. His genius for landscaping was quickly apparent, for he worked a veritable transformation scene and made the park Buffalo's pride. Nowhere are there better outdoor plantings than those created here by Prof. Cowell. The glass is not of large extent, but shelters one of the finest collections of plants in the country, a large number of the subjects being those collected by Prof. Cowell on his numerous trips of exploration, for he is an indefatigable traveler and has searched many climes in search of botanical novelties.

Prof. Cowell's personal traits have endeared him to all with whom he has come in contact. He is an active member of the S. A. F., having been at one time a member of its executive committee. He also is a member of a large number of scientific bodies and has contributed in numerous instances to botanical literature.

TRITOMA PFITZERII.

Few plants have been in wider demand this spring than Tritoma Pfitzerii. Every order for hardy perennials, whether for planting or for commercial cut flowers or for the ornamentation of the home grounds, has called for a few plants of this and some of the largest dealers are pretty well cleaned out of stock. At a meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia Herbert Greensmith spoke as follows of this plant:

"Tritoma Pfitzeri is perhaps getting old now, but it is still being offered as a novelty, and so it deserves to be. It was first introduced in Germany by the man whose name it bears, I believe in 1894. Later on the whole stock was bought and brought here and found to be nearly identical with one purchased from a florist under the name of 'Everblooming,' and this name having priority and being a little more catchy was retained by its purchaser, but under the name Pfitzerii, by which it has scored its greatest popularity, it was and is still sent out in Europe and by Henry A. Dreer. It is needless to say its popularity is unbounded, and there is no wonder at it when we consider the many uses to which it may be put and the ease with which it is grown and its ready adaptability to most all soils and conditions. John Lewis Childs says:

'It is the grandest bedding plant ever introduced, surpassing the finest cannas for attractiveness and brilliancy, equal to the gladiolus as a cut flower, and blooms incessantly from June until December, regardless of frost. Plants are perfectly hardy in the open ground all winter south of Philadelphia; further north they must be protected or wintered in a cellar, like the ordinary tritoma. Just bury the roots in sand; nothing more is required. It should be planted out very early in spring, and will commence growth and bloom at once, growing larger and finer every day. Plants show from six to twenty grand flower stalks all the time, each holding, at a height of three to four feet, a great cluster of flame-colored flowers of indescribable beauty and brilliancy. Each cluster keeps perfect several weeks, and when it fades two or three more are ready to take its place. Fall frosts do not kill it or stop its blooming, and it is as brilliant as ever long after all other garden flowers have been killed. For cutting it is unsurpassed and the beautiful long spikes keep several weeks in water. Without a single exception, it is the most desirable garden flower. It has created a sensation in the New York cut flower market.'

"Of course this is a catalogue description and must be taken with a grain of salt, but still it seems almost difficult to overestimate the beauty and utility of this grand plant.

"Tritomas generally are coming to the front. In 1899 about thirty-seven varieties were offered by one Holland firm, and these have quite a wide range of color, through various shades of yellow and red and even to white. Here again is another family now so large and so varied as to give us flowers from June until late fall. T. Tuckii is the earliest to flower with us, being rather a curiously pretty plant when in flower. The color of the flower is yellow, tinged with red. It is not a constant bloomer, but in foliage it is quite decorative. Otto Mann comes closely after this, with bold, striking foliage and large, stout flowering scapes bearing a huge mass of handsome scarlet and yellow flowers, and right in line with these comes the everblooming section, as they are now becoming to be known. Corollina, with its small, grassy foliage and persistent, bright coral-red flowers, is quite as free a bloomer as Pfitzerii. R. C. Affourtit is another claimant to these honors, and in my estimation it is a much improved Pfitzerii. But perhaps the most remarkable one of all is Tritoma Triumph. As its name implies, it is a most stately and remarkable looking plant. It is a very vigorous grower, making leaves over three feet in length and throwing up a branching flower scape four or five feet high, with a head of rich orange or golden-yellow flowers twelve to fifteen inches long. It also throws out two smaller heads on the scape, a characteristic which I have not seen in any other variety. Numerous other varieties have been tried and all are very different from the real, old-fashioned variety, T. Uvaria. It is necessary to store all or most all in cold storage during the winter months; we generally lay ours in a cellar with a sandy bottom."

REPOTTING DWARF TREES.

The Hinode Florist Co. gives the following directions for repotting the dwarfed Japanese evergreens, rapidly becoming popular jardiniere plants in this country:

"This is done by us once in two or three years, as follows: Lift the plant out of the jardiniere, and with a sharp-pointed stick remove about one-third of the old soil around the edges and bottom, cutting away a portion of the old fine roots, but none of the strong roots, then replace the plant in the same jardiniere, first looking to the drainage. For a small shallow jardiniere we use a flat piece of tin or a flat crock over each hole; over this spread some rich fresh soil, neatly balance the plant and fill up with the same rich, fresh soil to within one-half inch of the rim. This holds the water and prevents the manure being washed over the sides of the jardiniere. Also the soil should be made sufficiently tight round the edges of the jardiniere to prevent the escape of water, it being of the first importance that the entire ball of soil around the plant be moistened at each watering. Should the watering of the plant at any time have been neglected and the soil become quite dry, put the jardiniere in a tub of water for ten or fifteen minutes, not longer, and if the injury is not too serious the plant will recover. In the case of large plants we use hollow crocks for drainage, the same as those used by growers of specimen plants. After several repottings, the plant having increased in size, shift into a larger pot; but as dwarfness is the thing aimed at, the smaller the shift the better. Repotting should be done in February or March, just before spring growth commences.

"We advise, when it is possible, to get the above work done by a good gardener who has been accustomed to the handling of heaths, new Holland plants, etc. In the case of very shallow jardinieres we find it desirable annually to replace a portion of the old soil, to maintain a healthy growth."

NASTURTIUMS.

The nasturtiums are not subjects that appeal very strongly to the horticultural writer, for they are so easily grown that it is extremely difficult to say anything about them, except to point to the finest of the varieties in the respective shades of color. To write a lengthy article about them it would be necessary to have one's imaginative faculty very highly developed; but, happily, a long article is not necessary or desirable, and I shall say what I consider necessary in the briefest manner. As so well known, there are two distinct types, both of which have their use. One comprises varieties of dwarf growth, and forming, when they have space for their full development, compact bushes, ranging from ten to twelve inches in height, and producing a profusion of flowers. Indeed, well grown examples will, during the height of the season, be simply masses of crimson, scarlet, and yellow, according to the color of their flowers. The others are of scandent habit, rising from six to eight feet high, and blooming freely, if not so profusely as the dwarf race, throughout the season. Taking their different habits into consideration, it will be readily understood that the dwarf varieties are the best adapted for the production of brilliant masses of color in beds and borders, and that the tall-growing varieties are admirably suited for training over rustic fences, and old shrubs that have become thin and "bony." These latter may also be employed with good effect in breaking up the flatness of beds and borders filled with tender or hardy plants. When so used they should be grown three or four together, and have their growth supported.

They should be started in boxes or pots and planted out at the end of May, and a sunny position and poor soil should be assigned them. They are especially useful for light sandy or chalky soils, as on these they bloom freely and continuously, and produce a moderate amount of leafage. On soils that are heavy or rich they produce an excess of leafage, and are far from effective. Much the same results are obtained when they are given a position that is more or less shaded. It is a good rule to allow a distance of six or seven inches each way for the dwarf varieties, and to put the plants of the tall varieties about six inches apart.

There is an abundance of excellent varieties from which to select, and I would suggest the following as the most desirable where a few only of the most distinct colors are required: Crystal Palace Gem, pale yellow, with a maroon blotch on each petal; Empress of India, crimson-scarlet, with dark foliage; King Theodore, deep maroon-crimson flowers, and bronzy-green leaves; Pearl, creamy-white; Ruby King, rose-carmine, with deep green leaves; Vesuvius, a distinct novelty, with apricot-colored flowers and dark foliage. The most useful colors afforded by the tall varieties are crimson, pearl white, scarlet, spotted, and yellow.—Gardeners' Magazine.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

A writer in an English trade paper says that "It will be a little difficult to decide which of the four varieties of scarlet carnations that have recently received awards of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society, is the best. Two of these are from America, these being Adonis, which was so well shown by Bell & Sheldon, of Guernsey, last year; this was certainly one of the most vivid in color; and Flamingo, which has been shown by several exhibitors, and is also seen in the market, a large full flower with an irregular edge to petals. The flowers from main stems are a little inclined to burst the calyx; otherwise it is all that could be desired. General Kuroki, which comes from Cutbush & Sons, is of the same habit as the American varieties. The flowers have a deep calyx, broad petals, vivid in color and stand up well on long, stiff stems. Elizabeth, which received an award last week, comes from a private source. It was raised by G. Henley, gardener at Wrentham Hall, Thetford. It is a seedling from America, which is still a favorite, though one of the older of the American varieties. In Elizabeth, the flowers have large, broad petals, a deep calyx and are of a bright shade."

SAXIFRAGA SALOMONI.

The saxifrages or rockfoils, plentiful as they are, can hardly be too numerous among other alpine flowers, and we can appreciate to the full those which come early in the spring. In such as S. Burseriana, its form major, and S. apiculata we have some of our earliest flowers. Now we have to follow them the pretty Saxifraga Salomoni, another white rockfoil, and one worthy to take rank with S. Burseriana itself. It makes a pleasing little flat mound of small green foliage, all spangled over with good white flowers on little stalks, which only rise a little above the foliage itself. For the rockery, which is not starved by absolute dryness, it is a gem indeed, and it seems to thrive more freely when it has only sun for a portion of the day, and where its roots are not allowed to become dry, from March until June. At other times there is generally enough of natural moisture in the soil for its happiness and prosperity. Probably this is a natural hybrid, but I have no record of its parentage. It was, however, introduced from the continent. As a garden plant it is longer lived than S. Burseriana, and requires little attention if in free, gritty soil.—Gardeners' Magazine.

CRASSULA COCCINEA HYBRIDA.

The introduction of a new flowering plant suitable for the florists' holidays is always an event and the rejuvenation of an old subject is of scarcely less importance. Crassula coccinea is an old-time plant which is just now again finding its way into general use. It was described by Haworth and by De Candolle in the early part of the last century. Linnæus described it fifty years earlier. The latter sets it under the genus crassula, but De Candolle classified it as a rochea, and Bailey, in the most modern work on botany, puts it under the same heading. This, however, is of minor importance to the trade grower. He is principally interested in the success which Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, made of the pink form of the species in the Easter season of 1905. Mr. Dupuy, being familiar with the large use made of Crassula coccinea hybrida in European countries and particularly at Covent Garden market in London, imported a few plants a number of years ago and has now worked up a large stock. There are small stocks in other localities, but it is to Mr. Dupuy that the present popularity of the plant is due. The specimen illustrated in this issue of the Review, is from a plant flowered and photographed at Lincoln park, Chicago.

Crassula coccinea hybrida is of rather slow growth but is tolerant of unfavorable conditions. It nevertheless repays an abundance of light and sun heat, with plenty of atmospheric moisture until the new growths are freely produced. The London Garden says that it should have a night temperature of 50 degrees with a day temperature of 75 to 80 degrees in bright sunshine. It may be grown outdoors in a sheltered position in the summer to thoroughly ripen the wood, which is necessary to insure satisfactory flowering. Careful watering is necessary in order to keep the foliage dry. In potting it should have a light soil and plenty of drainage.

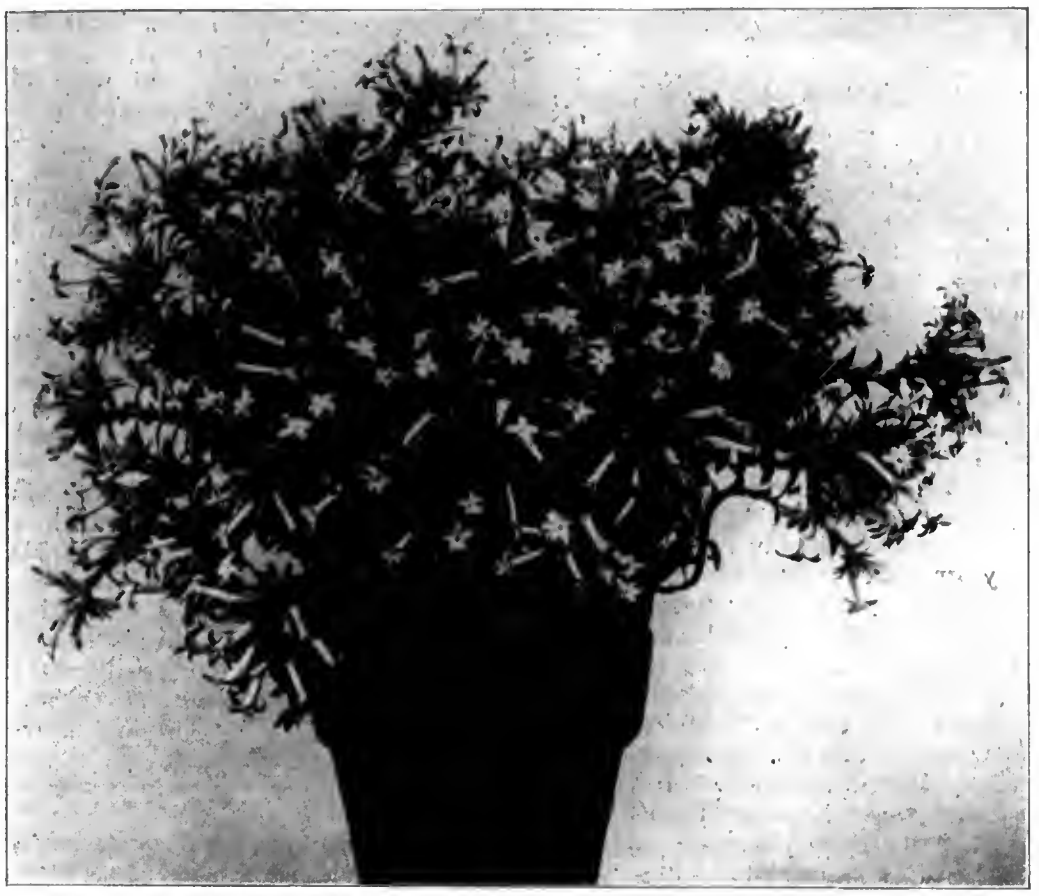
BOSTON.

The Market.

A perceptible lessening in receipts of cut flowers has taken place the past few days, partly owing no doubt to the cool weather, but more probably to the customary holding back for Memorial day. Prices remain about the same all around, but some advance is likely later in the week. As florists usually have a big demand for flowers at home there is not likely to be any glut in the market for the great holiday, in fact some growers will use their entire cut at home and have to buy in addition. The general opinion sems to be that first-class trade will rule on May 27 and 29, colored flowers, as usual, being in strongest demand. The quality of roses and carnations still remains remarkably good.

Florists' Club Meeting.

As briefly referred to last week, the club meeting on May 16 was a highly successful one, sixty members being present. J. W. Duncan was secretary pro tem in the absence of the regular secretary. Dr. R. T. Jackson's talk on peonies was very interesting. He brought with him labels and frames for supporting peonies. The former were zinc on which is used American Indian ink and the stakes of galvanized iron and two feet long. By means of blackboard illustrations he showed how nurserymen should plant and amateurs number or name their plants. He recommended a card catalogue as the best.



Replying to queries from Messrs. Rich and Cameron in regard to ants and diseases the lecturer was unable to suggest any remedies. To insure keeping qualities not a moment should be lost in getting the stems into water.

Replying to Mr. Finlayson, the lecturer said he considered Peony Samuel Henshaw the finest of all the Richardson seedlings. This variety secured a silver medal in Boston last June. The best late sort is Milton Hill, the earliest Charles H. Minot, and the largest grandiflora. Dr. Jackson cordially invited all interested members to inspect his peony garden at the right season.

Eight new members were elected during the evening. William Sim, of Cliftondale, invited the club to visit his establishment about the end of June. This was referred to the executive committee.

A discussion over the prospective picnic took place. It will probably be held about the middle of July and members are counseled not to start for it on automobiles.

There were several interesting exhibits. Louis Dupuy had the pink Crassula hybrida. Julius Heurlin had trollius in several varieties, including a new form of his own named T. Asiaticus excelsior, also Caltha palustris florepleno and Arnebia echioides. H. A. Stevens Co. had fine Harry Fenn carnations, William Sim splendidly grown candytuft and William J. Downs excellent Marshall strawberries, grown in pots under glass.

At the June meeting of the club, when M. H. Walsh will speak on roses, there will be some very special attractions in addition to the lecture. We expect an attendance of 100 at this meeting.

Various Notes.

We have enjoyed a week of unusually cool weather, with some much needed moisture. Flakes of snow fell in Boston on May 18 and the temperature fell near the freezing point on the morning of May 21, winter's last kick we trust. With a continuance of this weather a fair quantity of outdoor flowers will be available for Memorial day. It will be too early for any peonies except P. officinalis, but German iris, oriental poppies, lilacs, Narcissus poeticus in shaded locations, lily of the valley, etc., should be available for the cheaper bouquets. There promises to be a plentiful supply of spiræa, candytuft, feverfew, stocks, antirrhinum and other promiscuous greenhouse flowers, while carnations, roses, sweet peas, etc., will be in heavy supply, but will undoubtedly clear out easily.

A very instructive spraying demonstration to show the best methods of fighting the brown tail and gypsy moths was given on a piece of woodland near Wyoming station, on the Boston & Maine R. R. on May 22. The demonstration, starting at 10 o'clock, lasted throughout the day and was witnessed by many prominent horticulturists and agriculturists.

William Sim, as usual, will have a magnificent lot of candytuft in for Memorial day. It is always sold out in advance, as all first-class stock is.

E. N. Peirce & Sons, out at Waltham, have some thousands of spiræas just right for Memorial day. Their carnations still look fine and Asparagus Sprengeri, of which they are the largest growers for the Boston market, was never better.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, is cutting some extra fine Cattleyas Mendelli, Mossiæ, and Skinneri at present. His orchids are doing well.

We continue to get word of heavy damage to trees and shrubs from the late winter. Fred C. Green, superintendent on Senator Aldrich's extensive estate, at Warwick Neck, R. I., writes that practically all trees and shrubs moved last fall and in exposed places have suffered severely. Large Norway spruces and Scotch and Austrian pines are partly killed in some places and in others scorched brown. Sciadopitys came through all right, while many Retinospora obtusa nana and flifera of several years' standing were partly or wholly destroyed, also common American arborvitæ. Of oaks moved last fall fifty per cent are dead, something unprecedented with him, and stories of similar disaster come to us from other sources.

Quite a few seasonable orchids are now appearing in the high class stores. Cattleya Mossiæ is most abundant. Smaller quantities of C. Mendelli and Skinneri are seen, also a few miltonias.

At Prof. C. S. Sargent's, in Brookline, Charles Sander has his usual beautiful display of azaleas, standard wistarias and rhynchospermums at present. The lilacs, pyrus and other flowering shrubs are also very attractive on this fine estate.

Carnation growers report that cut worms are doing a good deal of damage to young stock in the fields. Violets, phlox, delphiniums, etc., have also suffered.

The Arnold Arboretum is at present the Mecca for flower lovers in this section. The collection of lilacs in about 150 varieties is flowering even better than last year. W. N. CRAIG.

THE REVIEW will send the Pronouncing Dictionary on receipt of 25c.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Toward the close of last week the accumulation of stock was moved out, Friday and Saturday being exceptionally good days, the former with shipping business and the latter with city trade, which has been unprecedentedly dull ever since the teamsters' strike took effect.

This week the receipts of long Beauties are excessively heavy as a new crop is on with many growers. Brides and Maids are undergoing the annual spring change in character and receipts are not so heavy as they have been. There are very large supplies of Chatenay of superb quality and Liberty is more abundant in all grades. The receipts of carnations were somewhat lighter until Tuesday when the market became again over-burdened. There are abundant supplies of sweet peas of fine quality. Outdoor valley has taken the place of the greenhouse product to a large extent. The glut of callas and Harrisii has passed and these flowers promise to be better property from this time on. There are large supplies of daisies and still a few tulips.

The southern shipments of peonies have come to an end and it is reported that local crops will hardly be at hand for Decoration day, so that the supplies for this occasion will come from cold storage. There is at least one large lot in the freezer. Kennicott Bros. Co. says that 75 cents a dozen will be the price, except on some special sorts, as they find that peonies do not move freely enough to suit the present condition if the price goes up above the 75-cent limit.

Cape jasmines of good quality are coming in from A. H. Brandt, of Alvin, Texas, and other shippers of that locality in spite of the assertion made by one packer that Texas jasmine would not come to Chicago this year. Jasmines have ceased to be the factor they once were. Abundant supplies are assured.

The Strike Situation.

For several days there have been indications that the teamsters' strike might be called off at any moment, but it makes little difference to the wholesale florists, except for the effect on general business, whether it is ended or not. There is no trouble with outgoing shipments; in fact, the express companies have offered to resume pick-ups with police guard at any time they may be desired. They are now making regular deliveries with policemen on the wagons but without a sign of disturbance.

Decoration Day.

The indications are that the Decoration day business will be heavier than ever. Many advance orders have been booked and shipping will be heavy from Friday until Monday night. The growers have wisely refrained from pickling and stock should be good. There will be no unusual supplies and both carnations and peonies are likely to be in demand before the shipping business is well out of the way.

Various Notes.

Ernst Weber is sending E. C. Amling a new crop of Beauties of extra quality. Mr. Amling says that he is looking for a very large business at the close of this week, Decoration day shipping beginning on Friday and continuing until Monday. He is of the opinion that there will be no surplus of stock, even with big receipts, as the early demand is exceptionally strong.

D. J. Murphy, who went east to be married a couple of weeks ago, is expected back in Chicago within a few days. He has several good offers from the growers here, but would like to go into business for himself.

J. W. Niesen, who recently bought the Holden store at 753 E. Forty-seventh street, reports business as good as he could expect. Mr. Holden started May 10 to spend the summer in the west.

Dredgers found the body of Otto Kroeschell in the north branch of the Chicago river on the evening of May 17. It had evidently been in the water for a number of days. The indications are that Mr. Kroeschell either fell or jumped into the river while mentally deranged. He was the secretary and treasurer of the Kroeschell Bros. Co. and the second member the firm has lost in less than a year.

One of the week's visitors is R. E. Kennicott, of Carbondale, who usually comes in with his last shipment of peonies.

The daily papers had a story one day last week about an attempted kidnapping of one of Henry Wittbold's daughters at Edgebrook. There was nothing in it.

Bassett & Washburn are again shipping a considerable part of their stock from the city store.

The prospect of a spread of the strike to include the teamsters for the lumber concerns has led the wholesalers to stock up heavily on wooden shipping boxes.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports a very good sale of bridal wreath spiræa, which has begun to come in this week.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having one of the heaviest cuts in its history. They are particularly strong on roses.

George Reinberg is beginning on another big cut of long Beauties.

Chas. Klehm says that there will be few peonies at Klehm's Nurseries before Decoration day, but a big cut immediately thereafter. Quality will be especially good this year.

At E. H. Hunt's they are sending out a great many Decoration day supplies. The express companies are now making pick-ups whenever requested and shipments go without interruptions.

Vaughan & Sperry are receiving some exceptionally good red carnations.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports large bookings of Decoration day orders, most of them for shipment on Sunday.

Albert Amling reports another grower at Maywood. Wm. Collatz is building two houses 15x200 and nine feet to the iron gutter. He will grow carnations, sweet peas and chrysanthemums. Mr. Collatz has been foreman for Mr. Amling for the past eight years and is the fourth man to graduate into business for himself from that training school for good gardeners. They are all located within a stone's throw of Mr. Amling's place.

John Porte, who has for three years had charge of the Illinois Central's greenhouses at Champaign, has returned to his old position at the south parks.

Charles Heim, formerly of Heim Bros., but now in partnership with A. Jillson as the Blue Island Floral Co., reports a good season. The greenhouses are on Western avenue near One hundred and thirty-ninth street.

Carl Muno, who has been growing vegetables on Tuohy avenue, in Rogers Park, will put his six houses in carnations this fall. He is a brother-in-law of John Muno, who has had a very satisfactory season.

J. A. Budlong has been doing a big business all season and finds trade holding up well now. Phil Shoup, manager of the store, is well pleased with the quality of stock he is receiving and is looking forward to a big record for Memorial day.

Our business could run about as well without a boiler as without

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

In regard to advertising, during the past season we have received orders for carnation cuttings from as far east as New York, west to Denver and south to Texas, and the buyers said "Saw your adv. in the Review." It seems to us the Review covers the ground pretty thoroughly.

HEATING.

I have a greenhouse 25x100 feet, four feet of wall on one side and eight feet on the other, it being a lean-to and protected from the wind. The average temperature will be 50 degrees in the climate of western Pennsylvania. Which will be the cheapest way to heat, with hot water or steam? How many feet and what size of pipe would it take for each method? What size of boiler will be needed? Shall use soft coal, slack or gas. Can you tell me how many feet of gas it would take to maintain for twenty-four hours a temperature of 45 degrees when it is zero outdoors?

W. R. D.

To heat your house with hot water to 50 degrees it will require 610 square feet of radiation. To heat the same house to 50 degrees with steam under five pounds pressure requires 475 square feet of radiation.

To supply 610 square feet of radiation in 4-inch pipe it will require 518 lineal feet of pipe. To supply the same area of radiation in 2-inch pipe it will require 976 lineal feet of pipe. These are satisfactory sizes for hot water heating.

For steam under five pounds pressure the house can be heated with 475 square feet of radiation, for which 1¼-inch pipe can be used, which would require a 2-inch riser the length of the house and 725 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe to supply the radiation needed.

The boiler should in either case have a heating capacity for about 1,000 feet of radiation. A steam or return tubular boiler with 125 square feet of heating surface should be ample, either for steam or hot water.

It is impossible for me to give you an estimate on the gas consumption of such a plant in a run of twenty-four hours, but it may be of some assistance to you to know that 30,000 feet of gas are considered the equivalent of one ton of the best coal. With gas at 15 cents per thousand cubic feet, it is equal to coal at $4.50 per ton.

In regard to the economy of steam and hot water, I can only say that steam is less expensive to install and on a large system is cheaper to operate. On a small plant, one to three or four houses, hot water is undoubtedly most economical to operate. L. C. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business conditions have not materially changed since last report. The quantity of cut flowers disposed of last Saturday was greater even than at Easter, suprising as that may seem. The prices were very low, the average returns being close to the lowest quotation on ordinary grades. The feature of the market is the advent in quantity of outdoor sweet peas, many of the indoor being so bleached as to be unsalable. The buyers were quick to appreciate the high quality of these outdoor peas and they sell readily. Peonies are becoming more plentiful, especially the reds. By next week they are likely to be in midseason. Carnations are generally good for this season, though less plentiful. Colored varieties have been in fair demand, but it has been difficult to dispose of white at any price. Beauties are sold in immense quantities, the price for good flowers of the better grades holding fairly well, but this cannot be said of teas, for which the demand is limited. Greens continue to sell well. Bulbous flowers are over.

Another New Rose.

W. N. Leonard, of Lansdowne, has sent Samuel S. Pennock some blooms of a new rose, said to be a cross between Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Mme. Abel Chatenay. The flowers are of medium size and good substance, color a deep, almost rose, pink in the center shaded to soft pink on the outer petals, stems strong, of fair length and thorny, clothed with good foliage. Mr. Leonard believes that this rose will make a good summer bloomer, fully equal to Kaiserin. It should prove a welcome contrast to this popular favorite.

Girard College.

Last Saturday was founder's day, when all the alumni and their friends annually gather within the college walls. It is a busy time for the college workers, the forces under the able command of Edwin Lonsdale, having the decoration of the principal buildings, as well as all the preliminary planting, in readiness for that occasion, the beautifying of the sarcophagus of Stephen Girard being especially happy. One large specimen kentia overshadowed the marble statue of the founder. Behind it on the tomb was arranged a bed of Boston ferns, relieved by splendid fuchsias, many of them grown to standards. These plants have always been a favorite with Mr. Lonsdale. The varieties were the old standard sorts, those with single flowers being especially pretty. At the base of the statue was a handsome wreath tied with ribbons of the college colors, carmine and steel, sent by the alumni. In front was a bank of green relieved by a few nicely finished calceolarias.

The beds facing the main entrance were planted with pansies in solid colors, English daisies, Bellis perennis and tulips over earlier than usual this season. The pansies were Emperor William, purple; Yellow Prince, Lord Beaconsfield, purple with pale blue top; Meteor, brown, and a black-eyed white.

Among the plants used in decorating the building were four magnificent kentias, perfect specimens fully fifteen feet high, also a new calceolaria with spotted flowers, said to be an introduction of Frank Ibbotson's.

Various Notes.

I found M. Rice & Co.'s office and store fixtures removed from their present quarters to their new building, which they are fitting up very handsomely. They expect to move without interfering with the prompt shipment of orders.

John C. Gracey is tearing out the front of the Plender Co.'s store on Twenty-sixth street, near Girard avenue, with a view to improving its appearance and putting in a new show window.

Berger Bros. are receiving some fine Asparagus plumosus from Florida.

Wm. J. Muth states that the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co.'s shipping business has been excellent since Easter.

Paul Berkowitz's many friends throughout the country will find him hard at work getting out his commencement and wedding orders at 56 N. Fourth street, during his partner's absence in Europe.

Samuel Lilley, the popular distributor of Brides and Maids, favors the Review with the following anecdote: A prominent retailer asked a boy who had just brought in some flowers from one of the wholesale houses whether there were any iris at his place. "No," the boy replied, "We have three Englishmen and two Germans." "I asked you," the retailer said sternly, "whether you have any iris." "I told you," the boy reiterated, "that we have not. We have only three Englishmen and two Germans."

Mrs. John H. Clause, 1119 Roy street, has been successfully carrying on the business started by her late husband. She has a good stock of spring plants.

Charles Leisy states that his employer,

Stephen (not Stephen B.) Green, will build a 200-foot house at Magnolia, N. J., to be devoted to carnations.

Bowling.

The following matches have been played in the tournament for the bowling trophies on the Florists' Club's alleys. There are six teams of five men each. Each team will play one match of three games with every other team, fifteen games in all. Each game counts as one point. Two teams played each night as follows: May 3, 5, 8, 10, 12, 16, 17 and 19.

PHIL.

HIAWATHA, KAN.—J. W. Margrave lays claim to being the oldest man actively engaged in the florists' trade. He is 91 years of age. He has a ground bed of roses twelve years old which is at present giving a very satisfactory cut. He has a smilax bed which has not been reset in ten years and which is giving good strings.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The unseasonable weather of late has caused the local florists to buy cautiously, so a great deal of stock went to waste the past week at the wholesale houses, as all four were loaded to the top with all kinds of stock in all grades. In some cases the wholesaler would say, "Your price is mine."

The retailers about town to a man report that cut flower trade is dull. Transient trade has almost entirely disappeared and about the only work that is going on is for a few small weddings, commencements and the usual funerals. Next week comes Decoration day, but it amounts to little in St. Louis, so trade is not expected to improve to any great extent. The number of weddings booked for next month should improve business.

The stock the past week was of good quality. Beauties are becoming very small and pale. Meteors, Bridesmaids, Gates and Carnots are still in good color. These, including Brides, move slowly. Carnations are in great abundance in all varieties. Enchantress, Prosperity and Lawson are still fine. There is hardly any use to say anything regarding the price on any of the above, as almost in every sale job-lot prices prevail. Peonies are selling as low as $1.50 per hundred. Harrisii and callas are becoming somewhat scarce at this writing. Valley is very plentiful. Sweet peas are more than the demand can use. Fine cape jasmines are offered at 75 cents per hundred.

On Monday the market promises to be not so heavy, with better prices and demand.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was in town last week. He reports good trade in plants. Dr. A. S. Halstead, also of Belleville, president of the growers' club of this city, presided over the meeting of that body last Wednesday afternoon.

Max Herzog has sold his place to the Frisco R. R. to good advantage. After Max has disposed of his stock and glass he says he will take things easy for a while. Should a good opportunity present, he will re-enter the business.

John Kalisch, of Wm. Kalisch & Sons, will leave this week for a three months' trip west, spending a few weeks at Portland to see the Lewis and Clark exposition.

Fred H. Weber, on Boyle avenue, had two of his wagons smashed through carelessness of two big automobiles along Maryland avenue.

H. Loyet, who recently opened a store in King's highway, reports that he will soon open a branch on Olive street, near Broadway, somewhere between Fred Foster and Grimm & Gorley.

A prominent jewelry firm on Broadway had an order for a funeral design to give on Saturday and phoned to some twenty florists to call with photographs and make a bid for same. Ten of them came together at the same time. Such faces as were seen in that bunch will long be remembered. The value of the design was $75. We did not learn which bidder got the job.

trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden and valued at $25, will again be offered at this year's flower show and will be found among the Shaw premiums which amount to $500. The medal is offered for the best plant of decided merit for cultivation introduced to North American commerce by the exhibitor during the year in which the award is made. Numerous plants are introduced into the American trade each year which are worthy of the award of this medal. The St. Louis Florists' Club and the directors of the Missouri Botanical Garden are desirous of having a good competition for this medal. Any information regarding this award will be gladly furnished by Prof. Wm. Trelease, Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, Mo.

Frank M. Ellis has moved his residence from South St. Louis to the western part of the city.

Charles Kuehn has been receiving fine shipments of high grade carnations the past week. He also had a big week in supply orders. The wire department is busy with shipping orders.

Frank Ellis is handling some of the best sweet peas that come to this market, which find a ready sale for the fancy.

George Angermueller and Henry Berning are receiving a big lot of choice roses and carnations the past week, too many for the demand.

St. Louis Palm Co., on Olive street, is making a fine and attractive show in the window.

The Busch funeral this week made some good orders for designs. Ostertag Bros. had the family order and used a lot of fancy stock.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is in exactly the same condition as a week ago, there being a very slight improvement as usual on Saturday. There is an abundance of everything, low prices, good quality, and a stolid, resigned, patient acceptance of the unexpected and apparently inevitable, by the wholesale trade.

It is the retailers' and the street merchants' opportunity. Carnations and roses are sacrificed at times beyond all reason, but it is sacrifice or the receptive barrel. Peonies are arriving, fine stock, and before the week is over they will be everywhere.

Various Notes.

At the club June 12, peony night will bring the spring series of exhibitions to a splendid close. Strawberries will also be displayed on ladies' night and their merits to certificates voted on by the entire assembly. Any unique exhibit will be welcome. Write John Young, the secretary, for particulars and send any flowers you wish to represent you in his care.

Tickets for the club outing can now be had from President Traendly and it is absolutely necessary to know as soon as possible how many can be present. Next week the program of sports and particulars will be issued. The place is Glenwood, the boat the Isabel, and the date June 28.

Auctions will continue another month at least. They are well attended and prices lately have been quite satisfactory.

The convention at Washington is a topic for discussion these days. It is hard to find anyone who does not intend to go. The bowlers are requested to meet at Thum's alleys on Broadway for practice on Friday evenings until further notice. All who desire to compete for places on the team are expected to be present at 8 o'clock.

The sympathy of his many friends in the trade is extended Peter Duff, of Orange, N. J., in the loss of his little son from diphtheria.

Louis Dupuy goes to Holland, France, Belgium and England for his annual trip this week. His new erica is very interesting. He considers the dwarf Rambler a grand pot plant and has a fine lot of them and the blue hydrangea left for Decoration day.

Mr. Pankok, of Pankok & Schumacher, has been recuperating a couple of weeks in the country. Too much Easter trade. Importations from Europe of acacias had just arrived and were promising stuff for next Easter.

The Hinode folks were engaged in the interesting manufacture of miniature Japanese gardens when I called. With native artists and a stretch of the imagination it was not hard to imagine one's self in old Japan. An importation of 15,000 Japanese plants just received filled up one of the big greenhouses, some of them 200 years old and worth as high as $100 each. It is well worth a visit to Whitestone to see them. Several acres are devoted to nursery stock, sciadopitys, Japanese cherries, maples, azaleas and evergreens of every description. New houses are to be constructed this year.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, was in Buffalo last week attending the convention of the Knights and Ladies of Honor. Mrs. Schultheis is in the Catskills with her convalescing son. A fine importation of bays, palms and araucarias has just been housed here.

A visit to Tarrytown and Scarboro last week was made instructive by the courtesy of Mr. Pierson, whose love for his nursery department makes a journey through its acres most interesting. He is developing this branch of his business rapidly and finds the local demand sufficient to take almost all he can produce. There are thousands of Japanese maples in the three popular varieties and in all sizes. Some are worth $50 each. A great stock of the Colorado blue spruce is planted yearly. Over 1,000 hydrangeas in tubs await the annual call from the watering places. They are great value and some specimens bring $15 each. Rhododendrons, Azalea mollis and tree wistarias are especially beautiful now, in full flower and are magnificent specimens. The big house here will take care of 25,000 carnation plants next season. It has proved its value this year in the splendid young stock raised there and about half of it is now devoted to Daheim, Enchantress, Patten, Flamingo and White and Variegated Lawson, as good stock as reaches the New York market. Large kentias, ficus and specimen elegantissima find their home here. The house is so large, an ordinary greenhouse plant could find refuge within its enormous space. The demand for specimen plants of the new fern has exceeded expectations. The houses at Tarrytown are full of the young stock and Mr. Pierson is enthusiastic over the future which the fern promises. A fine large exhibit of the novelty will be made at Washington.

A. J. Fellouris has built a convenient office at his headquarters at 468 Sixth avenue. His new crop of ferns is large and of fine quality and his galax supply is already stored in sufficient quantity for the summer demand.

Cattleya gigas were worth $1 wholesale at Nugent's on Saturday.

Ditzenberger Bros., Seventy-fifth street and Fifth avenue, having sold their property, are now retiring from the florists' business. They have instructed John P. Cleary, the auctioneer, to dispose of their entire plant, consisting of nineteen greenhouses, pipes, boilers, houses, wagons, tools, implements, stock, etc., at public auction, Thursday, June 1. As everything is in first-class condition it will be a great opportunity for those desiring to secure any part of their complete equipment.

Cleary's Horticultural Hall will have a special auction sale on Monday for the convenience of its Decoration day customers. Everything offered will be in pots for immediate use.

J. M. Keller, of Bay Ridge, will retire from business June 1 and will go to Europe for a long stay. The business will be re-organized under the name of the J. M. Keller Co., and Mr. Keller's son-in-law, M. Jordan, and George Appel, for many years foreman of the establishment, will form the new company.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

A BIG CONCERN.

I notice that Mr. Hoo Hoo, of Pittsburg, thinks the Pittsburg weather ought to boom hail insurance. If Mr. Hoo Hoo sat at the secretary's desk, he would get a notion that hail insurance was booming all the time. Few appreciate that the Florists' Hail Association is getting to be one of the big co-operative organizations of the country.

PEORIA, ILL.

At an expense of more than $4,000 Chas. Loveridge is erecting four of the finest greenhouses in the city. The houses will be 25x150 feet and will accommodate four benches each. At the east end of these houses will be erected the office and under this will be the cellar for cut flowers. At the south side of the new house, at an expense of over $1,000, an entirely new boiler house will be installed. The combined steam of three large boilers will be employed in heating the thirteen houses. To cover these houses it will necessitate the use of 40,000 square feet of double-strength of glass. In hotbeds immediately back of the houses more than 6,000 pansies in bloom make one of the most pleasing of sights to the visitor. The wealth of varieties is truly marvelous. Twenty-five thousand carnation plants are out in the field.

Scotch heather is being propagated. But few florists in the west endeavor to grow this plant. A good business is now being done in spring stock.

COLDWATER, MICH.—Van Aken Bros. are starting a branch store at Mishawaka.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Ald. Bantz notified the board of aldermen May 16 that he will ask an appropriation for F. Schultz, who had the glass in his greenhouse on Dale street shattered by hail. The Eighth ward alderman said that Schultz cannot afford to stand the loss of $500. There was some question where the money is to come from and Mr. Bantz secured the promise of City Clerk Redington to see if there is anything left in the cyclone relief fund.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

SEEDS of many of the root crops that American seedsmen depend upon European growers to supply, are reported short.

THIS week's protest at the duty on canary seed was by Chas. Kessler, of San Francisco, but it was overruled like all others.

THERE are those among the seedsmen who look for low prices for onions this fall, because of large acreage, and who expect complaint of one kind or another from disappointed growers. Those who take this view have seen to it that trial plots of each lot of seed have been planted where they can watch results.

THE Michigan radish seed crop figures considerably in the trade now and it is expected that the plantings will be up to the average this year.

TOMATOES are being set out in increased quantities by the pickle men. Catsup and chili sauce, it appears, are in shorter supply than salted pickles.

KENTIA seeds, both Belmoreana and Forsteriana, are being offered in London at 10 shillings ($2.40) per thousand, and less for a quantity, for stock recommended as in extra fine condition.

As to the keeping quality of onion sets, it is stated by a pioneer grower that the condition of the weather at harvest time is the factor in the case and not the locality in which they may be grown.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin on the imported cabbage worm which will be of interest to seedsmen. It characterizes this as the worst of the many destructive enemies of the cabbage.

J. J. GRULLEMANS & SON, Lisse, Holland, write under date of May 6: "Bulbs, generally speaking, have suffered very much of the frost, and cold, rainy weather here. Especially in tulips there are many failures and they do not look up to much at present."

No up-to-date reports from the Indianapolis and Louisville onion set centers are at hand. Indirectly it is stated that the wet weather which has prevailed so generally did considerable damage to some of the fields. Previous reports were to the effect that the crops at both places were looking well.

THERE is always a difference of opinion as to the value of one section over another for the production of seed crops. It is natural for a grower operating at any given point to extol the advantages of his location. It should be borne in mind, however, that many things besides soil and artificial accessories are needed to produce crops.

REPORTS from California upon the coming onion seed crop are not encouraging. Percentages as low as twenty-five per cent of a crop are named by some of the growers. The reports cover all the standard varieties. An average of seventy-five per cent on the whole is thought to be all that can be expected at harvest from present prospects.

THE low-lying fields in the Chicago onion set district are very much hurt by the excessive rains spoken of in this column last week. The clay soil which usually produces excellent crops of sets is in bad shape; the cultivator fails to loosen it up and the plants have an appearance of going backward instead of forward. On the soil where sand is well intermixed with the black loam the situation is different, fields of this class showing up well, with a good healthy appearance of growth and a full stand.

THE pea fields of Wisconsin are doing well, according to latest reports.

The firm of Smith Bros., which does probably the largest seed business in South Africa, has lost two of its members within two months.

IT is now up to the Michigan farmer to get beans into the ground. From general reports the ground will be in good shape to start in on time.

SOME of the large pickle men are preparing ground for pickles that owing to unfavorable weather got beyond the time for an intended different crop.

SEEDSMEN'S PROGRAM.

The twenty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., June 20 to 22. The Crossman House has been secured for the exclusive use of the members. Elaborate arrangements for entertainment have been made and the following program of addresses is announced:

"Points of Interest at the Thousand Islands," by Major J. H. Durham, Cape Vincent, N. Y.; "Early History of the Seed Business," by Charles H. Breck, of Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston; "Increasing or Restricting Membership in the American Seed Trade Association," by Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons' Co., Cincinnati; "Seed Growing in California," by Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, Cal.; "The Science of Business Building," by R. U. Conger, New York City; "Methods of Advertising," by Wm. Henry Maule, Philadelphia; "Growing and Keeping Onion Sets," by C. F. Wood, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.; "Is the Vocation of Seed Dealing a Promising Field for Young Men?" by Mel. L. Webster, Independence, Ia.; "Good Seeds Which do Not Grow," by C. L. Allen, Floral Park, N. Y.; "New and Desirable Forage Plants," by C. V. Piper, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington; "Trials and Pleasures of the Seed Trade," by H. L. Holmes, of the Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa.; "The Modern Seed Catalogue," by M. B. Templin, of the Templin Co., Calla, O. The question box will be a new feature and will be employed in executive session. Secretary Kendel says he hopes it will bring out beneficial discussion of knotty business problems.

SEED GROWING IN COLORADO.

D. V. Burrell, Rocky Ford, Colo., writes as follows under date of May 17:

"In the REVIEW of May 11, I note a statement that a Nebraska seed firm which thought of going into Colorado with extensive vine seed operations, has abandoned the idea, also stating that they did not consider Colorado to be so safe for vine seed crops as Nebraska.

"Those who are familiar with Colorado, will readily understand that vine seeds cannot be grown without irrigation, and that the location of the land and the ditches under which the seed is grown, has everything to do with the crop. We have lands here under the old irrigating canals worth from $300 to $500 per acre, which produces almost every year abundant crops which reach the highest possible state of maturity. Only a short distance from this land, under ditches with poor water rights, the land is worth but a few dollars per acre, and the crops cannot be depended upon. We know where this seedsman planted his crops last year and that practically all were under the latter class.

"The following parties visited our fields last season and can tell you what kind of crops we grew: S. F. Willard, Ex-President of the American Seed Trade Association; Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co.; Mr. Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co.; Mr. Dungan, of Wm. Henry Maule; Mr. Coulter, of D. M. Ferry & Co., and Mr. Coulter, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., also many other seedsmen who expressed themselves as being highly pleased with our methods of growing seeds under irrigation.

"I am inclosing herewith a small sample of seeds of our own growing, and wish to call your attention to the weight of the germ. In comparing seeds grown here with those grown in other sections, we find a difference in squash seeds of twenty-five to thirty per cent in weight in favor of our growings.

"Our contract orders are very heavy this year, showing that our old customers have been well pleased with the results obtained here. The ground is in good working condition, water supply plentiful and present indications very favorable for a good crop the coming season.

"Under our best ditches, where we have water throughout the entire season whenever wanted, the plant is not allowed to want. With this condition, when the plant needs water it gets it, and when it does not need water it is kept away, while under the poor ditches, owing to the fact that we depend entirely on irrigation to grow crops, many times the plants suffer and cannot mature crops giving satisfactory results. This same condition will be met with to a greater or less extent in districts where the crops are grown without irrigation. If at the time the seed is filling the plant suffers for water, shriveled, light seed must result, and only under favorable seasons can seeds of good quality be expected."

HOLLAND BULB CROPS.

The following report on Holland bulb crops is from a correspondent of the Horticultural Trade Journal:

Whereas April opened with delightfully mild weather, the month all through, with the exception of one or two fine days, proved a very sad disappointment to all concerned. Where we had hyacinths in full bloom on the first day of April and had expected to find the bulk of bulb flowers to be over at the Easter holidays, the cold retarded the flowering season to such an unusual extent that many hyacinths were still in bloom at Easter, and the tulips would have been at their best if the hailstorms had not completely ruined the flowers, and even those that are still in bud state already show the disastrous results of the continued rain and wet, and very likely even the late or May-flowering tulips will not come out to perfection. Generally speaking, the whole of the flowering season has been a sad disappointment to us all. Spring shipments have now come to a close and have been most satisfactory, as no surplus stock has been left on the hands of any of the growers.

A man who had been sixteen years in the employ of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, hung himself in the firm's warehouse May 23.

We esteem the Review very highly for its Seed Trade News.—Binghamton Seed Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

CANNAS.

We started our cannas in sand and after they were well rooted cut the bulbs off enough so as to put them in 2½-inch pots. Will these make as large plants as if we had not cut them?

L. M. B.

The roots should be divided or cut up at the time you start them as dormant roots. If you did that and started them in sand they should need no more cutting and the smallest pot for them should be a 4-inch. If there is a good bunch of roots left on the old piece of root they will keep on growing all right, but next time cut the roots up into pieces three or four inches long, with one or two good eyes, and after they are started in sand and sphagnum moss pot them into 4-inch. W. S.

Marquette, Mich.—The Lutey Floral Co. has a new scheme for pushing the spring plant business. They print a coupon in the daily paper the presentation of which entitles the purchaser of a certain number of plants to a window box free.

FISCHER'S GRAND FREESIA PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem; a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Discount on 5000 and over.

BUFFALO.

The long continued dull and chilly weather has much retarded the flower garden business and it will make a dreadful crush when a few hot days do arrive. To show that we have need of caution in putting out our tender bedding plants, on the morning of May 20 we had four degrees of frost, but that did not harm the carnations, most of which were out about May 10.

There nas been an oversupply of flowers, but not alarming, and all we can save and scrape up will be wanted at Memorial day. As someone remarked last week, there was a time when flowers donated to the G. A. R. was the chief business, but now all classes remember departed friends and make it a day of commemoration. Plants as well as flowers are largely used for the occasion and again are we largely dependent on the weather. A fine, warm day means an immense business and a wet day means that the good folks stop at home and we are minus business never to be caught up. If a man wants a hat or a woman a new pair of gloves, if she cannot buy them Saturday she will get them Monday. Not so with the bunch of flowers. If the day is missed the sale is lost forever.

The department stores have started flower counters. One store began in earnest a month ago and we hear that three others are about to start, engaging managers, etc. This increased opposition may be felt by some more than others. It is not the slightest good for us to worry about it, for no law or power can prevent them. A department store has as much right to sell flowers as books, or hams, or tinware. In the cities where department stores have extensive flower departments, the retail florists do not seem to suffer. They sell to people who would scarcely ever enter a florist's store. Let us hope that what they find to be their influence in some western cities will be the case here, viz., that they spread the love and use of flowers among thousands who scarcely ever had the luxury of flowers on the table. I do not believe they will hurt and if they increase the use of flowers they must have helped the craft generally. The producer must be benefited. The use of flowers among the masses can yet be increased fivefold before it is as general as in the cities of western Europe. W. S.

HARMLESSNESS OF ARSENICALS.

A bulletin of the Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, says that "Chemical analysis has shown that cabbage which has been dusted or sprayed with an arsenical and then prepared for cooking in the usual manner a week later, has not even a trace of arsenic remaining. The use of arsenicals against cabbage worms is almost universal in the United States, although growers are sometimes loath to acknowledge the fact for fear of the loss of customers who are not fully acquainted with the harmlessness of the remedy. There are no authentic recorded instances known to the writer of poisoning from the consumption of cabbage treated with an arsenical. According to Gillette, twenty-eight cabbage heads dusted in the ordinary way, would have to be eaten by a human being at one meal in order to produce poisonous effects. Still it is preferable, in order to avoid all danger, to use other insecticides in the case of vegetables that are to be eaten soon. Under this head it might be well to cite the experience of a Virginia market gardener who dusted his cabbages with Paris green and flour, omitting to inform his family of the fact. A day or two later he ate heartily of this cabbage, as did others, and afterwards was questioned by his wife in regard to the peculiar powdery substance on the heads. Although poisoning was anticipated, no ill results followed."

THE WITTBOLD SPRINKLER.

The growers are interested in the mechanical watering and syringing device with which the George Wittbold greenhouses at Chicago have been equipped and which has been patented in the name of Louis Wittbold, its inventor. It consists of ½-inch pipe strung wherever desired and fitted with nozzles which make a continuous sheet of water with a pressure of only ten pounds. A swivel handle permits the stream to be directed wherever desired. Chas. Heim, of Blue Island, says: "I have bought an outfit which I shall install in my rose houses. My opinion, from seeing the device working at Wittbold's, is that it is just what roses need. It not only saves labor but it enables you to water more than once a day if needed, which you might not have time to do if you used the hose. It waters evenly and forces the roses from underneath, which is sure to catch the red spider and keep your stock nice and clean."

PINK VALLEY.

Mr. Walls, an old-time florist, has a bed 5x15 feet of lily of the valley full of pink bloom. No one who has seen it has ever seen its like, and Mr. Walls would like to know if he has something new. J. J. B.

We have heard of pink blossoms of this beautiful little flower for a good many years, but never have heard of its being grown as a commercial flower, and do not think we ever will, because white is its natural and proper color. We think the convallaria occasionally comes pinkish, but not a desirable pink, and that it may occur by some influence of the soil. If by selecting the best colored flowers you could get a pink, say such as a good Bridesmaid rose, there may be a place for it, but the natural color of purity of the flower, with its beautiful leaves, makes it the dainty favorite it is with all. Pink valley has been known for years, but only as a freak and would only be valued by people who pretend to admire the abnormal; sort of twisted minds. W. S.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E W Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14-17, 1905.

THE end of the season sees little material for the annual bonfires.

JACKSON BROS. are starting in the nursery business at Sigourney, Ia.

THE demand for hardy Japanese nursery stock is steadily on the increase.

THE report is of a very successful season for nurserymen on the Pacific coast.

PACIFIC coast nurserymen are sending small quantities of stock to Hawaii.

THE Jonathan apple is a popular variety in Australia and the nurserymen there are offering large blocks of it.

THE United States Nursery Co., now has upwards of 200 acres of roses, beside shrubs and some herbaceous stock at Rich, Miss.

THE forthcoming Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture will contain a paper entitled "Promising New Fruits," by Wm. A. Taylor.

OF all the conifers there is none more popular than the Colorado blue spruce, and the Koster variety is very generally grown. It has been in large demand this season.

THE consensus of opinion seems to be that the nurseryman who neglects to subsoil where he has stiff soil is failing to get the best possible root system on his stock.

HARLAN P. KELSEY, for the program committee, announces that Assistant Secretary Willet M. Hays, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., has consented to be at the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14 to 16, and will talk on plant breeding. Mr. Kelsey feels that his presence will materially increase the interest of the meeting and trusts the attention of all the nurserymen will be called to the matter and others interested largely in fruit growing. It is expected Mr. Hays will speak Thursday evening, June 15, at 7.45 p. m.

THE Wm. H. Moon Co. reports that this season will probably total the largest sales in the history of the business, without any abnormal features.

A HARDY Japanese evergreen which makes a beautiful specimen on a lawn is Sciadopitys verticillata. It is of compact conical form. There is a variegated variety.

THE nurserymen in southern Indiana are getting ready to entertain company next month. Only once before in its twenty-eight years has the national association met in that state.

THE SEASON'S BUSINESS.

The following summaries of the season's nursery trade have been received from well known firms:

T. S. HUBBARD CO., Fredonia, N. Y.—Our business has been very satisfactory and in every line we handle we are cleaned up on almost everything. We do not recall any unusual feature in the trade the past season, except perhaps the fact that it continued later than usual, owing probably to the cool, backward spring.

P. J. BERCKMANS CO., Augusta, Ga.—The nursery business for the past season has been unusually heavy. The demand for the commercial varieties of peach trees was extremely heavy. Notwithstanding the immense area in the south now planted in commercial orchards, the planting does not seem to be decreasing. Already there is a great demand for peach trees for fall planting. An unusual and most healthful feature is the growing demand for hardy ornamental trees and plants. The desire for beautiful grounds is becoming very contagious, and we have a large number of landscape contracts on hand. The planting of nursery stock is far in excess of that of previous years.

PACIFIC COAST.

FRESNO, CAL.

The season just ended has been one of the most successful for many years in this locality. The nurserymen have all made a complete cleaning-up of stock at prices which were favorable. Some of our leading firms are already booking orders for next season's delivery, indicating a heavy run on standard varieties of fruit trees and vines.

A visit to the plant and propagating department of S. W. Marshall & Son will show that the firm, while busy filling orders and handling the season's business, has also been keeping pace with the progress of the times by rebuilding the old greenhouses and erecting new ones constructed along the most modern lines. They now have the most complete propagating plant on the Pacific coast. Ash.

LOS ANGELES.

The recent flower show in Masonic hall, under the direction of P. D. Barnhart, was so successful that there is a probability that it will be an annual feature in the future. There was a large variety of stock shown but only a few of the possible exhibitors were represented. Among the trade exhibitors were the Germain Seed Co., the Pacific Nursery Co., Sycamore Grove Nursery, Howard & Smith, Theodore Payne, Figueroa Nursery, John Getz, Rees & Compere, Mrs. Meserve, Etheline Lord, W. S. Way and Mrs. Nefroney. A number of gardeners for private places were exhibitors. Among them were John Reeves, gardener for Eben Smith; Arthur Brown, gardener for Walter Newhall; Pierre Maquel, gardener for Homer Laughlin; Mr. Banks, gardener at the Girls' Collegiate School; Gus Peterson, gardener at Singleton Court, and Edmund Burke. The show lasted two days, closing May 13, and attracted a very large number of visitors.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been quite a spurt of funeral orders for the past week and white stock of all kinds has been used up in consequence. Outside of this there is little doing, although some of the florists have a good many orders booked for Decoration day for out of town shipments. But the weather has been so favorable throughout the interior of the state this season that I am under the impression that less shipping than usual will be in order for Decoration day. Flowers of all kinds are very plentiful and cheap. Roses and carnations, unless they are extra good, can be had at any price and only the finest stock is in demand at all.

Various Notes.

G. W. Simmons, of Elmhurst, has laid the foundation for another 150-foot rose house.

Mrs. C. H. Stegman, mother of H. H. Stegman, for many years foreman of Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, died May 15, aged 49 years.

Haywards, Cal., expects to be the site of one of the University Horticultural Experimental Gardens shortly to be established.

The California State Floral Society met last Friday and made plans for the exhibits to be held during 1905 and 1906.

Domoto Bros. have advertised their Central avenue nursery for sale. They will concentrate all their business at their Elmhurst nurseries.

Serril Winsor, the flower pot man, is installing a new pot making machine in his pottery in Oakland. G.

FUTURE OF PLANT GROWING.

For some unaccountable reason the majority of the smaller nurseries in the neighborhood of the larger cities in California are giving up the growing of pot plants and general nursery stock and confining their energies to the cut flower trade. The general opinion seems to be that more money is to be made, and with much quicker returns, from a few houses filled with carnations, roses or lilies, than from the same space devoted to shrubs, palms, hardy ornamental trees, etc. As a consequence the plant growing of this coast is gradually passing into the hands of a few large nurseries and, as there is no decrease in the demand for well grown stock, it seems to me a mistake for the small growers, many of whom had reputations established for the growing and handling of certain lines of stock, to allow this most profitable branch of our business to slip from them.

The demand for nursery stock of all kinds is greater now than ever in this constantly growing state, and, judging by the imports from the eastern nurseries and Europe, our local men cannot come anywhere near filling the coast orders. With the majority of hardy ornamental trees and shrubs it takes several years to grow a salable stock and this fact deters many who are now in the flower growing business, but there is an ever increasing demand for well grown stock and the growers who can see a few years ahead are bound to strike it right if they devote their time to the general plant growing, and particularly if they specialize along any of the dozen or two lines which could be easily named. G.

WILD FLOWERS.

It is surprising what a vast quantity of native wild flowers are used by the florists in and around San Francisco, and the quantity keeps increasing year by year. It is only a few years ago that such stock was called "rubbish" by the larger retail firms and they would not handle it at all. But the taste for wild blooms has been cultivated to a considerable extent and now all the dealers use them. The season lasts usually about two months, generally commencing in the middle of March. They are gathered in our nearby hills and valleys and as they are not usually good keepers they have to be handled as carefully as any other kind of flowers.

The first in importance is the California poppy, Eschscholtzia Californica. Hundreds of bunches are picked and marketed daily from our surrounding country. The fact that it is the emblematic flower of California has much to do with its popularity. Yellow cream cups, Platystemon Californicus, are in great favor with the public at this time. The yellow and blue lupine, Lupinus arboreus, is also much liked. The Brodiæa volubilis, or twining hyacinth, is a showy purple bunch of small flowers. They are easily kept for a week in water. The western goldenrod is not in bloom

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Carnation Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper: flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

until the end of summer. Trillium Californicum makes a good flower and stem for decorative purposes. The tidy tips, Layia platyglossa, are very showy and are handled extensively.

There are several other varieties of wild flowers used but the above are those of most value and it is surprising what an enormous number are handled by the local retailers. G.

PLANTING OUT.

Unless in the warmer states, it is unsafe to trust tender plants, such as tomatoes, egg plants and peppers, to the vicissitudes of the weather much before the first of June. We often see them planted earlier than this, but they make only slow progress until settled warm weather comes, so that there is nothing gained and always more or less danger of the plants being injured by frost.

As before advised in this column, the plants should be gradually hardened off before setting out. If this is properly attended to they will be all the better able to withstand an occasional cold night without check or danger of injury, unless actual frost occurs. Should the weather prove very dry, just after planting, water should be given, if possible, to assist the plants in getting a hold. This is often a matter of considerable trouble and expense where large fields are planted or where water is not convenient. Nevertheless the quicker returns and larger yield which the plants will give can be depended on to defray a little extra outlay, compared with what they would do if they were severely checked by excessive dryness.

Peppers are the easiest grown and easiest taken care of, requiring no training and seldom being troubled with insect pests. Once they have taken a good hold all they require for the rest of the season is cultivation to keep them free from weeds.

Egg plants, on the other hand, need pretty close watching to avert or check the attacks of potato bugs, to which they are very subject. We have found dusting with slug shot about the easiest and best remedy.

Tomato plants require considerable attention in regard to pinching and training, though fortunately they are not very liable to the attacks of insects. In large fields it is hardly practicable to train the plants to trellises, but where a limited number are grown, or in the home garden patch, trellises are certainly very advantageous. In the first place, it is easier to regulate the growth of the plants. The fruit sets better, matures more quickly and ripens much more evenly, besides, being up off the soil, they are always cleaner. Of course, it must be decided before setting out the plants whether they are to be trained or not and just what form of trellis is to be used, so that the plants can be set at the proper distance to suit. Where trellises are used it is much better to have them set in position before setting out the plants.

TROUBLES OF A GROWER.

I would like to hear from the growers the best method to keep the night fireman awake. Being a vegetable grower, I do not have the potting to do that florists have. I do not have trouble in zero weather but when less firing is needed and there is longer between, then is where the firemen take naps and let the temperature run down and chill the cucumbers. I have thirteen large houses and two steam boilers. It means a great loss if the temperature runs down. They say hire competent help! How do you know? I have had what I supposed were reliable men and was deceived and have come to the conclusion to put in a system that they cannot go to sleep and neglect their duty without my knowing it.

P.

LETTUCE HOUSE.

What should a lettuce house cost 20x 200 feet, complete with hot water heating apparatus and boiler house, say 20x 20 feet? Is there any way of telling the value of two crops of lettuce raised in such a house? J. M.

There is no way to build a lettuce house cheaper than any other house. If you use cheap lumber, cheap posts and single-thick glass you are going to have a continual patching and mending, and the heating, although you do not need so much of it, must be put up in the best style and with the most economical heater you can buy. The more substantially you build, in ten years it will be cheapest. Much will depend upon how practical you yourself are at building. If you know all about how to put together a house and can hustle through the piping you can assuredly save a good deal; that is, if you are not neglecting other important work. With all these "ifs" and repeating that material must be of the best, you might build, and heat such a structure, 20x200, for $1,800 to $2,000. W. S.

NARCISSUS BULBS.

Are the bulbs of Paper White narcissus worth saving for flowering a second time? L. M. B.

Certainly they are not. They are always forced early and you could not afford to keep them on the benches and give them the treatment that would prepare them to flower another year. They are also very inexpensive. We do not think it practical or advisable in any way and must say decidedly, do not attempt it for one minute. W. S.

LAPAGERIA.

Will you kindly give me a description of the climbing plant lapageria and its botanical name? S. L.

The lapageria is a half-hardy evergreen climber allied to the smilaxes. L. rosea is the only species. The common name is Chilean bellflower. The acuminate leaves are produced alternately. The bell-shaped flowers are large and showy, borne in the upper axils. The flowers of the species are rose colored, but there are white and several named horticultural varieties. It is a suitable plant for walls or rafters in a cool house or for outdoors in the milder parts of the country. It is not of easy culture, but Prof. Bailey says it is worth a wider use in America.

LIFTING HYACINTHS.

A correspondent writes: "Tell us through the Review the cause of hyacinths dropping their flowers after being brought into the house. I lost fully one-half of my hyacinths. The flower spike pulled out before opening the flowers. Is it a disease or bad management?"

We have in some seasons lost a good many, but this year not over a dozen out of 2,000. It nearly always occurs with the early forced plants, when the bud is small and low down among the leaves. We do not think it is any fault of the bulbs, as there is no sign of disease above or below where the stem separates. The buds sit there surrounded with leaves, looking perfect until you lift and find that it is entirely severed immediately below the flower. Our own solution (and this may be wrong) is that the leaves clasping the bud tightly shoot up quicker than the flower and with strength sufficient to break it off. W. S.

A FLORAL CARPET.

I intend to make a floral carpet and I would like some florist to please give instructions how to build the frame and give the width of same. W. D.

At first I was under the impression that what is known as a carpet bed was meant, but it seems that a design in cut flowers is intended and to be the design of a carpet. If not more than four or five feet square a frame of ½-inch boards with a 2-inch or 3-inch edging would do, but there should be two 6-inch boards running across the frame to stiffen it. This frame or box could be filled with sand and covered with ferns and the edges painted green. If the design is larger, then the simplest way would be to put down strips 1-inch to 3-inch and fastened securely and then fill in with sand and cover with ferns. This would necessitate the design being made on the sod. If six feet or over a plan of the design should be drawn to a scale, say one foot in six feet, and if the design was correctly drawn it would be simple to work it out full size. W. S.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

Business looks very much as though the season were nearing an end. Roses of all kinds are becoming small and have practically no value. Prices range up to $4 per hundred for the best, although quantities can be bought for as low as $3 per thousand. Carnations are holding up fairly well and sell at $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are fine, that is, outdoor stock, but if warm weather continues the season for them will be very short, as all outdoor stock is suffering for want of rain. From indications all stock will be scarce for Decoration day. Peonies are at present in full glory and moving fairly well at $1 per dozen or $6 per hundred.

Bedding plants of good quality seem to be very scarce, hence in demand. Quite a number of the new Baby Ramblers have been offered to the trade in two-year-old sizes and in fine shape, but they do not seem to take at the price asked, $1 each.

Various Notes.

The various committees for the coming convention are beginning to do active work. The chairman of finance, J. R. Freeman, has let the contract for the souvenir book. From the proofs it promises to be the most handsome book ever distributed at an S. A. F. meeting. The engravings to be used are of public buildings and surroundings of Washington, as well as the historical places around Alexandria and Mt. Vernon.

On account of the busy season bowling has been practically forgotten. The chairman, Capt. Ernest, has called his team together for work this week. No doubt the boys need practice and lots of it. F. H. Kramer, in charge of the ladies' team, started out with two in line at the Palace alleys. With the assistance of Capt. Ernest it required lots of coaxing to get them even to go to the alleys, but the result was not bad. For the first few throws balls went in every direction. The results of the first three games were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Mrs. Oliver	37	60	47
Miss Beatrice Smith	31	48	76

The next practice game will no doubt draw out a fair attendance. The prizes for the ladies promise to be numerous and valuable. The $50 donated by F. H. Kramer will very likely go to the ladies. H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, has also helped the ladies out considerably by donating $40. The alleys that have been secured for the ladies are by far the finest in the city. Six alleys on each floor, twelve alleys in all, with no liquor served in the building. The secretary of the ladies' bowling committee would like the names of every lady or ladies' club that will take part in the game. Kindly communicate with Miss Beatrice Smith, 916 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., for particulars of any kind.

At this week's session the lady bowlers made the following score:

Mrs. Oliver	37	47	61
Annie Kramer	41	41	69
Beatrice Smith	31	69	82
Miss Munder	47	69	70

Albert Esch has been added to the committee on ladies' bowling. The prizes for the ladies are to date: F. H. Kramer, $50; H. F. Michell Co., $40; Albert Esch, $25; F. W. Bolgiano, gold medal; C. J. Speelmans & Sons, gold medal.

Robert McClennen, of our bowling club, will leave June 1 for a two months' stay in Scotland.

The scores made at the latest men's meeting are as follows:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th
Cooke	207	149	105	173
McClennen	168	156	130

Ernest	159	159	136	191
Simmonda	190	152	135
Esch	114	143	155
Kramer	84	157	122

Supt. Cook has been very busy receiving applications for space in the exhibition hall.

Recent visitors: Fred Michell, of H. F. Michell Co., and S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, and quite a few nurserymen from Holland. F. H. K.

Port Allegany, Pa.—Louis Reuter has resigned the management of the Port Allegany greenhouses and will remove to Philadelphia, where he has leased an establishment at Sixtieth street and Gibson avenue, taking possession June 1.

EVERYTHING POTTED FOR IMMEDIATE USE

THE TRAVELING FLORIST.

There are those among florists located in small cities, with other neighboring towns where there are no greenhouses, who find it an exceptionally good source of business to travel about with stocks of spring plants, spending a day or two in each town and advertising their presence in advance. Where there is a weekly newspaper in the town it is desirable to publish a small advertisement giving the temporary location, the dates of sale and mentioning some items of stock and prices. Where there is no newspaper to be used it is worth while to send a good boy three or four days in advance to distribute handbills. Then take a wagonload of plants, or more if experience shows it to be desirable, and a good business can be done at this season. Moreover, every sale made serves to advertise the regular business at its permanent location and those florists who each year visit a number of the surrounding towns are the ones who have a regular mail or telephone trade from those towns. It is worth while working up.

A PERMANENT PLACE.

The Auburn State Prison, Auburn, N. Y., has a fine greenhouse. It is in charge of a Buffalo life prisoner, Fritz Katoll, who was a professional florist before he went there, and is now a model prisoner and trusty. The grounds are fine and the warden's table and the hospital are kept well supplied with flowers.

I GET much pleasure and profit out of the REVIEW every week.—FRED HATCH, Scranton, Pa.

MILWAUKEE.

At a special meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club last week it was voted to hold a chrysanthemum and flower show this fall. A fund of $500 will be donated by the club toward premiums and a guarantee fund of $1,000 is assured by the members. The committee on arrangements consists of Charles B. Whitnall, W. A. Kennedy and Robert Zepnick and the committee on premiums of C. C. Pollworth, Chris Valon and Alexander Klokner.

Unfavorable weather is preventing any outdook work and demand for bedding stock is considerably behind last season's orders.

The cut flower market is quiet. There is an abundance of stock and at the numerous Greek stands carnations are retailed below a respectable wholesale figure.

The unfavorable weather delayed orders for bedding stock until almost the last moment and rush orders have been coming in heavily the past few days. C. C. Pollworth Co. has about ten houses devoted to this class of stock, which is a busy department just now. A large shipment of palms from Belgium also came in last week. Their stock of roses at the new range is in excellent condition.

Peonies are somewhat retarded and will not be in bloom in this vicinity for Memorial day, but the outlook is bright for lilacs, tulips and valley.

Several large funerals last week kept the market active and shipping trade consumed a large portion of the stock.

Kapsalis & Georgiades have opened a new stand next to the largest department store in the city and if location counts for anything they ought to do a big business. This makes three Greek stands now in a radius of two blocks.

INCOG.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held a very well attended meeting on May 19, with President Hale in the chair. The discussion of the evening was "Chrysanthemum Culture." H. A. Griffiths, the first prize winner, was presented by Mr. Hale with a beautiful silver cup. The second prize winner, Joseph Kennedy, received the society's certificate.

Wm. Turner exhibited a fine bunch of Black Hamburg grapes, with fine color, and weighing three and three-quarters pounds. They scored ninety-eight points.

The premium list for the eighth annual exhibition at Redbank November 1 and 2 has been issued. B.

The Market.

Very little can be said as to the condition of the market here, as bedding plant trade has taken the place of cut flowers to a great extent. Some of the stores have done a large business, while some report business as light.

Cemetery plants are in demand and move briskly, and some of the houses look bare. A visit among the growers shows business as very good, and all with whom I have talked are well satisfied with the season's work.

Most of the stores are stocking up preparatory to the Memorial day trade. The month of June promises to be a very busy one, as there are an unusual number of weddings to be decorated for.

Various Notes.

W. L. Rock's place on Walnut street is very attractive and his force seems to be always busy.

S. Murray, with an increased business, finds time to look after his part in the flower show and is doing all he can to make it a success.

W. J. Barnes' houses look as though something had happened. A few weeks ago they were full to overflowing and now they are almost empty.

A. F. Barbe has his hands full these days, with remodeling his home and filling his orders.

Lawrence Schwager is doing quite a business at his Grand avenue store.

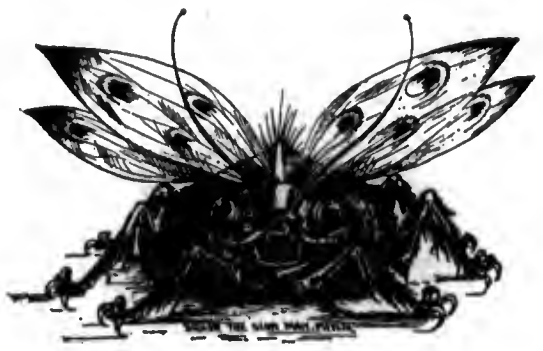
Geo. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, is doing an immense business these days in the wholesale line.

Miss J. Murray reports business as very satisfactory, and is putting in a large stock to take care of her Memorial day business.

Harvey Floral Co. had an opening reception last Saturday and did quite a business. Mrs. Harvey is sanguine of developing a large trade.

The Alpha Floral Co. has installed a new refrigerator in the window, making it easier to handle stock. NARCISSUS.

YORKVILLE, N. Y.—Geo. H. Benedict is doing a big business in lawn and cemetery vases. He has a handsome new wagon on the road.



DETROIT.—The Morehead Mfg. Co. has taken over the business formerly conducted by John Morehead. The increased demand for the Morehead steam-trap, which is now so largely used in greenhouses, made additional facilities necessary. Mr. Morehead continues as vice-president and manager of the new corporation.

THE BEE IS LIKE

The Prosperous Florist,

NEVER IDLE.

The bee is the first that takes advantage of the great work Godfrey Aschmann, the never-resting florist, and his people have done since Easter. They are swarming and enjoying their life. "O, Aschmann's flowers taste so sweet," the bees say; "we cannot stop, we have a big field to work in. 100,000 of the choicest plants; every nook and corner full. Let us harvest."

Secure bargains now and for Decoration Day. Please note our lowest prices. Plants out of 4-inch pots at $7.00 per 100 in the following varieties:

Geraniums, S. A. Nutt, the best double crimson; La Favorite, the best double white; Mme. Thibaut, double pink, and some other mixed colors.

Ageratum, dwarf blue. Heliotropes, Begonia Vernon, 5,000 of the dark red, and Erfordii, pink, 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Scarlet Sage Clara Bedman, 3-inch, $5.00. Periwinkle, or Vinca variegata, $10.00 per 100; 2½ to 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Nasturtiums, all colors. Cobaea Scandens, $8.00 per 100. Fuchsias, 5-inch, $1.50 per dozen.

Dracaena Indivisa, broad leaved, imported, 30-inches high; 50 per cent home grown, 5 to 5½-inch pots, 25c each.

Hydrangea Otaksa for planting out; some have buds and some not, 6-inch pots, 25c to 35c each.

The following is a list of small plants out of 2½-inch pots.

Coleus, Golden Queen, Verschaffeltii, Queen Victoria and fancies. Petunia Inimitable Dwarf, California Giant, all in 3-inch, at $5.00 per 100. Phlox Drummondii; Verbenas; have 10,000 Sweet Alyssum Little Gem; Lobelia, dwarf and trailing; Cuphea; Parlor Ivy.

I also have a new Variegated Carnation to which I have not yet given a name. Vigorous growth, heavy stems. The odor is like a real clove. Everybody who has seen it is crazy over it. 3-inch pots at 15c and 2½-inch, 10c each.

Don't forget that I am the Moonvine grower of the land. Only A. W. Smith's Hybrid Moonvines, (Ipomaea Noctiflora) is exclusively the one I grow and is the only true Moonvine in America, as Mr. Smith has the world wide reputation of growing the best Moonvine seed. Please bear in mind that this is no morning glory like so many sell for Moonvines but the pure white waxy moon flowers as large as saucers. 2½-inch pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $7.00 per 100; 4-inch pots, $10.00 per 100. Nicely staked up.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Rain, rain, more rain and colder was the bill of fare from Sunday until Saturday of last week, with hail in some of the near-by localities on Wednesday. This had the effect of shortening up the cut of roses, and lilies seemed to be getting scarcer the past few days. Violets have disappeared altogether. Carnations are still very much in evidence. Some of the street-stands sold them as low as 15 cents per dozen. But taken altogether the general business was better than the week previous.

Various Notes.

Lincoln I. Neff made two floral blankets the past week; one of them containing about 4,000 pink roses, the other about the same number of white roses.

Wm. Thompson, who had been employed by B. L. Elliott, at the Cheswick greenhouses and remained in the employ of L. I. Neff when he purchased them, was killed in a sand bank last Wednesday. He had finished loading his wagon and it is presumed got out of the sudden storm when the bank caved in on him. He was dead when found.

The home of Miss Geib, stenographer of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., was visited by thieves one day last week. She lost a small sum of money.

The frost which is usually due about this time arrived last Saturday night and in the low sections finished the beans, tomatoes, and any other soft stuff above ground.

J. J. Zimmerman, who was drowned at Ocean Park, Cal., was buried from Lowries Chapel, Allegheny, Monday, May 20.

The plantsmen are having more than their share of trouble. Two weeks of continuous rain kept them from getting anything done outside, and as everyone wants planting done by Decoration day, they are working day and night now that the weather has changed.

The Market.

There has been a decided change in the general outlook of business since my last report. The rain has stopped. The supply of stock is fast shortening and at the time of writing there is a scarcity in all lines. The quality of stock that is to be had is pretty poor, especially so with roses. Most of the Beauties and Maids are very small and many have mildew. Carnations are in better shape. Some fine fancies are still to be had.

The demand is all that could be desired. With the prospect of June weddings and the commencements that are now upon us the outlook is first-class. The only drawback will be the scarcity of flowers. Peonies are coming in larger lots from home growers and sell well. Eastern ferns are beginning to play out, but what are left are good. Smilax is scarce. There is plenty of asparagus.

Various Notes.

Out of the last nineteen days fifteen have brought rain and nearly always heavy. This made the work of those florists who do bedding, very hard and all fell behind on orders. Things are good now and they will be hard at work this week.

J. W. Rodgers was busy with several wedding decorations the past week.

Window and porch boxes are quite the thing this year and help out the florists.

Mr. Wilson, formerly of the firm of Corbett & Wilson, of this city, recently bought out the greenhouses of Walter Butler, of Chillicothe, O., but has now sold the business back to Mr. Butler, who will go on with it.

The recent hard rains did considerable damage to our city parks. In several places the driveways were almost completely washed away. Nevertheless our parks are in fine shape. Those near the center of the city are fresh and green and the groups of palms add greatly to the general effect. Fountain Square, which is well known throughout the country, has been greatly beautified by two large circular beds of large palms at each end. The relief that these beds give to the dull stones which cover the rest of the square is very refreshing.

H. M. Altick, of Dayton, came down on an excursion to the Zoological Gardens. He had five children (not all his own) with him and was in for a good time.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was also a caller.

C. J. Oehmer.

HUNT'S
Cypress Plant and Tree Tub

Our plant and tree tub is made from the everlasting cypress with which all up-to-date florists are familiar. The merits of this tub are wholly commensurate with the demand for an article which is light, neat and durable. They are made in various sizes. Painted green, or natural wood finish, as preferred. Castings japanned. The feet and bolts for same are packed inside tub to facilitate nesting.

SCOTTII!

Makes three times as many fronds as any other Nephrolepis.

THE only new NEPHROLEPIS that has really become popular as a commercial fern since the introduction of the Boston. Large and small growers everywhere are planting it in preference to any other Nephrolepis. A year's trial has demonstrated that it is the hardiest, most graceful and symmetrical Nephrolepis known. Unexcelled as a house plant; first choice of the retail florist and also of his customers. The New York and Philadelphia retail store men buy no other fern when Scottii is available. Has fully justified the high opinion formed of it by the judges who awarded it the following long list of prizes:

SILVER MEDALS:

Philadelphia, Pa.
New York Florists' Club.
Boston. Newport, R. I.
American Institute, New York.
S. A. F., St. Louis.

GOLD MEDALS:

New Orleans,
St. Louis, (Shaw).
World's Fair.

Highest Award at Chicago, Ottawa and Toronto

First-class Certificates and Testimonials from all over the country too numerous to mention.

The Committee of Awards at the St. Louis World's Fair said of Nephrolepis Scottii: "A sturdy, dwarf and compact form of Nephrolepis, very symmetrical and handsome, either in small plants or quite large ones. A great acquisition, with excellent qualities as a house plant. Worthy of Gold Medal."

READ CAREFULLY THE BEST REPORT EVER GIVEN BY THE NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB FOR A NEW PLANT.

The committee of award of the club visited the establishment of John Scott, of Flatbush, N. Y., on October 26, for the purpose of inspecting the stock of his new fern, NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII. Seven members of the committee attended, also the president and vice-president of the club. The initial exhibit of this fern was made at the rooms of the club at the November meeting, 1903. The committee which examined it at that time was so favorably impressed by it that they unhesitatingly awarded it a certificate of merit, and did not ask to see it growing; a request to examine the stock was only recently sent to the club by the exhibitor. The committee made a thorough examination of the stock, both in pots and on the bench, and its character. It was growing in all sizes from plants in 4-inch pots up to specimen plants in tubs, and it was absolutely uniform, and they were highly pleased at its condition from in all grades, the characteristics of the large specimen plants being evident in the smallest specimens on the place. The most careful scrutiny failed to discover any tendency whatsoever toward reversion, and it seems as if the character of the plant is absolutely and indelibly fixed. It is in essence a condensed form of the Boston fern, with valuable characteristics added, which are not evident in the parent. Your committee took an average plant in an 8-inch pot and found by actual count that there were 200 fronds in it, not counting the undeveloped and small ones which were in the center of the plant. The fronds of the plant in question averaged about 20 inches in length and three inches in width at the widest point; the pinnae are very closely set, so that they overlap, making a more finished frond than the parent. The plant in question had a spread of three feet. Plants in 4-inch pots showed a spread of 18 inches and a height of 10 to 12 inches.

The committee was unanimously of the opinion that it is a most valuable introduction, and that it will become a plant for the florists to grow universally. It has a crispness and hardness about it which is superior to the parent, and which is one of its very valuable characteristics. It propagates very freely, and because of the fact that its character is established in the smallest size, it should find ready sale in all grades. After a thorough examination, your committee unanimously agreed that it was worthy of the highest award by the club, and therefore voted that it be awarded the silver medal of the club, and herewith recommend same for your approval.

(Signed) PATRICK O'MARA, JOHN BIRNIE, ALFRED H. LANGJAHR, WM. H. SIEBRECHT, CHAS. LENKER, JOHN DOWSETT.

SCOTTII has received the highest awards whenever exhibited and for the past year has proven itself to be a hardier house plant than the Boston. There is no comparison between this fern and any other variety for commercial use.

Consult any grower, or retailer, who has bought Scottii, and he will tell you that it is as far ahead of the Boston as the Boston is ahead of all other introductions.

I sell plants, not apologies for plants. When you order of me you can rest satisfied that YOUR ORDER WILL BE FILLED.

PRICES OF NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII—2¼-inch, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $125.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate; 250 at 1000 rate.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION CUT.

How many good carnations can we expect from each plant from December 1 to April 15 on an average? J. M.

The question how many carnations can be picked in the time specified is difficult to answer. With the early planting that usually prevails nowadays we can get a good crop in October. Then again, April 15 is greatly curtailing the season. The heaviest picking is often from April 15 to June 15. The varieties differ as to cut, but we think for Lawson, Lady Bountiful, Harlowarden, Enchantress and other good varieties, that you would be doing well to average ten blooms to a plant in that time. W. S.

CARNATION HANNAH HOBART.

For several years reports have been coming east of the wonderful carnation called Hannah Hobart, grown by J. H. Sievers & Co. at San Francisco and said to sell in the market there at a price above that of any other variety. It is a pink, a shade lighter than Lawson and for size of flower is rather ahead of any standard sort of the day. Eastern visitors at the Sievers establishment report the growth very strong and the production large considering the great size of the blooms, an average one being shown in the accompanying illustration. There have been many inquiries as to when Mr. Sievers intended to disseminate the variety, but he has always answered that he had not yet given the matter thought. It is now reported, however, that he is contemplating sending it out next season.

PROPAGATING HOUSE.

Kind of Structure.

Without ample facilities for propagating the florist is at a disadvantage. Many who propagate only in a small way simply devote a portion of a bench in a carnation or plant house, and with careful management get along very well, but where large numbers of cuttings are to be rooted, it is necessary to have a special house. In some large establishments the north side of a three-quarter-span house with the long roof facing south and the rear wall eight feet high (to which is attached a narrow house facing north), is used for propagating This is economy of space. Little direct sun strikes the roof of this house except in June, July and August and it would therefore be well adapted for the purpose in early fall and late spring. It is very dark in the winter months and an even-span house will answer all purposes better.

The size of the house will depend on the extent of your business, but remember that for two or three weeks after cuttings are potted off, the conditions of a propagating house are just suited to the young plants, so it is not likely to be too large. The house may be ten feet wide and contain a center path with two side benches, or, better still, nineteen feet wide and a path against each wall and one in the center. This allows two benches of six feet each.

The walls should be five feet high and need not necessarily contain any glass. It is not very essential whether the house run north and south, or east and west, but north and south is rather better. It will be cooler as spring approaches. Ventilation should be continuous and on both sides of the ridge, for, while it is necessary, both to keep down temperature as well as afford a fresh, pure atmosphere, it should be let in by openings such as will not cause a draught.

Bench Construction.

The construction of the beds may be as substantial as you please. They could have 8-inch brick walls, or 6-inch concrete, but I really think that red cedar posts and 1-inch cypress boards for the sides of the beds is substantial enough.

Build the bench so that the surface of the sand is three feet above the path. There is no need of bending your back. A man will do more work and do it better and easier if he does not have to stoop. The depth of the sand can be three inches but it is well to have the edge-board an inch higher than the sand. The sides of the bed should be boarded up tight. The first board from the top one, which, of course, is a fixture, should be hinged so that it can be let down. In cold weather, when the pipes are all hot, you have more heat beneath the bed than you want and by opening these hinged boards you let the heat escape into the house. In mild weather you keep them closed and less heat is needed under the bed, because it is all confined there.

The floor of the propagating bed may be of slate or tile, the latter much the better. Slate heats quickly and cools quickly, while tile is slow and less violent to heat and retains the heat longer. There is a tile made 15x18 inches and about one and one-half inches thick that is just the thing. They can be supported by a cypress 2x4 crossing the bed every fifteen or eighteen inches, but tee iron would be much better for the purpose.

Heating.

The heating will be whatever your system is, either hot water or steam, but hot water has some advantages over steam. Steam is 212 degrees or nothing, while with hot water you can have almost any degree of heat that is desirable. The pipes should be within a foot of the ground, so that the heat has a chance to spread and not strike the tiles too strongly in one place. The number of pipes you will need will depend somewhat on your climate. Five 2-inch hot water pipes or three 1¼-inch steam pipes should be enough under a bed six feet wide, but be sure that you have all the pipes under control by valves. Some cuttings are greatly helped to root by bottom heat for the first two weeks, but for two weeks before potting off they want little heat. In our cold northern winters it is safest, in addition to the pipes beneath the bed, to have two 2-inch hot water pipes or one 1¼-inch steam pipe running on the side wall just below the plate, with valves. You may on occasions need this heat, but it will be seldom, for, as previously stated, on cold nights you will be firing hard, and heat sufficient to warm the house will be let out from beneath the benches.

Shading.

Shading in the spring months is very important. The ideal plan would be some method of applying it on the exterior of the roof, lattice work or some textile material that could be readily adjusted in bright days and rolled up on dull days. A very good shade is to take two or four stout wires, according to width of house, running the length of the house and high enough to be above a man's head. Then take two small, strong rods with cheese-cloth tacked to them, any desired width and not long. These resting on the overhead wires could be rolled up quickly or even roughly shoved up together. You may think of several methods of adjusting this cheese-cloth overhead. We have simply tacked it to the roof and it is much better than any whitewash of any kind, but it should be adjustable. Some get along by shading the glass with naphtha and lead. This is all right for a week or so, but when the cuttings begin to callus no such shade is needed. Newspapers furnish the crudest of all methods of shading.

Uses.

While a house especially adapted to propagating is a great convenience, and for those raising large quantities of roses and carnations a necessity, there are a great lot of popular bedding plants that root readily without the aid of any special house or bottom heat. Geraniums, for instance, at no time of the year need anything but an ordinary bench, and all our soft-wooded plants, such as coleus, achyranthes, salvias, ageratums and dozens more may not root quite so quickly, yet they root as well in two or three inches of sand without any bottom heat. However, a cool atmosphere with 10 or 15 degrees warmer in the sand, are the conditions best suited to root the great majority of soft-wooded plants.

Such a bench as I have described would be well suited for the erection of a frame and sash for grafted roses, where some bottom heat is absolutely necessary.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Spray the Asters.

Early asters that have started to make a good growth should now be sprayed with Paris green, a teaspoonful in a pail of water; that is, if you have been bothered with the little striped beetle that is so injurious to the buds.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Leaf cuttings that were rooted in November and December and have been kept rather dry should now get a slight shift and more water. They will soon start into growth. Plants that were left over at Christmas and later lost their tops should now be shaken out and started in fresh soil and clean pots and will be soon giving you nice young growths for cuttings. They root readily now and do not want bottom heat but must be shaded from bright sun and not subjected to draughts. For the shifting of the early rooted plants that will now take a 3-inch or 3½-inch pot, use a good turfy loam finely broken up, one part sharp sand and a sixth or seventh of well rotted cow manure. It should be so decomposed that it will run through a half-inch sieve.

The fall struck plants now started are those that will make you the large plants, as they will grow very fast from now on until flowering time. As they grow rapidly they must be occasionally pinched. The summer rooted plants make useful little plants for pans and baskets. If possible, a portable shading should be used, for, while they do not like the unshaded sun pouring through the glass on them, neither the Lorraine or any begonia except the Rex section likes a shade on all occasions.

Chrysanthemums.

Mr. Totty will excuse my reminding you that if in the fall you have a demand for well flowered small plants of these in pots you should reserve a light bench with five inches of soil and plant out some thrifty young plants that have just received their first stopping, or will soon need it, and get them on the bench by June 10. They should be fifteen inches apart and will need perhaps two pinchings during the summer. By August 15 you have a bushy little plant and they then should be lifted. You do not lose a fibre and, given a little shade for a few days, they go on growing and do not lose a leaf.

Those who have a deep, mucky soil may succeed very well with them planted outdoors, but our soil does not admit of it. Growing them all summer in pots calls for a great deal of labor and there is great risk of their suffering for water and losing some foliage. These bench-grown plants about double in size after lifting. Only short-jointed, low-growing varieties should be planted for this purpose.

Ferns on Benches.

Time was when we reckoned to have a good deal of bench room to spare between spring and fall. Nothing is unoccupied now. It don't pay. When we have a bench emptied of cannas and geraniums we can fill it with small plants of some of the nephrolepises. The best plants of these are doubtless grown in pots, but young plants put out now will wonderfully increase in size by October and give you lots of runners for future stock. If you plant them fifteen inches between rows across the bed and seven or eight inches between plants you can lift every other plant in October and let the remainder stop to grow until the following New Year's, when you may want the bench for lilies. These ferns are now used so largely anywhere and everywhere that there is yet no sign of their being a drug.

Some still stick to the Boston variety, but Scottii is undoubtedly a magnificent plant and it has one distinct advantage: It can be grown a specimen in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot. We thought N. Piersoni a beautiful plant, and so it is, but Elegantissima is far more graceful. We have sold a plant of Elegantissima for a bigger price than we ever sold any other plant in the same size pot. Plant some of all of them.

Save Some Stock Plants.

Don't forget, when you are selling off your bedding plants, to save a few plants of each of those things that do not lift well in the fall or of which the cuttings will not root from outside, so a few plants must be plunged outside during summer and brought in before frost. Lemon verbena, lantana and heliotrope are three of them. Do this when you are plunging out your azaleas.

Plant out plenty of that most useful plant, the Stevia serrata. If you are a retailer it is indispensable and may give you a bother to get. Little plants in 2-inch pots are plenty big enough, for it is a most rampant grower and it does not want too rich a soil. Plant two feet in the rows and eighteen inches between the plants. It will need at least three pinchings during summer. By lifting the first of October and standing outdoors, where it could be protected from slight frost, it only occupies the greenhouse two months and is always in for Christmas.

Bouvardias can now be planted out in some rich, light loam. If sandy, it is none the worse so long as it is rich. Plant one foot each way. Remember it is not any part of the weak, spindling growth that was made inside that will make the plant, but strong shoots which will start from the root in a few weeks after being in the ground.

Ardisias.

It is rather late now, but not too late, to sow seeds of that handsome and neatest of all berried plants, Ardisia crenulata. If sown at once and kept plunged and growing on a light bench they will make nice little plants by next spring and be covered with their bright red berries the following Christmas. They are by no means a cheap plant, for they take some time to make nice specimens, but there is nothing so pretty in berried plants, either as a single plant or in arrangements of baskets, etc. About 50 to 55 degrees suits it well in winter time. The white-berried species you can dispense with. It is crenulata you want. Sow seeds every spring and you will have shapely, dwarf plants every winter, but not the following Christmas.

Don't Neglect Heaters.

Take care of your heaters and boilers. When the hot water heaters are let out for summer they are too often sadly neglected. There are many exceptions we hope, but too often the heater being out of sight, it is out of mind and it is left for months just as you let out the last fire. Ashes are left beneath the grate bars and cinders and half burnt coal or coke in the firebox, and the stovepipe connecting with the chimney is left up to receive the dampness from the chimney. Now this is all good for the boilermaker and tinsmith, but all wrong for your pocket and annoyance.

Take down the stovepipe and oil it thoroughly, outside and in, and store it away in a dry shed. A heater should always be kept full of water. That any boilermaker will tell you. The notion that the water should be drawn out and replenished each fall is pure nonsense. Every time you fill the heater and pipes with fresh water you get a fresh deposit of dirt and sediment. The same water will do as long as the heater lasts.

All the inside of the heater you can get at should be well smeared with black oil, the doors, dampers, hinges, ash pit and all, even the outside of the boiler; but it is the inside, where the fire strikes, that needs it in particular. The rust makes little progress while you fire steadily. It is in the summer the mischief is done. A steam boiler should be filled almost full of water and then four or five gallons of crude petroleum poured in on top. Of course, the oil will float on the surface and as you let the water slowly out at the bottom every particle of the sides and tubes will have a coat of oil and the inside of the tubes should be swabbed out with a bunch of oily rags or your flue cleaner and your doors and hinges and other fixings should be well oiled.

A boilerman of many years' experience told me he was convinced that a steam boiler would last twice as long in constant use as one that lay idle five months in the summer. Our cast iron heaters are too often shamefully neglected. Don't do it unless you like to be often experimenting with a new pattern.

What I called black oil is what you can often get at a mill or factory, oil that has been used in journals, but lard oil is as good or better, only more expensive.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE BABY RAMBLER ROSE.

The originators of the dwarf everblooming Crimson Rambler rose are Levavasseur & Sons, a leading firm of French nurserymen, who gave to it the name of the wife of one of the members of the firm, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, but this was too long for practical American purposes and it was here given the much better descriptive name of Baby Rambler.

It is well known that the head of a firm of Rochester nurserymen saw the rose growing at the establishment of the originators and paid a fancy price for stock with the provision that they should have exclusive control in America. They, however, failed to stipulate that dissemination in Europe and America should be simultaneous and the result was that a number of American firms received stock in a roundabout way from Europe almost, if not quite, as soon as did the firm which paid a bonus for a control it did not get. This instance may have served to attract early attention to the rose, but its undoubted qualities of merit have served to make it one of the most highly prized of recent novelties. Indeed, there are those among leading nurserymen who assert that, whatever Turner's Crimson Rambler has been to the trade, the Baby Rambler will be even more valuable. This plant partakes of all the characteristics of the original Crimson Rambler, save that is does not grow more than twelve to eighteen inches high. It is practically everblooming and, indeed, is said by those who have given it free rein to almost bloom itself to death. In a greenhouse it blooms all the year around.

Rose Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, the Baby Rambler.

The accompanying illustration gives a fair idea of the character of the plants which were offered in considerable quantity at Easter this year. It is an admirable thing for use in making up plant baskets and hampers but it is as a Christmas plant that it will have its greatest usefulness to the retail florist. The flowers are a little larger and a little brighter in color than those of the Crimson Rambler. As a bedding rose this will have a place of its own, and tremendous stocks are now being worked up in all the leading establishments. The price in the last few months has been reduced nearly fifty per cent and it will be but a short time before this is one of the most widely used and most profitable plants known to the trade.

MORRISON, ILL.—W. A. Field is putting in the foundations of the Hills & McKenzie greenhouses.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—C. W. Smith, secretary of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, has issued the schedules for the June and November exhibitions.

RETURNING CONDENSATION.

I have a block of greenhouses heated by steam, the return pipes being two feet above the water level of the boilers and also two feet above the top of the benches. I wish to place the returns below the benches, or about three feet below the water level of the boilers. Will a steam-trap placed low enough to drain the pipes raise the water up to the boiler or is a pump necessary? Would a trap interfere with the gravity system of another block of houses about eight feet higher? There is about 12,000 feet of 1¼-inch pipe in the lower block of houses. What size of return pipe will be needed to carry 100 feet to the boiler? If a pump is used, what capacity of pump would be necessary in coldest weather in Illinois? G. H. C.

A gravity system of returning condensed or return water to the boiler is always preferable, but where it is impossible or impractical to get the boiler low enough, the water may be returned by means of a trap. There are two or three forms of steam-trap that may be used for this purpose, the usual form being placed above the boiler. The return water is collected in a closed receiver located below the lowest return pipe and forced upward into the dump trap on top of the boiler. A steam trap so placed as to drain the pipes in one set of houses will in no way interfere with the working of another range of houses by the gravity system, especially where the difference in elevation is as great as eight feet. A dump trap is preferable to a steam pump as it will work under a comparatively low pressure, the steam pump requiring at least twenty pounds pressure for its operation. Other forms of pumps are objectionable because of the cost of operating them.

It would be advisable to put in a 2½-inch pipe for returning the condensed water from the lower block of houses, and the fall in this pipe should not be less than eighteen inches for the entire 100 feet distance. A smaller pipe would doubtless handle the required amount of water but the larger pipe is preferable, as the flow of water is not constant. If a pump is used it should have a capacity of at least twenty-five gallons per minute.

BUDS AND BREAKS.

Some complaint is reaching me regarding varieties that, instead of making a clean, nice growth, will persist in producing buds. This trouble in one instance extends to the entire batch of varieties. In such a case, where all the kinds are equally affected, it plainly shows mismanagement, but some kinds with the best of care are affected always more or less in this manner, and these kinds are generally some of the best, W. R. Church, Guy Hamilton and the old Morel being good instances, and two of the novelties, J. H. Doyle and Merstham Yellow, have been reported as showing this habit more or less.

The only thing to do in such cases is to keep the buds closely picked off and eventually nature will assert herself and the plant, either by throwing up a sucker from the ground or breaking from the stem, will produce a satisfactory growth. If the plants are in pots it is well to keep them there until this shoot appears, though I am no adherent, on general principles, to letting plants lie around in small pots to get dried out several times a day and otherwise neglected, as they will be during the busy days of early June.

Where an entire batch of plants is throwing buds instead of growing, it shows that they have not had a sufficient supply of water and the wood has become hard and pithy, whereas a young plant in the pink of condition should be almost as succulent and brittle as a stalk of asparagus. Young plants should never be permitted to become dry or trouble will certainly follow.

Early rooted plants that have made a growth a foot or so in length will now be producing what is known as a "break." This is really a bud, but it is entirely in conformity with the natural habit of the plant. Three or more growths will at once appear around this bud and they will grow away without any trouble. A plant producing a bud in this manner now will produce another one in July, and then a third one will be produced in August, which will make a good flower if the growth shoots are disbudded.

This habit of the chrysanthemum in producing summer buds or "breaks" is probably responsible for the confusion that so often arises in the minds of growers who are not so well posted on the plant as they might be. When the plant produces a bud late in August the man who does not know imagines it is another summer break and permits the plant to go on and make another growth where if he had retained that bud he would have been rewarded by a splendid flower.

It is early to be writing of flowers at planting time, but I am endeavoring to make the bud and "break" question clear, which is so hard for the layman to understand, since no other plant of my acquaintance has this habit.

General Notes.

It is hard to fumigate plants now and the black fly waxes fat and plenteous in the land. Dust the plants well with tobacco dust or spray with To-bak-ine Liquid and either one will keep down this pest.

Some growers set out plants in the garden which after being pinched a few times make very fair bushes for lifting in September and potting. If you do this, and it is a cheap way of handling a big lot of stock, plant them in close proximity to the water supply. They love a copious spraying in the cool evening after a hot, drying day.

It used to be quite an idea to plant out the future pot plants on the vacant carnation benches, but now with the growth of the new ideas regarding carnation culture, i. e., planting from pots in June or from the field in July, such a course is out of the question.

If you are figuring on growing some very late flowers and do not propose to put in your cuttings just yet, do not neglect the stock plants. If they are in pots or boxes, put them out in a cold frame, where they will not get so drawn with the heat. Many growers keep their stock plants in frames all the time, putting them in after the flowering period is over in the fall and waiting until the plants come naturally into growth in the spring before propagating.

If any of the young stock is running up too high it is a good plan to pinch it back, leaving three or four good leaves. They will break readily enough and be far more satisfactory than if allowed to run on in a tall, overgrown condition.

Charles H. Totty.

ROSES

DRYING OFF.

Those who intend to carry part of their stock over for another season should feed the plants well in order to retain size of bloom and encourage a strong growth before beginning to dry them off later on. By this method we can have a fair supply of good stock until such time as the earlier planted stock will begin to produce.

By the beginning of August, these benches can be allowed to gradually ripen by curtailing the water supply and giving free ventilation. In order that every leaf may help in the ripening process, the syringe will have to be used freely, so that with the drier atmosphere induced by the smaller supply of water used, red spider may not get a hold.

We frequently see houses during the ripening process sadly neglected in the matter of ventilation and syringing because of the mistaken idea that as a certain per cent of the leaves have got to go it does not matter how. Now, the foliage is just as essential to a proper ripening of the wood as it is during the growing season and any stock where the leaves are scorched or burned off in a hurry, or are allowed to become a prey to red spider, must lose a large portion of their vitality, and consequently the root action will be more difficult to start, causing the eyes to break weak.

The ripening process, to be effective, must be slow and natural, never allowing the soil to become so dry that the young wood or foliage will show signs of wilting, keeping the temperature as near 56 degrees as possible during the night and giving all the air possible on every favorable occasion during the day.

The Field of Irises and Peonies at the Peterson Nursery, Chicago.

This process usually requires about three or four weeks.

The small, straggling and blind wood should then be trimmed out and the stronger shoots shortened to four or five good eyes.

The surface of the soil should then be removed, taking just as much as possible without injuring the roots and then giving a dusting of air-slaked lime. A rich compost of well rotted manure and soil should then be put on to take the place of that already removed and the whole given a thorough soaking.

The temperature for the first three weeks should be kept below 56 degrees at night if possible, giving free ventilation and keeping the house well moistened with the syringe and rather close during the day, gradually increasing the supply of air and water as the eyes break and leaves develop.

To encourage the dormant eyes at the base to break freely it is frequently of service to bend down the stronger shoots to a horizontal position, tying them to keep them in place.

I may here remark that shading at any time is very injurious and wherever practiced is sure to cause a weak growth and thin, light colored foliage. RIBES.

PEONIES AND IRISES.

The Peterson Nursery, at Chicago, has long been known for the collection of peonies which has been for years a special object of attention on the part of Wm. A. Peterson. The collection is one of the largest in the country and one of the most carefully handled. Lately Mr. Peterson has turned his attention to the iris and has established a collection which is in every way in keeping with the peony plantation. He reports that the business in irises has become very heavy. The iris is not a shipping flower, but for local use is becoming very popular and a large number of retail florists who have ground space, have planted collections of iris of more or less pretensions.

The peony season at Peterson's is always made the occasion of an invitation to the trade and the public to visit the nursery. It is thought that the display will be at its best the latter part of next week and the first part of the week following, during which the American Peony Society meets in Chicago. One of the special sorts of interest is Delicatissima which Mr. Peterson thinks will rank in pinks where Festiva maxima does in white.

RAISING PEONIES FROM SEED.

I am glad that there is so much interest taken in this glorious flower, the peony. Last fall the writer broke the world's record by planting thirty-five pounds of selected peony seed, and it is curious to watch their moods, for they are full of "moods and tenses." For instance, if you let the seed get dry they will balk then and there. They will lie dormant two years before they will come up. Twenty pounds got dry, and, though covered at the proper depth, not one appeared. I tried various experiments in the hopes of overcoming their unruliness. Last fall I soaked some in warm water quite a while and tried to make them forget that they had been dried, all to no purpose. They would not be fooled. Then I layered some in sand and put hot water on them this spring, treating them as I would canna seed, again all to no purpose; not a seed came. And there they will lie all summer and next winter and then they will come up by the thousands next spring, but not all. Some will wait yet another year.

But here comes in a curious thing. Some seeds were overlooked while we were gathering them and they were fully as dry as the rest. The pods burst open and the seeds, as hard as flints, fell on the ground. There they lay in the slush and snow. They were dried fully as hard as the others, but every one seemed to grow. We found little patches by the hundreds which were taken up and transplanted with care. Now who can tell why they should grow in one case and not in the other? Those planted were put in moist ground and were covered with snow all winter. Those scattered on the surface were no more moist than the planted ones. They all grew, and the others take a year longer. I knew of some of these peculiarities and so gathered a lot of seeds just as they were turning brown and planted them immediately. These seeds came up all right and are making good growth. I have thousands gathered from white peonies and hope for something fine.

I ordered twenty-five pounds from one of the choice collections of America and charged the proprietor to be sure and gather them green and put in wet sand, but he was busy and waited until they were dry, which makes me wait a year longer. After the plants appear it takes from four to eight years to find out what they will do and you cannot always tell from the first flowers just what they will be. You must wait a few years for them to be confirmed. There is a fascination in this work and in 40,000 or 50,000 there must be some of superior merit. C. S. HARRISON.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The second annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Friday and Saturday, June 16 and 17, the exhibition being staged in the same hall used for the autumn flower show and more recently for the show of the American Carnation Society. President C. W. Ward is of the opinion that the exhibition will considerably excel that held in New York a year ago, and that it will be a display which will compare favorably in interest with displays of any other special flower. Entries must be in the hands of Secretary A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass., by June 10. J. B. Deamud will have charge of the staging of the stock, and exhibits may be sent in his care.

The premium list is as follows:

Largest and best collection of double varieties, one flower each, first, $15; second, $10; third, $5.

Collection of best twelve and most distinct double varieties, six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of double varieties in various shades of rose pink, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, 10; second, $5.

Collection of double varieties, salmon and flesh-colored, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of double white varieties, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of double varieties, cream white and light yellow, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of crimson varieties, without stamens, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of double crimson varieties, with stamens, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of tricolor varieties, including flowers with guard petals, collarette and center petals of different colors, not less than three nor more than six flowers each, first, $10; second, $5.

Twelve specimen varieties, twelve blooms of each variety, first, silver cup; second, $10.

Best one hundred blooms Festiva maxima, first, $10; second, $5.

Best one hundred double blooms pink, any shade, first, $10; second, $5.

Best one hundred double blooms crimson, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of Japanese single varieties, including so-called Imperial varieties, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of single varieties, first, $10; second, $5.

Open to amateurs and private growers only: Collection of not less than twelve varieties, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Best and largest collection of pure white varieties, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of rose pink varieties, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of salmon and flesh pink varieties, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of tricolored varieties, one bloom of each variety, first $10; second, $5.

Collection of crimson varieties, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of cream and yellow varieties, with or without markings, one bloom of each variety, first, $10; second, $5.

Collection of twelve or more single varieties, first, $10; second, $5.

ANTS ON PEONIES.

I have some peonies, the buds of which are covered with the common black ant. Will they spoil the flowers and how shall I get rid of them? B. G.

Ants are often found on peony buds, but it is believed that they only eat the juices on the outside and do not perforate the petals of the peony. Experts are of the opinion that they do not cause any trouble except when an ant hill is formed around the roots of the plant, in which case they kill the plant. It seems to be a fact that unhealthy plants, such as are in soggy ground, seem to be more infested than healthy, vigorous plants, but why this is no one seems prepared to say. Probably the commonest method of destroying ants is to feed them some sweetened preparation containing arsenic.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A SWEET PEA CONTEST.

In the pretty little city of Wausau, in Wisconsin, there are over 500 plots of sweet peas being tended by school children eager to win one of the prizes offered by Christ Lund, the enterprising florist who started the competition as a means of advertising his business. The plan is well explained by the following from a printed circular placed in the hands of every school child in the town:

In order to stimulate the interest in the growing of flowers, and thereby beautify our homes and our city, I have decided to offer cash prizes to the amount of $10 for the best flowers of sweet peas grown by any child under 14 years of age from seeds put up by me for that special purpose, to be known as "Children's Prize-Winning Sweet Peas," and sold at 10 cents a package, each package containing one ounce of the very best seed in assorted colors.

Any child attending school at Wausau will be entitled to one package of this seed by filling out coupon below, and presenting it with 10 cents, at my greenhouse at 914 Grand Ave., Tuesdays after school and Saturdays, until April 18.

The Ladies' Literary Club has kindly consented to appoint judges, select time and place of exhibition and award prizes. The prizes will be divided as follows: One first prize, $3; one second prize, $2; one third prize, $1; eight fourth prizes, 50 cents each.

In addition to this I will give to the school whose pupils buy the largest number of packages of seed, a collection of hardy plants to be planted on the school grounds.

The immediate result was a very large number of visitors to the greenhouses, giving an opportunity to show the stock, and immediate sale of sweet pea seed and other stock to a total somewhat above the total expense, leaving a fair margin of profit, to say nothing of the most valuable consideration, the benefits to accrue as the season progresses.

The coupon mentioned in the offer was for the purpose of getting a record of the children who started in the competition. On the circular were the following directions for growing sweet peas:

The seed should be sown in rich, well-prepared ground early in the spring, usually from the middle to the end of April, if possible in ground where sweet peas have not been grown before. Make a trench about six inches deep, in which plant the seeds two inches apart, cover at first to a depth of about two inches. When the plants are up a few inches, draw in more soil, but not fully level with the surface, so you may have a chance for watering in dry weather. Keep free from weeds at all times. A support of some kind is necessary as soon as sweet peas are two or three inches above the ground. Either brush or wire netting will answer the purpose. Always pick flowers before they go to seed. The better you tend to the picking the better they will blossom.

RETAILERS' ADVERTISING.

The subject of advertising for retail florists is one which has received little attention, much less than it deserves, for the matter of advertising is one of the most important connected with any form of merchandising. It has been said that what steam is to an engine, advertising is to a business.

The advertising of a flower store is in no particular different from the advertising of any other kind of store, except that the wares offered give an opportunity for better work on the part of the advertising writer. It was only a short time ago that retail florists did not advertise at all, but they are gradually beginning to see that the use of space in their local newspapers is one of the best ways of drawing public attention to what they want to sell. The advertisements of a number of florists through

PREPARE FOR DECORATION DAY

Beautify your home place and fix up that lot in the cemetery by setting out some attractive flowering plants. Our trade has been fully double that of previous years, thus showing the constantly growing demand, but we still have a good supply of most varieties and would specially recommend for cemetery and home planting:—

Geraniums, Heliotrope, Double Petunas, Ageratum, Vincas, Myrtle, Lobelia, Coleus, Variegated Steria, Daisies, Salvia, Carnations, Feverfew, Alyssum, Peonies, Roses, Fuchsias, Cannas, Gladiolis, Verbenas, Achillea, Pansies and Hardy Shrubs.

There is still plenty of time to set out evergreens and we have some extra fine shaped trees at low prices. You can leave orders at the store if desired but it will pay you to go to the greenhouses and see the plants.

Some Typical Examples of the Advertisements of Retailers.

the country are reproduced in this issue. These are not offered as examples of what flower store advertising should be, but as examples of what it is. There is room for improvement, but these are better than none. Why it should be that a florist does not quote prices in an advertisement is hard to see. The most liberal advertisers of all are the department stores and they never print an advertisement without quoting prices on the goods advertised. This is true of the high class stores, like Marshall Field's in Chicago, as well as of the stores which cater to the cheaper trade. It is not necessary to quote cheap prices to attract trade, but advertising men in general have come to the conclusion that no advertisement is so strong as it might be unless it tells the prospective buyer what the article in question will cost.

Florists everywhere are invited to send the Review samples of their local retail advertising. The best of these will be reproduced from time to time as opportunity offers.

A CALLA LILY BASKET.

There is no one flower so often and more unjustly accused of being stiff as the calla lily. To tell the truth, it is a little difficult to handle and arrange gracefully, especially in flat bunches. Just what the difficulty of the average designer is with this flower is not so easily defined. Look at one flower alone, with its stem. From the point of the perianth down the outside toward the stem and through its extreme length, it is a long graceful curve, and from the folded side of the perianth down the other side of the flower and stem, it is still the same graceful, easy line. Why should not a group of callas somewhat approach the natural curve of the one flower?

As has been said of other flowers in a flat bunch, callas should have a springy support under them to keep part of the flower from being folded under, as it would be if laid flat upon a hard surface. As a rule a group of callas looks better with the perianth point outward.

While there is no disputing the fact that its natural foliage is always the best with a flower, it is not always practical to try to carry out this rule. In this case the foliage is abundant and accessible, but its poor lasting qualities prevent using it cut, and we fall back on the old standby, wood ferns, with a light spray of Asparagus plumosus and a rosette of yellow dotted chiffon and white satin ribbon. Two streamers of the ribbon falling from this rosette are caught on the right side, with a smaller rosette of the chiffon below and a tiny bow of the ribbon on the shorter streamer.

The coloring in this case is brown in the basket, yellow and cream in the flowers and ribbon, and green, which is always understood to be present in less or greater quantities.

The fault in so many baskets, round bouquets and the bases of standing designs is the evenness of the top surface. For instance, on a dove and basket of flowers for funeral use, the line drawn across the top of the flowers slopes gradually and uniformly on all sides from the center out. Plow up that even top. Cut some stems quite short. Leave others long. Let a few strong stems tower away above the others. Throw a few out of the regular line down over the edge till they fall out lawlessly from the mass of flowers and foliage. This plan not only makes a more pleasing and inviting arrangement, but shows the quality and size of the individual flowers to a decidedly better advantage.

This basket, while being suitable for a funeral or decorative design, was originally a store display piece.

Often some one flower becomes a drug on the market and requires some new "dress up" to induce sales. Herein lies the value of a good stock of accessories. Instead of setting out your surplus stock of callas in a papier-mache pot, which is all well and good for storage purposes, set the jar inside of some such basket as is here pictured. Add the foliage and ribbon and set in a prominent place in the store, in front of the door, or in the window. It may at least sell the callas and perhaps sell itself too, or some day a customer will recall the design and order one like it. It is a good plan to have some kind of a display basket in sight most of the time. If well arranged and novel, they often sell on sight. Full blown roses can often be used in this way more than once. Don't throw them away till they begin to drop their petals.

Basket of Callas.

The same rule holds good in the display of plants. The one plant no better than the others in a group will sell quicker than the rest out of an appropriate pot cover. Gertrude Blair.

[The Gold Mine in the Front Yard and How to Work It, by C. S. Harrison; Webb Publishing Co.; $1.]

C. S. Harrison has spent a long life in the pursuit of horticulture and has given no small part of his time to the endeavor to bring the beauties of nature home to the people. The volume in hand is his most pretentious work in this direction. The purpose of the book is to show its readers that expenditures of time and money in the horticultural improvement of a property are repaid many fold, not only in the pleasure afforded the owner if it be a home, but in real dollars if the property is put upon the market. The suggestions are particularly applicable to conditions as they exist on the prairie farms of the great west, where the author asserts millions of dollars may be added to realty values by a very small investment in plants, supplemented by the employment of a little time.

Only a few of the 279 pages in the book are devoted directly to the plea that the life of the back yard is not the sole object of existence; far the greater part of the volume is taken up with suggestions as to the treatment of the front yard, methods of planting, the care of plants and material to plant. The tree agent comes in for an excoriation. No writing of Mr. Harrison ever failed to say a word for the peony and an especially good one for some of the excellent creations of western growers. In this case eighty pages, or nearly one-third the book, are given to the author's favorite flower, including a list of recommended varieties so long that it could not but be bewildering to the man who wants to make a modest start in developing his front yard gold mine. But the descriptions and comments are full of interest to the peony grower, even if much of the matter has already been published in Harrison's Peony Manual. However, exception must be taken when one reads of Festiva maxima that plants wholesale for $1 each and that it is impossible to supply the demand while, the author is "informed that the cut blooms bring $2 per dozen wholesale in Chicago." Mr. Harrison has been misinformed.

Far more than those gentlemen have ever done for themselves, Mr. Harrison does for Terry, Richardson and Rosenfield in exploiting some of the wonderful peonies which have originated on their places. For these modest western growers, whose work is deserving of all praise, Mr. Harrison lets no opportunity to lend a helping hand go unimproved.

Other chapters deal with many of the other flowers from which in the front yard pleasure and profit are to be derived and it is to be hoped that the publishers are able to get the volume a wide reading, for its purpose is most commendable from whatever point of view.

Group of Cattleya Thayeriana, Raised by E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, Mass.

CATTLEYA THAYERIANA.

This excellent cattleya was raised by E. O. Orpet, superintendent gardener on the E. V. R. Thayer estate, South Lancaster, Mass., and is the result of crossing C. intermedia with C. Schrœderæ alba. The cross was made April 4, 1896, and the seed sown March 26, 1897. There are now at South Lancaster some ninety plants in all, some of these being big specimens in 16-inch tubs. The plant is a very vigorous grower, usually making two sets of bulbs a year and flowering both in spring and fall. The photograph reproduced shows a group in bloom at the end of March of the present year.

The flowers show a wonderful variation in colorings, hardly any two being precisely alike. While some are almost pure white, others are pale pink, with no color on the lip, while some have a lip of darkest amaranth. This variety received a silver medal from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society when first exhibited.

E. O. Orpet, the raiser of this and many other fine seedlings, is of English birth, working at a number of first-class places there before coming to America. He has been at South Lancaster some fifteen years, revolutionizing his place since he took it in hand. His first experiment in orchid hybridization was made in 1895. He now has some 3,000 seedlings in various stages, including some odontoglossums with leaf points, probably the only ones in the United States, certainly the first we have heard of. His future success with these latter, if he succeeds in rearing them, will be something of a triumph, as odontoglossums are especially difficult subjects to handle, owing to our hot summers. Mr. Orpet has had excellent success with them the past two or three years, since giving them full winter sun and growing them in a north house from April to November.

Mr. Orpet is still busy making promising and interesting crosses, using Sophronitis grandiflora on cattleyas and lælias, these crosses being more difficult to accomplish. His seedlings all show wonderful vigor. A large proportion flower twice a year and he is really never without flower on some of them. There would seem to be great possibilities in a race of American seedling cattleyas, which possess a vigor and vitality far superior to that of any of the imported species.

Seedlings from South Lancaster have been awarded several gold medals in Boston as well as a number of silver gilt and silver medals and numerous certificates of merit. No other American orchid hybridist has approached Mr. Orpet in success with cattleyas and lælia seedlings. W. N. CRAIG.

SOME BURBANK ACHIEVEMENTS.

[A paper by Edwin Lonsdale, read at the May meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.]

Very entertaining articles are being prepared for the magazines these days, one of the most elaborate being by W. S. Harwood and which appeared in the March and April numbers of the Century Magazine. There is no doubt that Mr. Harwood is correct when he says that Mr. Burbank has become the foremost man in the world in the production of new and interesting forms of fruits, trees, flowers, vegetables, grasses and nuts.

Mr. Burbank, when he had made up his mind to make the improvement of vegetation his life work, had the good judgment to make California his home and the scenes of his world famous experiments and triumphs.

His recognition has been tardy, but last year more than 6,000 men, embracing among them the very pick and flower of the scientific life of two hemispheres, made the pilgrimage to his Santa Rosa home to study the lines of his investigations, to see with their own eyes many things which their scientific minds could not accept as truth, without visual demonstration, and to learn some details of the supreme results achieved. During the year, 30,000 letters were received, coming from every quarter of the globe, asking for more light upon his work. The Carnegie Institution has recognized his worth in a substantial manner by granting the sum of $100,000 to be made available in sums of $10,000 each year for ten years.

This will be a great aid in carrying out the many experiments he now has on hand, and it is to be hoped they will be carried to successful conclusions.

What apparently at this time will in the future be considered Burbank's greatest achievement is the development of the thornless cactus, which is botanically an opuntia and commonly called the prickly pear. For a period of over ten years he has worked with the utmost persistence and skill until at last he has developed a cactus plant that will convert the desert into a garden. "He has not only made it thornless," so says Mr. Harwood, "but he has made it adaptable to any climate." This we can readily believe, "as it will thrive on the hot desert and it will grow with marvelous fecundity when irrigated or when planted in rich soil." Its great value as an article of food for cattle will in truth make the desert smile. The tenacity of this class of plants is well known to all plantsmen.

And some of the fruit of this prickless pear is possessed of a flavor hitherto unknown, having a combination of the flavors of half a dozen fruits, variously suggesting pineapple, melon, peach, apricot, but yet without definition or identification. It is full of nutrients, too; in fact, it has been found that the natives of some southern climes virtually live upon the fruit of one of the crude parents of this wonderful plant. It is stated that one of the more highly developed plants grown to almost gigantic stature in three years has over 600 pounds of nutritious food for man and beast upon it, and as one looks upon this one plant and thinks of the vast multiplication of it now possible, you begin to realize of what is likely to come to pass in the reclamation of the waste places of the earth. This cactus now becomes a definite practical food. It may be eaten raw or cooked. The leaves may be put up and preserved as ginger or melon rinds or citrons. They may be eaten in a variety of ways, while the fruit itself will prove one of the delicacies of the market.

The new variety preserves its type, never reverting. There is apparently no disposition to go back to the original.

Mr. Burbank has done much among the poppies. He has succeeded in crossing an annual with a perennial, and some of the flowers are said to be ten inches across. The species operated upon were the oriental poppy, Papaver orientalis, as pollen parent, and the opium variety, P. somniferum, as seed parent.

Another of his achievements was the creation of the fastest growing tree in the temperate zones of the world, a walnut which in thirteen years has grown to six times the size that an average walnut has grown in twenty-eight years. The shells of this walnut were bred so thin that birds could pick holes in them, so that it became necessary to reverse the process, breeding back until the shells have become of the requisite thickness.

The plum-cot, another achievement, is a combination of the common American plum, a Japanese plum, and the common apricot, producing a fruit unknown to the world before, with a delicious flavor unlike either of its ancestors, and plentiful in nutrients and beautiful in color. Incidentally, the plum-cot with the primus berry, disproves the dictum of scientists that new species cannot be produced by man.

Amaryllis blooms ten inches in diameter of excellent coloring are among his products; also new types of gladiolus, some with the flowers set all around the stalk and not all on one side, as is the case with the type, but whether they will rank with the new type raised by Groff, can only be determined by experiment. A dahlia with the perfume of the magnolia is another of his achievements.

The Shasta daisy and other varieties when first sent out seemed to be disappointments, but now appear to be giving better satisfaction. Mr. Harwood apparently confounds the English daisy with the common field daisy now growing in such abundance in America when he says the "tiny field daisy." It is not so very tiny, whereas the English daisy may properly be called tiny in comparison, and botanically one of the parents of the Shasta, I believe, is a chrysanthemum, C. Leucanthemum. whereas the English daisy is a bellis.

Another creation under way is the "pomato," which may be called a tomato growing upon a potato. This has been done in days gone by by others by grafting a tomato upon a potato, but Mr. Burbank's pomato is being produced presumably through the more legitimate way of crossing and seeding and selection.

Great things are expected by Mr. Burbank's improvement of the Australian star flower. Seed of the original has been offered by most of the leading seedsmen this year. It is quite a promising flowering plant. It is bright pink, and fragrant, and the flowers are said to retain their form and coloring almost indefinitely and are recommended to be used on ladies' hats in millinery.

A new type of larkspur he has established, much enlarged, with a delicious odor, and the color combinations are far finer than the common larkspur. It would be interesting and instructive to see these and some of the greatly improved European forms grown side by side.

In referring to the white blackberry, it is said by Mr. Harwood that Mr. Burbank chose one plant out of 65,000. It would be interesting to know whether Mr. Burbank made an effort to produce a white blackberry, or was it what is called a sport. It appears to me that the "Iceberg" blackberry was an accident, for I do not know of anything in that line to work on that would be likely to give the results as they are.

Mr. Burbank has accomplished great things with the plum; mostly all of those so-called Japanese are the result of his manipulations. He now has 300,000 distinct varieties of plums, 60,000 peaches and nectarines, 5,000 to 6,000 almonds, 2,000 cherries, as many pears, 1,000 grapes, 3,000 apples, 1,200 quinces, 5,000 walnuts, the same number of chestnuts, with many thousands of other fruits, flowers and vegetables, which he is working on to improve.

Mr. Harwood relates very entertainingly how Mr. Burbank was walking one summer evening through his experimental grounds past a bank of verbenas, a scentless sort which he was breeding up into a finer variety. On this occasion he was attracted by a faint, sweet odor from the bed; he tried to locate the flowers emitting the perfume, but was unable to do so. A year later, passing by the bed, he was again attracted by the odor of the trailing arbutus.

> With his characteristic patience he went over the plants one by one until, at last, he found the one that had the elusive odor. It was at once isolated, and its seeds were saved and planted with great care. Succeeding sets of seeds were planted, year by year the plants were challenged. The scent became more and more pronounced, continuing in its likeness to the arbutus, and becoming, at last, greatly intensified.

No doubt at all this is quite true, for it is no new thing to have fragrant verbena flowers. In the days when verbenas were more generally popular than they now are, some of the cultivated varieties at that time produced flowers with a decided odor, and in the evening it was when these flowers gave off their scent, which was truly suggestive of the trailing arbutus. I have not grown the verbena for many years, but as I remember them, some varieties were absolutely without fragrance, whereas others were decidedly sweet. While the color may not have influenced the odor, there were colors which were more likely to be scented than others. The scarlets and bright pinks were generally scentless, while the purples and whites most often had the arbutus-like smell. And, again, if my memory serves correctly, there were many variations from that rule. If there are any verbena growers present, they, I hope, will throw more light on this subject. If Mr. Dillon is present, who grows 500,000 verbenas annually, he may help us.

E. Sutermeister.

It will be remembered that Mr. Harwood, in introducing the verbena subject, stated that Mr. Burbank passed a bank of verbenas, a scentless variety, from which we might infer that he knew there were other varieties which were fragrant, but he did not say so; hence I have taken the liberty of mentioning the fact that there are many varieties already in cultivation which are quite fragrant.

Mr. Burbank has promised us a blue rose, "when he has time." I have heard it said by some florists that at certain periods of the year there are too many blue roses already. Let us hope that Mr. Burbank has in his mind's eye a blue rose, with the typical forget-me-not blue or with the hue of the Delphinium formosum, for nothing short of either of the two shades of blue, or something intermediate between them, will satisfy us.

Mr. Burbank has increased the size of the flower of a sedum, but which of the numerous species and varieties he has so improved is not stated. He has raised a pampas grass with pink plumes, but what is the shade of pink? Is it the color of Carnation Enchantress or Scott or Lawson? It would be interesting to know.

Great things are expected from a new hybrid tobacco, which is stated to be much thriftier and better adapted to colder climates and finer in flavor than the best tobacco now grown.

Some statements are made to the effect that thirty-six apples, no two alike, were all grown from the seed of one apple. There is nothing unusual about that. It would be strange if the results had proven to be otherwise. Mr. Harwood evidently is not very familiar with grafting fruit trees, for he says:

> In grafting apples, the same tree is used often year in and year out, as many as 400 apples growing on the tree at the same time.

What is the idea he wished to convey in that statement? Four hundred would not be a large crop of apples on a large tree. Let's go on further:

> Sometimes other fruits are grafted upon the tree, so that there may be five hundred varieties of fruit growing at once from the parent tree.

Great Scott! I wish Mr. Harwood had taken the time to name a few of the "other fruits" grafted on the parent tree. I believe it is possible to have 500 varieties of apples on one tree if there were that number of twigs to graft upon and that number of varieties to graft. The so-called parent tree, even then could only be a foster parent at best.

The elæagnus fruit has long been used for preserving, and it is good news to know that Mr. Burbank has added this to his other triumphs by improving it. The English walnut has had the bitter skin bred out of it, and the size of the kernel and the whiteness thereof have been increased. Good news! But here is a paragraph hard to understand:

> In passing, it may be noted here that Mr. Burbank has accomplished that which Darwin hinted at, but accepted with reservations, the grafting of one tree upon another and at the same time the transformation of the tree without fertilization, the accomplishment of a complete cross by the graft. He took a French plum unknown in America, and grafted it upon a Japanese plum. The graft bore no bloom, but the tree was recreated, if you will. Its seedlings took on a wholly new life and became hybrids, its vital essence was changed through the medium of the graft.

There is nothing at all difficult in grafting a French plum on a Japanese plum, even if the French plum were unknown in America. Here is something hard to understand. "The graft bore no bloom." Yet its seedlings took on a wholly new life and became hybrids! Where did the seedlings come from if this new creation bore no bloom? How could there be seedlings if there were no seeds. There could be no seeds if there were no bloom. If there were no petals, there must have been a pistil and stamens, or there could have been no fruit, no seeds, and consequently no seedlings. Something very important has been left out in what Mr. Harwood has been trying to elucidate. It is possible that the combination of the saps of the French and Japanese plums has caused the resultant tree to produce a shoot that was different from the stock, and this shoot would be called, generally speaking among ourselves, a sport, and in due course this would be increased in numbers by grafting or budding or cuttings and these would produce the flowers and the fruits and the seeds and eventually the seedings, and that, as it appears to me, is the only way the seedlings would come. If this is what Mr. Harwood means, here is a case where a plum-tree has been induced to sport through grafting. I read somewhere sometime ago that the white form of the H. R. rose Baroness Rothschild called Mabel Morrison was the result of the tea rose Niphetos being budded on the Rothschild, causing it to break and produce a shoot that bore white flowers; hence a sport, or, as Darwin would say, a bud variation.

Another change Mr. Burbank has made in flowers, but this was not mentioned by Mr. Harwood in his articles, was in the aquilegia, commonly called the columbine. By repeated selection he has fixed a type with the spurs eliminated. I must own up that I have not seen any of the flowers of these new types, but I confess I am prejudiced against this new innovation, because the long spurs appeared to me always to add greatly to the grace of the unique flowers of the columbine. Let us hope that this is a case where they have to be seen to be appreciated. It, however, goes to show what may be accomplished by persistent, well directed effort, with a worthy ideal to look up to and aim for.

Many of the achievements with which Mr. Burbank has been credited have been done by others. This is not said to detract from the wonderful work he has done, but to show how slow the people have been in coming to a realization of what has been going on among horticulturists, florists and gardeners in the improvements in plant life. For instance, when the Chinese primrose was introduced, about the year 1820 I think, the flowers were not larger than a nickel and a poor, washed-out pink in color. Now they are larger than a silver dollar, and have been so for over twenty years, both single and double flowers, and they come in nearly all the colors of the rainbow. Anyway, we can have them in the national colors of red, white and blue, with numerous intermediate shades.

All here present know what has been done with the carnation within the past ten years, and with these important improvements in flowers so far Burbank has had nothing to do.

Mr. Burbank has greatly increased the geranium (zonal pelargonium is meant, I believe) in size, and at the same time has made it far more brilliant in color.

This statement is most interesting, or at least as the late Horace Greeley would say, "interesting if true." Illustration of an old variety is given and the new one enlarged in form illustrated for comparison, but it is questionable whether Mr. Burbank's zonals are any larger than are those to be found in an up-to-date florist's establishment, and if he has any varieties more brilliant scarlet in color than an old French variety named Le Pilote and a Philadelphia variety known as Dennison's Seedling, I know most of us would not only like to see such a one but we would also like to own one.

But all honor to Burbank and all honor to those who have eventually recognized the good work he is doing and the hope for his still greater achievements, and all honor to the newspapers and magazines which have spread broadcast the knowledge of the possibilities of improvements in all vegetation, and here's hoping the same may awaken some kindred spirits and kindle an enthusiasm to aid Burbank in the grand work now going on.

INOCULATION OF SOIL.

The publication of the results obtained with pure cultures in inoculating leguminous plants has resulted in a very great demand being made upon the Department of Agriculture for inoculating material, says Albert F. Woods in a recent bulletin. The distribution made during 1904 was for the purpose of obtaining a large number of tests of the method under average farm conditions, and it was impossible to anticipate the demand which has arisen this spring, the total quantity prepared for spring distribution having been promised early in February. It is expected, however, that this fall and next spring a further distribution will be made as far as limited facilities will permit. Statements to the effect that the Department has stopped the distribution of these cultures are therefore erroneous. Applications for future distributions should state what legume is to be sown, time of sowing, and quantity of seed to be treated.

Commercial Production.

The patent which the Department of Agriculture holds upon the method of growing and distributing these organisms was taken out in such a way that no one can maintain a monopoly of the manufacture of such cultures. It is held in the name of Dr. George T. Moore, who developed and perfected the method. Upon application the Department furnishes without discrimination all necessary information, and as far as possible "starting" or foundation cultures, to the bacteriologists representing experiment stations and commercial concerns which claim to be properly equipped, but it does not in any way guarantee their product. It is not likely that persons without expert knowledge can successfully multiply cultures of these organisms for sale or distribution.

Cost of Cultures.

The question of the proper price for the commercial product is causing considerable inquiry among prospective experimenters and is of importance. The expenses which a commercial concern must necessarily meet, such as rent, heat, light, insurance, postage, advertising, etc., aside from laboratory assistance and clerical hire, make any comparison with the cost to the government of similar cultures difficult. The statement that the cultures cost but a few cents an acre refers only to the raw materials which make up the package. It is more than probable that natural competition will considerably reduce the present valuation of the commercial product, and the wisdom of patenting the Department's methods to prevent the formation of a monopoly is already demonstrated.

Increasing Cultures.

We are receiving numerous requests from persons who have secured commercial cultures, as well as those sent out from the Department of Agriculture, for information as to the methods employed in producing a large quantity of liquid culture from the dry culture secured as a starter; that is, how to make an "acre culture" do for twenty-five or 100 acres. Such methods will give good results only when special precautions are taken, and on this account have not been generally recommended. The contaminations, such as yeasts, molds, etc., which are bound to occur to a greater or less extent, are apt to take possession of the culture solution in which the bacteria are being multiplied, and unless great care is taken in thoroughly sterilizing all utensils employed, the resulting culture will have no beneficial effect. The extra time required to secure sufficient growth of bacteria in ten gallons of solution from a dry culture originally intended to produce a one-gallon liquid culture makes the risk from contamination much greater than where the dry culture is proportioned in size to the larger amount of solution. If a growth suffi-

the world before, with a delicious flavor unlike either of its ancestors, and plentiful in nutrients and beautiful in color. Incidentally, the plum-cot with the prunus berry, disproves the dictum of scientists that new species cannot be produced by man.

Amaryllis blooms ten inches in diameter of excellent coloring are among his products; also new types of gladiolus, some with the flowers set all around the stalk and not all on one side, as is the case with the type, but whether they will rank with the new type raised by Groff, can only be determined by experiment. A dahlia with the perfume of the magnolia is another of his achievements.

The Shasta daisy and other varieties when first sent out seemed to be disappointments, but now appear to be giving better satisfaction. Mr. Harwood apparently confounds the English daisy with the common field daisy now growing in such abundance in America when he says the "tiny field daisy." It is not so very tiny, whereas the English daisy may properly be called tiny in comparison, and botanically one of the parents of the Shasta, I believe, is a chrysanthemum, C. Leucanthemum, whereas the English daisy is a bellis.

Another creation under way is the "pomato," which may be called a tomato growing upon a potato. This has been done in days gone by by others by grafting a tomato upon a potato, but Mr. Burbank's pomato is being produced presumably through the more legitimate way of crossing and seeding and selection.

Great things are expected by Mr. Burbank's improvement of the Australian star flower. Seed of the original has been offered by most of the leading seedsmen this year. It is quite a promising flowering plant. It is bright pink, and fragrant, and the flowers are said to retain their form and coloring almost indefinitely and are recommended to be used on ladies' hats in millinery.

A new type of larkspur he has established, much enlarged, with a delicious odor, and the color combinations are far finer than the common larkspur. It would be interesting and instructive to see these and some of the greatly improved European forms grown side by side.

In referring to the white blackberry, it is said by Mr. Harwood that Mr. Burbank chose one plant out of 65,000. It would be interesting to know whether Mr. Burbank made an effort to produce a white blackberry, or was it what is called a sport. It appears to me that the "Iceberg" blackberry was an accident, for I do not know of anything in that line to work on that would be likely to give the results as they are.

Mr. Burbank has accomplished great things with the plum; mostly all of those so-called Japanese are the result of his manipulations. He now has 300,000 distinct varieties of plums, 60,000 peaches and nectarines, 5,000 to 6,000 almonds, 2,000 cherries, as many pears, 1,000 grapes, 3,000 apples, 1,200 quinces, 5,000 walnuts, the same number of chestnuts, with many thousands of other fruits, flowers and vegetables, which he is working on to improve.

Mr. Harwood relates very entertainingly how Mr. Burbank was walking one summer evening through his experimental grounds past a bank of verbenas, a scentless sort which he was breeding up into a finer variety. On this occasion he was attracted by a faint, sweet odor from the bed; he tried to locate the flowers emitting the perfume, but was unable to do so. A year later, passing by the bed, he was again attracted by the odor of the trailing arbutus.

With his characteristic patience he went over the plants one by one until, at last, he found the one that had the elusive odor. It was at once isolated, and its seeds were saved and planted with great care. Succeeding sets of seeds were planted, year by year the plants were challenged. The scent became more pronounced, continuing in its likeness to the arbutus, and becoming, at last, greatly intensified.

No doubt at all this is quite true, for it is no new thing to have fragrant verbena flowers. In the days when verbenas were more generally popular than they now are, some of the cultivated varieties at that time produced flowers with a decided odor, and in the evening it was when these flowers gave off their scent, which was truly suggestive of the trailing arbutus. I have not grown the verbena for many years, but as I remember them, some varieties were absolutely without fragrance, whereas others were decidedly sweet. While the color may not have influenced the odor, there were colors which were more likely to be scented than others. The scarlets and bright pinks were generally scentless, while the purples and whites most often had the arbutus-like smell. And, again, if my memory serves correctly, there were many variations from that rule. If there are any verbena growers present, they, I hope, will throw more light on this subject. If Mr. Dillon is present, who grows 500,000 verbenas annually, he may help us.

E. Sutermeister.

It will be remembered that Mr. Harwood, in introducing the verbena subject, stated that Mr. Burbank passed a bank of verbenas, a scentless variety, from which we might infer that he knew there were other varieties which were fragrant, but he did not say so; hence I have taken the liberty of mentioning the fact that there are many varieties already in cultivation which are quite fragrant.

Mr. Burbank has promised us a blue rose, "when he has time." I have heard it said by some florists that at certain periods of the year there are too many blue roses already. Let us hope that Mr. Burbank has in his mind's eye a blue rose, with the typical forget-me-not blue or with the hue of the Delphinium formosum, for nothing short of either of the two shades of blue, or something intermediate between them, will satisfy us.

Mr. Burbank has increased the size of the flower of a sedum, but which of the numerous species and varieties he has improved is not stated. He has raised a pampas grass with pink plumes, but what is the shade of pink? Is it the color of Carnation Enchantress or Scott or Lawson? It would be interesting to know.

Great things are expected from a new hybrid tobacco, which is stated to be much thriftier and better adapted to colder climates and finer in flavor than the best tobacco now grown.

Some statements are made to the effect that thirty-six apples, no two alike, were all grown from the seed of one apple. There is nothing unusual about that. It would be strange if the result had proven to be otherwise. Mr. Harwood evidently is not very familiar with grafting fruit trees, for he says:

In grafting apples, the same tree is used often year in and year out, as many as 40 apples growing on the tree at the same time.

What is the idea he wished to convey in that statement? Four hundred would not be a large crop of apples on a large tree. Let's go on further:

Sometimes other fruits are grafted upon the tree, so that there may be five hundred varieties of fruit growing at once from the parent tree.

Great Scott! I wish Mr. Harwood had taken the time to name a few of the "other fruits" grafted on the parent tree. I believe it is possible to have 500 varieties of apples on one tree if there were that number of twigs to graft upon and that number of varieties to graft. The so-called parent tree, even then could only be a foster parent at best.

The elaeagnus fruit has long been used for preserving, and it is good news to know that Mr. Burbank has added this to his other triumphs by improving it. The English walnut has had the bitter skin bred out of it, and the size of the kernel and the whiteness thereof have been increased. Good news! But here is a paragraph hard to understand:

In passing, it may be noted here that Mr. Burbank has accomplished that which Darwin hinted at, but accepted with reservation the grafting of one tree upon another and at the same time the transformation of the tree without fertilization, the accomplishment of a complete cross by the graft. He took a French plum unknown in America, and grafted it upon a Japanese plum. The graft bore no bloom, but the tree was recreated, if you will. Its seedlings took on a wholly new life and became hybrids, its vital essence was changed through the medium of the graft.

There is nothing at all difficult in grafting a French plum on a Japanese plum, even if the French plum were unknown in America. Here is something hard to understand. "The graft bore no bloom." Yet its seedlings took on a wholly new life and became hybrids. Where did the seedlings come from if this new creation bore no bloom? How could there be seedlings if there were no seeds. There could be no seeds if there were no bloom. If there were no petals, there must have been a pistil and stamens, or there could have been no fruit, no seeds, and consequently no seedlings. Something very important has been left out in what Mr. Harwood has been trying to elucidate. It is possible that the combination of the saps of the French and Japanese plums has caused the resultant tree to produce a shoot that was different from the stock, and this shoot would be called, generally speaking among ourselves, a sport, and in due course this would be increased in numbers by grafting or budding or cuttings and these would produce the flowers and the fruits and the seeds and eventually the seedings, and that, as it appears to me, is the only way the seedlings would come. If this is what Mr. Harwood means, here is a case where a plum-tree has been induced to sport through grafting. I read somewhere sometime ago that the white form of the H. R. rose Baroness Rothschild called Mabel Morrison was the result of the tea rose Niphetos being budded on the Rothschild, causing it to break and produce a shoot that bore white flowers; hence a sport, or, as Darwin would say, a bud variation.

Another change Mr. Burbank has made in flowers, but this was not mentioned by Mr. Harwood in his articles, was in the aquilegia, commonly called the columbine. By repeated selection he has fixed a type with the spurs eliminated. I must own up that I have not seen any of the flowers of these new types, but I confess I am prejudiced against this new innovation, because the long spurs appeared to me always to add greatly to the grace of the unique flowers of the columbine. Let us hope that this is a case where they have to be seen to be appreciated. It, however, goes to show what may be accomplished by persistent, well directed effort, with a worthy ideal to look up to and aim for.

Many of the achievements with which Mr. Burbank has been credited have been done by others. This is not said to detract from the wonderful work he has done, but to show how slow the people have been in coming to a realization of what has been going on among horticulturists, florists and gardeners in the improvements in plant life. For instance, when the Chinese primrose was introduced, about the year 1820 I think, the flowers were not larger than a nickel and a poor, washed-out pink in color. Now they are larger than a silver dollar, and have been so for over twenty years, both single and double flowers, and they come in nearly all the colors of the rainbow. Anyway, we can have them in the national colors of red, white and blue, with numerous intermediate shades.

All here present know what has been done with the carnation within the past ten years, and with these important improvements in flowers so far Burbank has had nothing to do.

Mr. Burbank has greatly increased the geranium (zonal pelargonium is meant, I believe) in size, and at the same time has made it far more brilliant in color.

This statement is most interesting, or at least as the late Horace Greeley would say, "interesting if true." Illustration of an old variety is given and the new one enlarged in form illustrated for comparison, but it is questionable whether Mr. Burbank's zonals are any larger than are those to be found in an up-to-date florist's establishment, and if he has any varieties more brilliant scarlet in color than an old French variety named Le Pilote and a Philadelphia variety known as Dennison's Seedling, I know most of us would not only like to see such a one but we would also like to own one.

But all honor to Burbank and all honor to those who have eventually recognized the good work he is doing and the hope for his still greater achievements, and all honor to the newspapers and magazines which have spread broadcast the knowledge of the possibilities of improvements in all vegetation, and here's hoping the same may awaken some kindred spirits and kindle an enthusiasm to aid Burbank in the grand work now going on.

INOCULATION OF SOIL.

The publication of the results obtained with pure cultures in inoculating leguminous plants has resulted in a very great demand being made upon the Department of Agriculture for inoculating material, says Albert F. Woods in a recent bulletin. The distribution made during 1904 was for the purpose of obtaining a large number of tests of the method under average farm conditions, and it was impossible to anticipate the demand which has arisen this spring, the total quantity prepared for spring distribution having been promised early in February. It is expected, however, that this fall and next spring a further distribution will be made as far as limited facilities will permit. Statements to the effect that the Department has stopped the distribution of these cultures are therefore erroneous. Applications for future distributions should state what legume is to be sown, time of sowing, and quantity of seed to be treated.

Commercial Production.

The patent which the Department of Agriculture holds upon the method of growing and distributing these organisms was taken out in such a way that no one can maintain a monopoly of the manufacture of such cultures. It is held in the name of Dr. George T. Moore, who developed and perfected the method. Upon application the Department furnishes without discrimination all necessary information, and as far as possible "starting" or foundation cultures, to the bacteriologists representing experiment stations and commercial concerns which claim to be properly equipped, but it does not in any way guarantee their product. It is not likely that persons without expert knowledge can successfully multiply cultures of these organisms for sale or distribution

Cost of Cultures.

The question of the proper price for the commercial product is causing considerable inquiry among prospective experimenters and is of importance. The expenses which a commercial concern must necessarily meet, such as rent, heat, light, insurance, postage, advertising, etc., aside from laboratory assistance and clerical hire, make any comparison with the cost to the government of similar cultures difficult. The statement that the cultures cost but a few cents an acre refers only to the raw materials which make up the package. It is more than probable that natural competition will considerably reduce the present valuation of the commercial product, and the wisdom of patenting the Department's methods to prevent the formation of a monopoly is already demonstrated.

Increasing Cultures.

We are receiving numerous requests from persons who have secured commercial cultures, as well as those sent out from the Department of Agriculture, for information as to the methods employed in producing a large quantity of liquid culture from the dry culture secured as a starter; that is, how to make an "acre culture" do for twenty-five or 100 acres. Such methods will give good results only when special precautions are taken, and on this account have not been generally recommended. The contaminations, such as yeasts, molds, etc., which are bound to occur to a greater or less extent, are apt to take possession of the culture solution in which the bacteria are being multiplied, and unless great care is taken in thoroughly sterilizing all utensils employed, the resulting culture will have no beneficial effect. The extra time required to secure sufficient growth of bacteria in ten gallons of solution from a dry culture originally intended to produce a one gallon liquid culture takes the risk from contamination much greater than when the dry culture is proportioned in size to a larger amount of solution. It is greatly sufficient cient to cloud the solution takes place within two days, the chances of securing an efficient culture are much better than where a longer time is taken; so that the volume of solution prepared should never exceed the actual requirements of the occasion.

The following directions are based on making ten gallons of liquid culture sufficient to inoculate twenty bushels of seed. By a little computation the directions may be adapted to five gallons or to any intermediate quantities.

Preparing the Culture Solution.

To prepare the culture solution, first select the tub, bucket, or other vessel in which you wish to grow the bacteria. Clean and scald it out thoroughly. For making the culture solution, rain water that has been thoroughly boiled and allowed to cool is best, though any good drinking water will answer. Add to ten gallons of water twelve ounces of either brown or granulated (preferably granulated) sugar, one and one-half ounces of potassium phosphate (monobasic), which can be obtained at any drug store, and one-sixteenth ounce (thirty grams) of magnesium sulphate. Stir until dissolved, then carefully open the small package containing the bacteria-laden cotton and drop the cotton into the solution. Do not handle any more than is absolutely necessary. Cover the tub with a moist, clean cloth to protect from dust, mold spores, etc. Keep in a warm place, but never let the temperature rise above blood heat. After twenty-four hours add six ounces of ammonium phosphate and allow the mixture to stand for another twenty-four hours. The liquid should now be cloudy and ready for use; if sufficient growth has not taken place to bring about this cloudiness, further time should be given, not to exceed a few days.

To inoculate seed use enough culture liquid to moisten the seed thoroughly—about one-half of a gallon per bushel. This inoculating may be done either in a tub or trough, or by sprinkling the culture liquid on the seed on a clean floor and stirring and turning the heaps of seed with shovels until all are thoroughly moistened. After inoculation the seed should be spread out in a clean, shady place until sufficiently dry to handle. If planting is not to be done at once, the seed must be thoroughly dried to prevent molding. Inoculating fields by soil transfer is attended by many dangers and is not recommended. The inoculated seed, if thoroughly dried, may usually be kept without deterioration for several months.

Keeping Cultures.

The question is frequently arising as to the possibility of the farmer's keeping over cultures from one year to another by soaking up a little of the liquid culture in cotton and drying this cotton. This proposed practice is not to be advised in any case. Contaminations take place so readily, and once started spread so rapidly, that for assured good results it is absolutely necessary to start with a pure culture. The pure culture, moreover, can only be prepared by a trained bacteriologist with laboratory facilities. These cultures in the dry state will keep, under ordinary conditions, from six months to a year.

Pure-Culture Inoculation.

The extensive experiments carried on by the Department of Agriculture during 1904 demonstrated the fact that, by the proper use of pure cultures, the nodule bacteria are actually carried into the soil in such a way as to form root nodules, and where other conditions are favorable the inoculation thus brought about makes possible the growth of each legume in soils where it had previously failed from the lack of bacteria. The original cultures used, however, must be prepared with the utmost care and with a view to preserving and increasing their natural power as "nitrogen fixers" rather than merely to make them grow under favorable conditions.

The Department is ready to coöperate with experiment stations and commercial firms, to give and to receive suggestions, to test the product of others, and to furnish, as far as possible, cultures to be tested in the laboratory and under field conditions.

Spiraea Van Houttei in Kansas.

SPIRAEA VAN HOUTTEI.

There are those among planters who consider Spiræa Van Houttei the premier among flowering shrubs, and certainly there are few among the subjects used by gardeners which could be pointed to as its superior. Perfectly hardy, it possesses a most graceful habit and a remarkable profusion of bloom, being at the same time one of earliest to flower. The accompanying picture might be taken for an illustration of that old text, "What's the Matter With Kansas," horticulturally speaking, for it is reproduced from a photograph made at Cherryvale, in that state, on April 27 and shows that in this respect Kansas is certainly all right. Usually Spiræa Van Houttei is catalogued as six feet high, but this specimen is a great deal more than that, and twelve feet in diameter. It is growing on the lawn of W. E. Dixon.

WHAT IS A GOOD BOSTON.

We recently bought 100 3-inch Boston ferns from a man who offered us "extra thrifty" stock at what seemed a cheap price for that kind of stock. Now we are wondering what constitutes an extra thrifty Boston. The box and the 100 plants, packing and all, weighed just thirty pounds. The average plant had four or five fronds. Is that enough? The fronds were from two to three feet long. We thought that was too thrifty and sent them back. Please describe what you think a 3-inch Boston should be like. P. & P.

This seems to be another illustration of the fact that the lowest priced stock may not prove to be the cheapest, and it would appear from the description that the plants in question would hardly rank in the class of extra quality. A good Boston fern in a 3-inch pot should be short, stocky, and well furnished, having six to nine fronds that would vary in length from nine to fifteen inches. If the plants are grown closely together on the bench, and have been in this size of pot for a length of time, some of the fronds would exceed these dimensions, but fronds three feet in length are certainly excessive for a plant of that size. W. H. Taplin.

SWEET PEAS.

I wish to ask how to grow sweet peas and have them in bloom for Thanksgiving. When should they be sown and how treated? W. H. M.

We have never picked sweet peas as early as Thanksgiving but know where it has been done. The seed was sown the first of August in about six inches of soil on the floor of the house, but a bench would do just as well. If you had no bed or bench vacant at that time you could sow a few seeds in 4-inch pots and plunge them outdoors and with a little support to the growing vines they need not be put on the bench until the end of September. A perfectly light house is a necessity and all the ventilation you can possibly give them until winter sets in. W. S.

JOHN F. SULLIVAN.

Like so many of the most successful men in the trade, big, hearty John F. Sullivan hailed originally from Philadelphia. He was born at Avondale, in the carnation belt, and gained his floricultural education in the environs of the Quaker city. He was with the Dingee & Conard Co., at West Grove, for a number of years in the early 70's, beginning at the bottom of the ladder and graduating as foreman of the rose department. Subsequently he spent a term at Louisville, with the firm of Nanz & Neuner. It was in 1886 that Mr. Sullivan located at Detroit, buying an establishment at that time devoted to rose growing. A few years later he bought his present place a few miles outside of town and known to many in the trade. In 1888 Mr. Sullivan started a retail store in a modest way, later removing to Woodward avenue, which is one of the finest business streets in America, where he has since maintained a very attractive store. Mr. Sullivan was a pioneer in his city in going into the most expensive retail districts with a flower store, but others have since followed his example.

Mr. Sullivan married while at Louisville and to this happy circumstance he attributes very much of the success which has come to him in life. Mrs. Sullivan has been his partner in business affairs as well as in those domestic. She manages the retail store and has a wide acquaintance in the trade. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan have four children, two sons and two daughters, the oldest of whom are also to be found in the store.

Mr. Sullivan has taken an active part in the affairs of the S. A. F. and of the Carnation Society. He was a director of the S. A. F. for one term and a leader in the entertainment of both the national society and the Carnation Society upon the occasions of their visits to Detroit. At the St. Louis convention of the S. A. F., Mr. Sullivan's friends proposed him for the secretaryship and he lacked no great number of votes of election.

FOR WINTER CUTTING.

Being located in a small town in the south, can you suggest something to plant for winter blooming besides carnations and roses? We heat by two 4-inch steam pipes running clear around the greenhouses and have two beds twenty and fifty feet long which we should like to occupy. J. A. W.

This will depend largely on whether what you cut is to be sold in this "small town" or whether you ship to a larger market, and very much on the condition of your house and what temperature you can keep up in cold weather. Mignonette is a good crop and gives almost continuous cutting. Bouvardia needs 60 degrees to be profitable but, if you have the market for it, it is profitable. Violets of course you know all about. If successful there is nothing beats them, but if not a success they are generally a total blank. Antirrhinums give a fair return during winter, and successive crops of sweet peas are profitable. If headroom and, again, if the market is right, a bench of smilax planted in early July is a good paying thing. There are a multitude of other winter flowering plants but they are better grown in pots and you can have successive crops.

W. S.

THE DOUBLE GYPSOPHILA.

"Gypsophila paniculata fl. pl. has not yet come much to the front," says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, "but I feel sure we shall yet see it as a most popular market plant for cut bloom. I persuaded one grower to try it when plants were rather expensive, and I hear from him that he was so well pleased with the result from the few plants that he had, that he has since bought it by the hundred. It comes in a little later than the ordinary G. paniculata. For associating with sweet peas and other flowers in light arrangements, there is nothing prettier, and when properly grown it will always command the attention of florists. It will grow as freely and under the same conditions as the ordinary form, but a little protection when the flowers begin to open will be a great advantage. Frame lights are generally to spare at the time it flowers, and these put over will keep the dust off, and also ensure the flowers opening almost a pure white. There is a little difficulty in propagating this, as it can only be done from cuttings. It is said that the best time is in August or September, treating it similarly to other herbaceous plants that are propagated at that time. I have succeeded fairly well in the spring, and the earliest cuttings have flowered the same season. A little bottom heat with a cool surface suits the cuttings best, and the tips may be taken out; this prevents them from starting and taking the sap from the base before the cuttings are callused."

THE FANCY PANSY.

"We have traveled a long way with the fancy pansy since M. Miellez, of Lille, sent over to E. G. Henderson & Son, of the Wellington Road Nursery, St. John's Wood, his first batch of new varieties he had been instrumental in improving," says Argus in the Horticultural Advertiser. "Andrew Henderson, fearing that the hot and dry London climate would prove fatal to the plants in summer, sent them to William Dean, then of the Bradford Nursery, Shipley, to grow them for the London firm. Here they did remarkably well, but as the climate, which is as cold as in the coldest parts of England, proved too rigorous for them to be exposed in the winter, the plants were lifted in autumn, divided and planted in a prepared bed in a cold frame, together with the young plants struck from cuttings during the summer; and in this way stock was soon increased. M. Miellez sent over two or three other batches of seedlings, and then his death stopped further supplies. Meanwhile, seedlings were raised at Shipley, and the improvement in the flower was rapid. The Scotch florists in particular took up the culture of the fancy pansy, and most of the new varieties are now raised in the north. Some of the French and German florists make a specialty of the fancy pansy, but their selections lack the substance, form, and in most cases, the brilliancy of the Scotch varieties.

"It is claimed for John Salter, of chrysanthemum renown, that he originated the fancy pansy, when residing at Shepherd's Bush, London, in the thirties. He was then an amateur, and selected striped and blotched varieties. It is natural to suppose that when in the early forties he established himself at Versailles, France, he took with him his fancy pansies, and no doubt distributed them. The revolution of 1848 drove Mr. Salter to Hammersmith, where he established the Versailles Nursery, and catalogued fancy pansies. In 1852, John Downie exhibited six varieties in Edinburg, and it is probable they represented varieties raised by Mr. Salter. The English show pansies, selfs, white grounds, and yellow grounds are still much grown in the north, but in the south they have practically ceased to be grown."

PANAX VICTORIAE.

I think the correct name of this panax should be P. fruticosum var. Victoriæ. The illustration shows a compact, handsome plant. The panax are really small trees or shrubs but this variety has the habit of sending up frequent new growths and, with the curled form of growth, pretty variegation and compact habit, it makes a very ornamental and a particularly handsome table plant. There is nothing special about its culture. Being evergreen there is no decided rest required, merely less water than when it is in active growth. In winter it should not be given a less temperature than 55 degrees at night. In appearance the panax much resemble the aralia. The botanical difference is not of interest to the average florist. W. S.

This prettily variegated plant is a relative of the Chinese ginseng, though not a native of China, P. Victoriæ having been discovered a few years ago on some of the South Pacific islands. It is a compact growing shrub, much branched and bearing leaves that are almost pinnate, the leaflets, more or less divided and edged with a white variegation.

Though introduced under a specific name, it is stated by botanists that P. Victoriæ is probably only a form of P. fruticosum, a species that seems to be quite variable, but this does not affect the fact that the plant in question is quite an attractive one when nicely grown, and one that may be sometimes used to advantage where a general collection of plants is handled for the retail trade.

One of the uses to which P. Victoriæ may be put is in the filling of vases and veranda boxes for outdoor decoration during the summer, its feathery foliage giving a good effect among other plants, and the panax being fully as hardy as Aralia Veitchii or A. Guilfoylei, both of which are good plants for this purpose.

But in using this or any other member of the aralia family for outdoor work we should always take into consideration the fact that plants that have been grown in a close, warm house are tender, both in foliage and root, and consequently they should not only not be put outdoors too early in the season, but should also be hardened off to some extent by a gradual exposure. It is the spring chill that is most frequently responsible for failure of tender foliage plants when placed in the open garden, often causing them to drop their leaves and look generally miserable for more than half the season.

But to return to our subject, P. Victoriæ is a very easy plant to manage and also quick in growth, and the most useful sizes for the purpose indicated are nice, stocky plants in 4 and 6-inch pots, and such plants may be grown on almost as readily as geraniums if given a rather light and rich soil and a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees during the winter nights, and also well supplied with light and moisture.

Propagation is readily effected by means of cuttings not only of the tops, but in common with most members of the aralia family short pieces of the stronger roots planted in sand or light soil and kept in a warm house will soon develop shoots, and may then be potted off either singly or several together in a pot, as may be best adapted for the purpose in view. W. H. Taplin.

SOME NEW HYBRID CLEMATISES.

"I would like to call attention now to three hybrid clematises obtained from species very remote from each other, since one is a perennial," says a writer in the Revue Horticole. "The perennial is that beautiful clematis with urceolate vermilion-red flowers. The shrub beclematises like Jackmani, rubella, Gipsy Queen, Perle d'Azur, Ville de Lyon, Comtesse de Bouchaud, Nellie Moser, Viticella venosa, modesta, etc., whose numerous varieties furnish our gardens with some of their most attractive flowers. Now that the introduction of the parents has been made, a glance at the offsprings will be sufficient to show that they are entirely different. So true is this, that, if these plants had been introduced as having been found in a wild state, there is no doubt that they would have been accepted without hesitation as authentic new species. The presence of Clematis coccinea is revealed by the brilliant tinges of vermilion-red. The following descriptions are supplied:

"Mme. Raymond Guillot, herbaceous annual; leaves deeply divided, reddish petioles; peduncles one flowered; buds purple on their first appearance; flowers of a velvety purple. The product of Gipsy Queen crossed with coccinea.

"Mme. Moret, herbaceous annual; leaves with rounded divisions, obtuse, very irregularly lobed; peduncles many flowered; buds green at first, reddening toward the top; flowers brilliant crimson, with bright red veining; sepals vinous red on the exterior. It has not yet produced seeds. The result of Comtesse de Bouchaud crossed with coccinea.

"Mme. Lerocher, herbaceous; leaves large, with large, rounded divisions; peduncles generally bearing three flowers; buds short, very thick, deeply furrowed, green at first, passing to pink at the time of opening; flowers white, margined with pink. Ville de Lyon crossed with coccinea.

"This race of clematis is distinguished by the ease with which it accommodates itself to high temperatures. The plants flower magnificently in July and August under the hottest sun, and develop their blossoms splendidly upon sun-scorched walls."

The Market.

No feature of the flower business has developed so rapidly in the past two or three years as the Memorial day trade. It has become something phenomenal. And this year marked another big increase in the volume of business in spite of the fact that the teamsters' strike undoubtedly kept more or less stock out of the market. It is worth while making a mental note for reference next year that Memorial day calls for a great deal more stock than any other holiday and that in point of money value it ranks next to Christmas and Easter.

The business did not start until Friday but from then until Monday night every wholesaler was on the jump and hardly able to give the attention which individual orders demanded. As an indication of what the business amounted to, one house shipped on Sunday seventy-seven orders and there were none of them in small boxes. The express companies delivered the incoming stock in satisfactory shape and the wholesalers' teaming arrangement operated splendidly in getting the out-going boxes to the depots. While Friday and Saturday saw very big business, still the bulk of the shipments were on Sunday afternoon. Wabash avenue is dead at that time and the wholesalers pre-empted the west sidewalk just north of Randolph street, a spot familiar to practically everyone in the trade. Here big squares were drawn out and marked with the times of out-going trains. As fast as a box was ready it was hustled over to this spot and placed in the proper square. Of course, the 700 or more boxes were never all together at one time but the huge piles of boxes which grew as fast as five teams could make the trains served to give many people a new idea as to the extent of the shipping business in Chicago. There was a good deal of shipping again on Monday and a big local trade and the extent of the shipping on Tuesday was a surprise to everyone.

There were immense quantities of stock to do business with but practically all the standard items were in good request and firm in price. The one exception to this was long American Beauties. In this department there was a surplus and long, fancy stock was sold in big lots at cheap prices. The principal shortage developed in carnations and for several days it was difficult for the local retailers to supply their needs, as the wholesalers were putting all carnations out on shipping orders as fast as received from the growers. Many out-of-town orders for carnations were turned down or at least cut materially. But this did not warrant an increase in price.

and it may interest you to know that the Primula obconica adv. placed with you about last Thanksgiving brought me one dollar and nineteen cents for every cent invested. How is that for returns?

A. J. BRYAN.

Washington, N. J.
May 18, 1905.

Memorial day is not a time for high prices and most of the shipping orders named a price limit. Traveling quality was not like mid-winter but it was all that could be expected at this season.

There were too few peonies. The local cut was just coming on. In fact, the buds were too tight to appeal to the average buyer. There were two or three lots in cold storage, Kennicott Bros. Co. having a very large supply of stock from Missouri which was in great demand. The quality was not up to what it has been in the last year or two, due to the early hot spell, followed by unusual cold. It made the flowers small, but the buyers were very glad to get them. The local cut of peonies promises to be on in full force in a very few days. A few Old Red were ready for Decoration day.

There were large supplies of Bridesmaid roses, but not so many Bride. Liberty was fairly plentiful and Chatenay very abundant. It was distinctly noticeable that the demand was for carnations and that roses, except Liberty, did not move freely until the buyers found that carnations were out of the question.

There were large quantities of sweet peas, valley, lilies, feverfew, spiræa, daisies, tulips and other odds and ends of stock, which cleaned up in first-class shape considering the slow sale they have had at other recent holidays. Cape jasmine was received in only limited quantities, but the few houses which handled them did not find them in great demand.

Various Notes.

Bituminous coal is selling in Chicago at the lowest price reached in ten years, said to be due to the teamsters' strike, which is affecting the coal industry all over the middle west. Tempting offers and long time credits are being made by coal men to consumers who are in a position to take in considerable quantities.

Under date of May 24, John Mangel notified the trade that J. G. Johnson is no longer connected with the business at 163 Wabash avenue and that Mr. Mangel has no connection with the business conducted under his name at Forty-seventh street and Lake avenue.

During the week the teamsters' strike has spread to the lumber industry and the Adam Schillo Co. is one of the firms affected. They are, however, making prompt deliveries in spite of the trouble. The strike is supposed to be spreading but in fact is weaker and is having less effect on business every day.

To those of the local wholesalers who have had similar experiences, it may be interesting to know that a Greek in New York went into bankruptcy the other day with fifty-four creditors with claims exceeding $5,000, but no assets. Many wholesale florists were on his list.

J. A. Budlong is handling very fine irises and other outdoor stock from the Peterson nursery. The iris is not a shipping flower but it is in good demand locally.

A local wholesaler found that he could not move long Beauties at the beginning of last week, so he put them into a cold storage warehouse for Memorial day. They came out in fine shape and sold promptly but how long they lasted in a warm room deponent saith not.

Bassett & Washburn have bought stock of Breitmeyer's antirrhinums and will have them in considerable quantity next season.

Peter Veckler, who has been very successful with a Beauty section for John Muno, is visiting his mother in Germany.

Governor Deneen says that he will appoint a practical man as superintendent of the west parks. Politicians have been favored in the past.

D. J. Murphy and his bride are here from Boston.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had a large lot of fine candidum lilies but did not find them in as brisk demand as had been expected for Decoration day.

Percy Jones has enlarged his space in the Market and has put in a good sized ice-box for his private use.

Peter Reinberg had a tremendous cut of carnations the past week, 120,000 whites alone in three days. There was a quiet little celebration at the new Reinberg home one evening last week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Reinberg's twenty-second wedding anniversary. Leonard Kill now lives in the house Mr. Reinberg vacated.

Emil Buettner will be ready with a big cut of peonies in a day or two. All the local growers will have quality much better than the southern crop.

There was "nothing doin'" at the club meeting May 25. Everybody too busy.

Of course there were growers who came in with a big lot of stock after the market was practically over. They were loser by not getting the stuff in Monday but will come out fairly well for Wednesday saw very light receipts. Stock received Thursday will hold over to Friday, and Friday and Saturday have been very good days in recent weeks. So everybody ought to be satisfied.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market flows on with little change. Decoration day caused a ripple on the surface but no stirring of the depths. There is a flood of outdoor flowers. Prices are about the same in all lines as last week and the same adjectives are used by the wholesalers to express their opinions of the business. Peonies and iris are already abundant. Retail windows are brilliant. Orchids are extensively used for their decoration. Fine hydrangeas are largely used. There are plenty of lilies and gladioli increase daily in supply. Stock is all superb in quality.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Weber, Mrs. Weber, Miss Weber and Theo. Miller, of St. Louis, spent Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in New York and sail Thursday morning for Germany.

J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, was in New York a few days last week, visiting relatives on his way from his old home in Avondale, Pa., to which he was called by the death of his father, at the age of 83 years. Mr. Sullivan spent considerable time visiting the wholesale and retail sections of this city and a few of the suburban growers. He promises the usual large delegation of Detroit enthusiasts at the Washington convention.

The big sale of greenhouse property at Ditzenberger Bros., Bay Ridge, takes place this week Thursday. Auction sales are in full blast at the regular depots. Cleary's Horticultural Hall had an immense Decoration day sale on Monday, a happy innovation that paid well.

The largest New York Florists' Club meeting in its history takes place June 12. The ladies are to be bountifully provided for. Chairman Nugent will not only care for the "inner man" but has a fine literary entertainment on the program as well. The question box is full of topics of interest. Peonies, strawberries and novelties will be on exhibition. A word as to the wisdom of coming early is suggested. There will not be room for all. It is the last meeting of the club until September and the last before the club's outing, June 28. Programs will be ready for distribution at this meeting.

One of the most artistic and beautiful floral effects produced in this vicinity for many a day was Harry Hoffmeyer's work at the funeral of Kirke LeShelle, the playwright. Apple blossoms from his favorite trees, the last flowers his eyes looked upon before the final curtain was rung down, were woven into a beautiful blanket and carpet, and were scattered everywhere in and around the home, producing one of the most pathetic and charming ensembles we have ever seen. Mr. Hoffmeyer and his force of assistants spent nearly a day on the decorations.

The number of June weddings booked by the prominent retailers is very encouraging. Some very elaborate ones are on the tapis. Commencements, school exercises, graduations, and sailings for Europe will make the next four weeks about the liveliest of the year.

A goodly number of nurserymen from New York and vicinity will attend the convention at West Baden, Ind., June 14. Fred Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., and H. T. Jones, of Elizabeth, N. J., are among the speakers from the east. On June 20 the seedsmen meet at Alexandria Bay, Thousand Islands. New York will be well represented there, but the multitude will go to the big gathering of the S. A. F. at Washington. Nobody in New York thinks of missing that.

Scollay, of Brooklyn, has just secured an order from the city, the contract involving the sum of $30,000. It is hard to find a boiler firm in the east that is not overwhelmed with business this season. Greenhouse building goes on in all directions most encouragingly. The outlook is optimistic. This country is only in its infancy. The florist and nursery interests are only yet in the early stages of development. There is no limit to the prospective advancement of horticulture.

The summer flower show of the Horticultural Society of New York, will take place June 14 and 15 in the Bronx park museum building.

Daniel B. Long, of Buffalo, called last week.

Mr. Jones' greenhouses, at Nutley, N. J., were visited by thieves last week to the tune of $200.

The New York florists with branches at Newport are already busy at the society city. Wadley & Smythe have just issued a catalogue of Decorative Art illustrative of their fine landscape work and their expert moving of large trees that is attracting much attention.

A visit to the greenhouses of John Scott last week at Keap street, Flatbush, was a revelation. Over 50,000 young Scottii are ready for distribution, fine stock in grand condition, and there will be 50,000 more in a few weeks, so rapidly do they increase. The sale for plants in 6-inch to 8-inch pots all winter has been phenomenal. Not Killarney seems to be growing in favor, if the demand for young plants is an indication. Some of our eastern rose growing experts declare the supply can never meet the increasing demand. The nurserymen have taken it in hand and are making it a specialty for outdoor planting, as it has proved itself perfectly hardy. The gardeners on private estates are very enthusiastic about it. Colen Ogston, who succeeded the late George Savage at the Kimball estate, Rochester, planted 200 Killarney last year and Mr. Siebrecht says he is so well pleased that he has sent orders for enough plants to completely fill one of his large greenhouses.

Michael Rovatzos, formerly at 44 West Twenty-ninth street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $5,368 to fifty-four creditors. He has no assets. Part of the debts were contracted as a partner in the firm of Rovatzos & Moltz. Among the creditors are J. I. Raynor, $1,076; Demetrius Pronstzos, $450; Thomas Young, $363, and R. Dreyer, $315.

The bowlers of the New York Club have commenced practice again and from the weekly averages made from now until the first of August, the team to represent New York at the Washington tournament will be selected. Thum's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street, have been decided upon and all desiring to compete for the honor of team membership are requested to be on hand promptly at 8 o'clock every Friday evening. No better facilities for practice can be had in the city and the conveniences are perfect. The scores last Friday evening were:

The Market.

Memorial day trade has again been very satisfactory and general opinion seems to be that it went ahead of last year. Certainly stock of all kinds sold remarkably well. While a good many flowers came in on May 29, the market on May 27 was the heaviest, a tremendous quantity of flowers appearing. Roses sold out remarkably well. American Beauties made up to $30; Liberties in a few cases $15 to $20; select Brides and Maids went up to $10 and $12, other grades from $2 to $8. Carnots and Kaiserins sold at from $4 to $10. Some fine flowers of these were seen. In carnations extra fine Harry Fenn, Prosperity and one or two other kinds made $5 to $6, other grades making from $2 to $4, whites as usual going the slowest. Fair Maid, Enchantress and Lawson went well. The first named seemed to be in especially good demand.

Easter lilies were very scarce and made $12.50 per hundred. Many more could have been sold. Very few callas were seen. Gladioli made $10 to $12 per hundred for the best, small spikes making half these prices. Candytuft and feverfew made 50 cents per bunch, spiræa $2, single stocks $1 and double $2 to $2.50 per hundred stalks. Sweet peas were rather scarce. The best made $1.50. Lilac was abundant and good, 50 cents per bunch being average price. The abundance of outdoor lily of the valley softened the price of this flower, prices ranging from $1 to $2.50 per hundred. Spanish iris made $4. The only other bulbous stock noted was small lots of Narcissus poeticus and its double form.

Lilac was in splendid condition for Memorial day. Only a few of the late tulips and narcissi remained, owing to the drought. Some German iris were available, but Spiræa Van Houttei, deutzia, Viburnum opulus and other shrubs sometimes available were hardly in season. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, adiantum and hardy ferns all had a big sale.

Please stop our advertisement of carnations; all sold.

A. RELYEA & SON.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

May 18, 1905.

Various Notes.

Houghton & Clark will remove from their present quarters in the basement of the Hotel Berkeley to 396 Boylston street, where they will have commodious quarters and a splendid show window.

A fire caused by a spark from a locomotive caused considerable damage to J. Tailby & Son, of Wellesley, on May 25. All their packing cases and many flower boxes, etc., were consumed. One of the employes was burned about the face in fighting the flames.

We are pleased to report the genial E. Sutermeister as improving nicely from his recent accident. His many friends hope to see him around again very soon.

Galvin, on Tremont street, had a nice window of nymphæas in variety the past week, also some good plants of Calla Elliottiana.

The picnic arranged by the members of the two flower markets will be held on the farm of Robert Montgomery, at Natick, on June 3. As many as possible will leave Boston at 12 o'clock. A base ball game between the two markets and a general good time is being arranged for and good weather only is needed to make it a success.

E. N. Peirce & Son had 100,000 spikes of spiræa for Memorial day, which found a ready market.

Bernard A. McGinty, for ten years with Welch Bros., and for the past two years salesman for N. F. McCarthy & Co., will open a wholesale commission business on his own account on or about September 15. Mr. McGinty is widely and favorably known among both growers and retailers and we feel sure will succeed in his undertaking.

William Nicholson had a fine house of double feverfew for Memorial day. He soon disposed of 1,200 bunches on May 27. He could not begin to fill orders for marguerites.

Wilfred Wheeler, of Concord, the secretary of the Music Hall market, has been chosen chairman of the fruit committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in place of the late Warren Fenno.

Prof. C. S. Sargent has invited the board of directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to inspect the Arnold Arboretum and his estate at Holm Lea, Brookline, on June 3.

A florist some thirty miles from Boston, who grew a bench of that good old Calceolaria Golden Gem in a cold house found it paid him well for Memorial day. Strange that it is not more grown. As a pot plant it is of easy culture and stands finely in a dwelling house.

J. Tailby & Son have a fine batch of Nicotiana Sanderæ in bloom, also a nice lot of their new yellow calla and of the variety Elliottiana.

A number of the florists paraded in the Knights Templar procession in Boston on May 24. The wife of one of these gentlemen, a well known rose grower in Natick, thinks it was too late to keep the parade on until midnight and her husband away from home until 1:30 a. m. next day.

At a meeting of the directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on May 27 it was voted to tender the use of the hall to the American Carnation Society on January 24 and 25 and to the American Rose Society to meet once more at the spring show in March. We would have liked to see the two societies unite next year, but all the same they will be warmly received.

A check for $1,000, a bequest of the late John L. Chaffin, has been paid to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the interest to be devoted to prizes for roses of merit.

Unless we have warm weather during the next few days it will probably be necessary to postpone for a few days the rhododendron show scheduled for June 3.

A recent drive through the Arnold Arboretum and parkways showed them to be in fine condition considering the extreme dryness of the season. In addition to the lilacs at the Arboretum the hardy azaleas are very fine, those on Hemlock Hill being especially brilliant, rivaling in this respect any of the tender Azalea Indica. These are of Japanese origin and should be seen to be appreciated. A florist who had such a display for Memorial day would be in a seventh heaven of bliss.

In both parkways and Arboretum we noted a considerable death roll in trees and shrubs. Oaks planted twenty-six years were gone, large elms were dead, also other varieties of many years' standing. The cause of these deaths seems rather inexplicable, as others of the same varieties growing side by side were in perfect health.

Lord & Burnham are engaged at present on following among other contracts: H. F. Littlefield, Worcester, one rose and one carnation house; Schlatter & Son, Springfield, carnation house; Rhode Island Hospital, Providence, greenhouse and workroom; P. M. Olin, Bath, Me., two rose houses.

Dr. H. P. Wolcott has been elected a director of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in place of the late Warren Fenno.

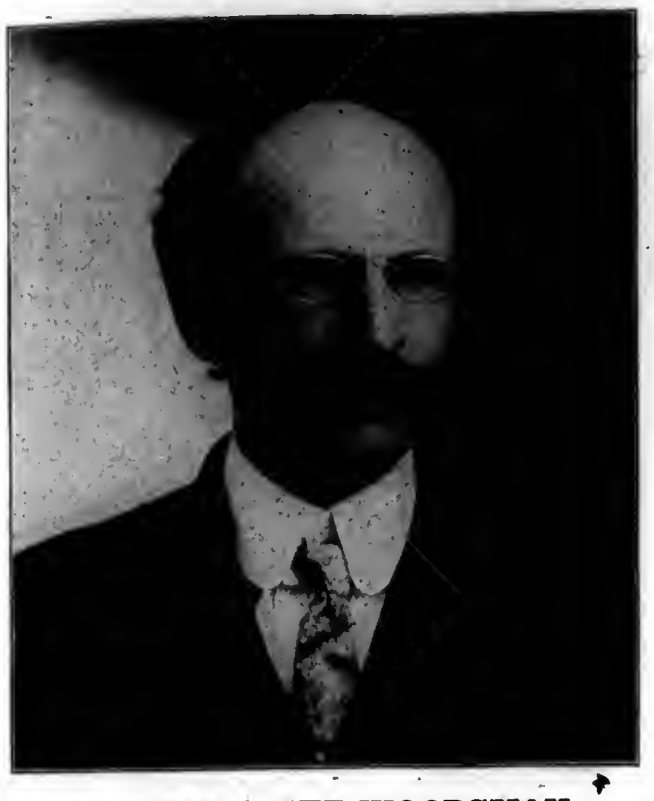
PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Decoration day for shops in the heart of this city is quite a tame affair. It is livelier, much livelier, for the places near the cemeteries, while in many nearby towns, notably in central Pennsylvania, the volume of business is enormous, larger than at any other time during the entire year. This demand from out of town was largely for peonies and carnations, though other flowers were used and some greens. To meet it the wholesalers had an exceptionally good supply of peonies and a supply of carnations that left much to be desired, both as to quality and quantity, really good stock often being hard to obtain at any price.

A hurried look over the market leads to the belief that Edward Swayne, of Wawaset, has fairly won the highest peony honors, his shipments of Festiva maxima seen at Samuel S. Pennock's being exceptionally fine. The best brought $2 a dozen. Good ordinary stock brought from $5 to $8 per hundred. Carnations and lilies about doubled in price. Roses, sweet peas and other flowers merely stiffened a little. There were a good many snowballs used locally. I am inclined to think that the volume of business will be found to have exceeded that of past years. The outlook for next week is very bright.



A Half Hour With the Commodore.

"Are you lost?" was the Commodore's greeting, as his visitor appeared in the doorway of one of his houses. Every florist in the country who has ever been to an S. A. F. convention will want to know just what the genial John Westcott was doing and how his place looked. Now, for the first question. The Commodore was not fishing, nor was he mixing punch. The idea that proficiency in these two fine arts is the result of unremitting effort is erroneous. Fishermen and punch mixers are born, not made. The Commodore was selling geraniums. This may seem to you a very ordinary and commonplace occupation, but if you could have been with me you would not think so. The Commodore had such a pleasant smile and such a happy way of saying bright little things that the lovely ladies were loath to leave and bought, I fancied, more geraniums than they had intended—and such geraniums! Not the everyday stock that when sold at market price scarcely leaves two pennies to rub together, but fine plants with big trusses of bloom that command fifty per cent over the usual price.

You will want to know the trick. John Westcott said he had used a little fire heat on the damp nights in mid-May. Wm. H. Westcott said the varieties were choice. They were Alphonse Ricard, Beaute Poitevine and Jean Viaud. Phil was surprised at sight of a registering thermometer in the house. It was explained, however, that this was a relic of the Easter lilies and not required by Alphonse or Jean.

Now for the place. There were more of those fine geraniums, some ordinaries and the usual assortment of bedding stock in condition better than is usually seen at this busy time. The frames were full of Decoration day plants, hardy roses, spiræas just coming into bloom, and other things, including a prettily leaved Alternanthera brilliantissima—George Huster's pet—and aurea nana, with broad foliage.

A north side house was filled with baskets filled, ready to take to the silent city across the way. A stone wall forming the south side of this house was covered with hardy ivy. A very remunerative crop is annually harvested. There are a lot of decorative plants, some hydrangeas in bloom and a house of camellias for which the place is noted. These camellias, about thirty in number, are planted out in a solid bed down the center of a high house. They are immense plants, trees would be a more accurate term, reaching to the roof and affording plenty of space beneath their spreading branches for growing shade-

The man who gave you the Wild smilax.

SOMETHING NEW

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call your attention to the

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves, and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not. Will you try a case on these terms?

THE VERDICT OF THE TRADE

The case of Huckleberry was very satisfactory as a decorating green, and we wish to compliment you on the new discovery for decorating at this time of year.

loving plants. H. H. Battles engaged all the flowers of these once fashionable plants last season. Stephanotis floribunda was in bloom. Very sweet and graceful it looked, with its festoon of its fragrant, pure white buds and blossoms. The beds and velvet greensward in front, as well as the planting about the Commodore's attractive home nearby are in excellent condition. The whole place bespeaks of men who devote thought and energy to their chosen calling.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer arrived in Europe safely.

Charles E. Fliegel, manager for Mrs. Alburger, has just completed a very strenuous season at Laurel Hill. A great number of prettily filled baskets have been put in place and many beds filled, while two men and a big wagon spent over a week filling the vases that were too heavy to move from the cemetery.

T. James McCarty, of J. M. Connelly & Co., of Charleston, S. C., was in this city recently.

M. Rice & Co. report their May business was largely in excess of last year. They are very busy getting ready to move to their new building at 1220 Race street next week.

Fred J. Michell returned on Monday from a successful business trip. He went to Washington, D. C., and Alexandria, Va.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports an increased demand for Memorial day supplies. Mr. Berkowitz says that the demand for metallic designs was particularly heavy, exhausting the surplus in readiness for this holiday and taxing the productive facilities of their factory. The steamers Oxonia and Astoria have just brought in fresh consignments of baskets, which are being rapidly supplied to customers. Four express wagons were loading at their warehouse at one time.

It is with deep regret that I record the sad death of Mrs. Emily Gaul Meehan, wife of Joseph Meehan and mother of Charles E. Meehan, which occurred last Saturday morning. The funeral took place on Wednesday from her residence, 69 Pleasant street, Germantown. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week started off with considerable more activity than was expected and the wholesalers report better demand. The cool weather has shortened up cut flower production. The supply of high grade stock is falling somewhat. The cool nights of late have mildewed some of the rose stock very badly and especially the Bride. There seems to be plenty of fancy long Beauties, also Bridesmaid, Kaiserin, Gate and Carnot. Jacqueminots are expected in this week and should sell well. Carnations have shortened up considerably and are not being slaughtered as they have been. Fancy stock is again being held at a fair price.

Peonies are becoming scarce and so are Harrisii and callas. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful each day. A few gladiolus spikes are coming in but not many as yet. Some good valley is being shipped to this market. Thousands of cape jasmine are being shipped from Texas, the Third street commission men handling the bulk of them at $5 per thousand. Smilax, adiantum, Sprengeri and common and fancy ferns are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was with us the past week.

Charles Kuehn, Henry Johann and Fred Ammann visited Max Herzog's place together the past week. The two latter were here buying building supplies.

The many friends of John Steidle will be glad to learn that he has recovered from his recent illness and is making preparations to entertain the club members at his place next Thursday afternoon.

Fred Weber, Mrs. Weber, Miss Adele Weber and Theo. Miller left Sunday night for New York. They sail June 1 for Germany.

Mrs. Wm. Geisel, widow of the late Wm. Geisel, who back in 1869 was one of the leading florists of Louisville, Ky., is visiting her daughter here. Your correspondent was employed by Mr. Geisel in the year above mentioned.

George Wagner closed his store on Maryland avenue the past week. The store goes back to its original lessee, E. H. Michel, of the Michel Plant and Bulb Co.

Charles Schoenele will soon leave bachelor's quarters and join the benedicts. Then "Rose" will have another thorn. Charlie is at present with Mrs. M. M. Ayers on Grand avenue.

Frank Fillmore, state vice-president of the S. A. F., will be on hand at the next meeting of the club with blank applications for those wishing to join the society before the August meeting.

Fred Meinhardt, whose place is adjacent to the cities of the dead and who does the bulk of the work there, has had all he could possibly do this spring and there are scarcely any bedding plants left for sale.

On Friday night a banquet was tendered Messrs. Weber and Miller by a few friends at the Missouri Athletic Club. A large floral ship adorned the head table, fifteen attending.

The next Florists' Club meeting will take place next Thursday afternoon at John Steidle's place, in Central, Mo. The members are requested to meet at the corner of Delmar and De Baliviere avenues in time to take the one o'clock Creve Corner car and go in a body. Brother Steidle expects every member to come and bring the ladies. Five applications will be voted upon, also other very important business will come before this meeting.

HOT WATER HEAT.

I am building a house 24x80 feet for mixed stock, to be heated by hot water in 1½-inch pipes. How many runs of pipe do I need to carry a night temperature of 50 degrees when it is 20 degrees below zero outside? How should the pipes be distributed, all under the outside benches or part under the middle benches? The sides of the house are five feet high, with three feet of boards and tar paper and two feet of glass. The ridge is twelve feet high and both gables are glass. How large a boiler do I need? J. H. B.

With both ends of the house filled with glass, and exposed on all sides it will be necessary to put in twenty lines of 1½-inch pipe in order to maintain the temperature you mention. It will be desirable to place twelve or fourteen of the lines of pipe under the side benches and the balance under the middle bench. If a 2-inch overhead-flow pipe be used, eighteen returns will be sufficient. Valve some of the pipes, for you don't have 20 degrees below every night in winter. A boiler of about five or six rated horsepower, or one having about seventy-five square feet of heating surface, will be required. However, a larger boiler than that actually required is always preferable. L. C. C.

Field of Australian Brown Onion at Waldo Rohnert's, Gilroy, Cal.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

IT is reported that Luther Burbank has a new yellow calla lily.

REPORTS from the pea growing sections are favorable; everything seems to be about as it should be.

THE report from California is of the usual small proportion of large sizes of calla bulbs and a good crop of the smaller sizes.

THE Prior Seed Co., Minneapolis, will shortly remove to a new double store on Seventh street, the building being now in course of erection.

CHARLES HENDERSON, of New York, is in Europe, accompanied by Mrs. Henderson. They have visited the principal firms in England and Ireland.

A HOLLAND house is offering a new single early tulip called Rose la Reine, like the ordinary La Reine except that the color at opening is a bright rose and is retained until the petals fall. It is said to force easily and come in at least ten days earlier than La Reine.

THE onion set fields in the vicinity of Chicago that went back on account of the heavy rains have adjusted themselves. In the adjusting process many bare spots have appeared and the crop in a general way is not at all what it would have been had there been no drawbacks. It is thought by the most experienced growers that at least one-third of the crop is spoiled.

THE British Nursery and Seed Trade Association advertises its objects to be: "To collect and disseminate information beneficial to members, collection of debts; investigation of bankruptcies and assignments, attending creditors' meetings, making trade inquiries and supplying status reports; members afford to each other through the secretary mutual private information as to the financial position and extent of credit which may be given."

WATSONIA ARDERNEI is being pushed by English bulb dealers.

A. G. TRUMBULL, formerly of the Trumbull Seed Co., and later president of the Missouri Seed Co., has associated himself with J. G. Peppard, at Kansas City.

FROM reports it seems that the acreage of peas planted is about equal to last year, and the quantity of beans that will go into the ground for seed crops will not be as large as last season's planting.

CUCUMBER for seed in the Michigan section is being planted. The ground is cold and the weather rather damp for the purpose, but better things are expected from now on and a good stand is hoped for.

AT Chicago the market gardeners are calling for beans in good sized lots. Late cabbage seed is not selling as well as it did last year. Retail counter trade is on the wane and the jobbers are busy with turnip seed.

SEEDSMEN have the past season had a strong demand for nitrogen fixing bacteria as recommended for trial by the Department of Agriculture and supplied commercially by an eastern firm. Next season the call will be many times greater but there will be other sources of supply.

LATE reports from the sections where the onion for commercial purposes is grown are to the effect that the crop has been very much cut down by the adverse weather conditions of the past three weeks, and that the acreage now standing is not likely to produce more than a fair average crop. It was feared that owing to the unusually large quantity of seed sown this spring that a swamping crop would be the result. The evening up process caused by the bad weather will likely prove a benefit to the growers in the end.

MAILING WITHOUT STAMPS.

The postoffice department is at work on a new set of regulations governing the mailing of catalogues, etc., without stamps affixed. As the official who drew up the regulations in force since the law went into effect, admits: "Hindsight is better than foresight and the present plan has been proved unnecessarily cumbersome and will soon be superseded by a department order doing away with much of the detail and simplifying the method so that it is hoped to make the privilege a valuable assistance to both the public and the department." As a matter of fact it is believed that the department found that the amount of red tape with which it had been thought necessary to surround the privilege had rendered the law practically inoperative.

SEED GROWING IN COLORADO.

Frank T. Emerson, manager of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., writes as follows under date of May 29:

"In relation to the state of Colorado being a desirable locality for the production of vine seeds, I beg to state that we have been having vine seeds grown in the above state for the past five or six years, beginning in a small way as an experiment, and increasing our acreage at several different growing stations. Our production one year of one variety of musk melon alone, viz., the Rocky Ford cantaloupe, exceeded 45,000 pounds, from which our customers have always obtained results that could not be more satisfactory.

"We have had a large acreage of cucumber, melons, pumpkin and squash at several different growing stations in Colorado during the time mentioned, and can furthermore state that we have been well pleased with the results obtained, wherein, as Mr. Burrell states in his communication of last week, the conditions were favorable both in relation to the quality and condition of land and as to the available supply of water for irrigation purposes.

"Our object in having vine seeds grown in Colorado was for the purpose of placing crops in localities where they would not all be subjected to the same possible adverse conditions, so as to successfully depend upon our getting crops from these points in the event of possible failures and short crops at our several growing stations in the state of Nebraska.

"If, in conducting this business in Colorado, intelligent and responsible farmers only are engaged, who have the proper kind of soil and proper irrigation facilities, and if they are treated in an upright, business-like manner, we cannot imagine any cause for any such statement as that referring to Colorado as being an unsafe locality in which to grow vine seeds. This, of course, is based upon the supposition that reference is made to Rocky Ford and vicinity.''

SOUTHERN CORN FOR SEED.

A bulletin of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, prepared in the Office of Experiment Stations, says that there is a popular belief that sweet corn for seed cannot be grown year after year in the south without deterioration in quality. On the other hand it is stated that ''the Stabler family in Maryland has originated and grown three distinct varieties of sweet corn, all of which are recognized as of the highest quality. No seed from the north has been used on the Stabler farm for the past twenty-six years. S. N. Hyde, of Baltimore, states that since 1878 he has been growing his own sweet corn seed for his canning business and for twenty-five years put up a pack from Maryland-grown seed of Egyptian sweet corn that brought the highest price of any canned corn on the American market. In Harford county Charles W. Baker in 1904 grew a crop of 500 acres of sweet corn for canning purposes. The variety grown was a strain of Evergreen obtained originally from Connecticut. Mr. Baker grows his own seed and has not changed seed for twenty-five years. In the vicinity of Aberdeen, Md., nearly 7,000 acres of sweet corn was grown in 1904, nearly all from Maryland seed.''

OUTDOOR VALLEY.

I am interested in the subject of outdoor lily of the valley as discussed in recent issues of the Review and shall try a bed for my own use here in Missouri. Is there any difference in the pips for outdoor planting and the ones for forcing? What kind should I order and when should they be planted? When could I begin to pick the flowers? S. S. B.

Beds of valley are common the country over but they are usually so crowded that the spikes are poor, wiry things and the bells very small. I am not able to say whether there is any difference between those found growing in our old gardens and the imported roots but I should prefer to start with the latter. The strongest and best pips need not be bought for the purpose but the stronger you start with the sooner you will get a profitable crop. If labor will admit of it, I am convinced that roots can be grown here that will produce as fine flowers as any that can be imported. November is a good time to make a bed and it should be not more than four or five feet wide, so that it is handy to cover with some sash, either shaded glass or cheese-cloth, and also keep clear of weeds. In flowering time it must be protected from rains. A bed once established would be good for ten years and then only needs digging up, dividing and replanting with sufficient space to be no more expense for another ten years. Buy your pips from any reliable dealer.

W. S.

MIGNONETTE.

We want to grow a house of mignonette this winter and would like to have you tell us what kind would be the best for the New York market, and when to sow the seed. Would it be better to pinch it back so as to make it branch? We have a house three feet high on the eaves. Will that be head-room enough?

A. R.

Yes, your house will be high enough if it is three feet from the bed or bench to the glass but it should not be much less. The best time to sow would be July 15 to 20. Mignonette is very difficult to transplant and therefore the surest way is to sow three or four seeds in a spot and let the spots be one foot apart. When the seedlings are an inch or two high thin out to one strong plant. A foot apart is close enough. When the plant is three or four inches high pinch out the leader to make it branch. Your house must be light and well ventilated. If it is on a side bench you intend to grow mignonette, then there should be side glass. Five inches of soil will grow it all winter but a solid bed keeps it in better color and the foliage greener. Mignonette sports and varies a good deal and most growers select their own plants each year for their seed. To begin with, we think the Machet will be found to be as good as any.

A SMALL HOUSE.

I have a greenhouse 18x25 feet running east from the potting shed. There are benches all around, except for a door in each end, and a bench in the center. The house is tight, eleven feet to the ridge and to be heated by hot water. I want 45 degrees at night in coldest Massachusetts weather. How shall I pipe? Could I partition off the short bench in the northwest corner, using glass, to get a place to carry a little more heat and moisture? C. C. H.

The best plan of heating a house of the dimensions you mention, 18x25 feet and eleven feet high, would be to run one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and distribute to twelve 1¼-inch returns under the benches. No valves will be needed as you will have but the one house and the temperature can be regulated by the amount of fire. It is entirely feasible to partition off the part of the bench as you have indicated, and the additional moisture within the enclosure may be secured by placing pans of water on top of the pipes beneath the bench. You will, however, need a separate ventilator for this section.

CHEMICAL MANURES.

The Arnott Chemical Co., of Toronto, sends out a little booklet dealing with chemical manures and containing much interesting matter, including a table showing the number of pounds of plant food in 100 pounds of the commonly used manures. They make a chemical manure of which they say:

"As an illustration of the method of using it, a large florist has a tank holding 500 gallons mounted on a platform so as to secure pressure to distribute liquid manure. Formerly it was his custom, for want of anything better, to have cow manure hauled up to this tank and leached with water. Then the residue had to be taken down again, making a hard job much disliked by the help. His foreman appreciated the advantages of horticultural manure when it was brought to his notice, and now he takes fifteen pounds of it, climbs up to the tank and stirs it in. The whole job takes less than fifteen minutes, and the result is a clean, nutritive solution which does far better work in the way of making a big crop and at much less expense than the old method. Where these facilities are not available, horticultural manure may be dissolved in water and applied in the same way as ordinary watering is done."

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society will be held at Hartford, Conn., on Monday, June 19. The rose garden in Elizabeth park will be in full glory at that date and a visit of inspection under the guidance of Superintendent Wirth and the members of the Hartford Florists' Club will form a part of the program. Important business concerning the welfare of the society will also have attention. Communications for the committee should be addressed to the secretary's office, 11 Hamilton place, Boston.

DETROIT, MICH.—George A. Rackham is just able to be out after an illness of five weeks with the grip.

DANVILLE, ILL.—R. L. Burgoyne met with an accident at Covington recently, upsetting a wagon loaded with plants and injuring one leg.

CHESTER, S. C.—Mrs. Jos. A. Walker started in the florists' business last spring and has far exceeded her expectations of success. The glass has been doubled within the year.

KEWANEE, ILL.—Hamilton & Plummer, who lost 6,000 lights of glass in a recent hail storm, report the receipt of the Hail Association's check one week after proof of loss was submitted.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—In a recent storm a limb of a tree was broken off and blown into the greenhouse of Wm. L. McCart, breaking glass and damaging the structure to the extent of $300.

CLEBURNE, TEX.—On May 21, the heaviest hail ever known here broke 2,000 square feet of glass in the greenhouses of J. S. Boyd, besides cutting up a large quantity of stock. The place of T. S. Sanders was less hard hit but lost some glass.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Weather conditions up to Decoration day were absolutely perfect and those who cater to bedding plant trade and do cemetery work were kept on the jump to keep up with orders. A trip to the various cemeteries found a magnificent array of vases, flower beds and large pots filled with all kinds of plants. Geraniums, as usual, were used in large quantities, S. A. Nutt being mostly in evidence, while Mrs. Perkins was a close second, with Mrs. E. G. Hill and Beaute Poitevine following. Very few, if any, single geraniums are visible. Bedding throughout the city is in full swing and by the end of this week will find the greenhouses completely devastated. The retailers are wearing the usual "smile that won't come off" and have enlarged bank accounts. Geraniums and bedding stock generally are extra fine this year, so A. Graham, H. A. Hart, Mrs. A. Schmidt, Fred Aul, G. M. Naumann and others should not hear of any complaint.

Business at the various stores has been fair the past week. Decoration day found an abundance of flowers, with a demand equal to the occasion. Beauties are particularly fine from local growers, as are also tea roses. Carnations, while in great abundance, are not very good. The hot sun has discolored Lawson and faded Enchantress. There has been a complaint of late about the keeping qualities of carnations.

School commencements begin next week and the store men look forward to a busy month. It is hoped the quality of flowers will hold up. Peonies, iris, snowballs, lilies, spiræas and weigelias are playing a very prominent part in the cut flower line at present.

Various Notes.

Collins & Harrison are making a good display of hydrangeas and Boston ferns, with the usual extra quality of Beauties, teas and carnations.

Jas. Eadie is massing lilies for a window effect. Wagner, as usual, has a very good miscellaneous window, with a lot of fine flowers from Merkle & Son.

Smith & Fetters had a very pretty window. A very large cross of snowballs with a wreath of bronze galax and peonies set in a bank of phœnix palms. Red, white and blue ribbon was also used to good effect.

With J. M. Gasser Co., plants were greatly in evidence. Some well grown hydrangeas and Crimson Ramblers fill both windows. Mr. Darnell, with a large corps of assistants, was very busy attending to their large shipping business. They are at present receiving a tremendous cut of roses from the Rocky River plant, but carnations are off crop.

Robt. Kegg is still sending in some fine carnations.

J. H. Harrison, of North Olmsted, has had a wonderful cut of carnations this winter and are still in good shape.

The Essex Greenhouses are in heavy crop with extra quality Beauties and tea roses.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. very largely increased its business this Decoration day as compared to last year.

FOREST CITY.

THE REVIEW will send Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual on receipt of 25c.

PACIFIC COAST.

SEATTLE, WASH.

A merry war is on among the retailers, the usual heavy crop of carnations at this time of the year being the supply of ammunition. Signs in the windows, 15 cents a dozen, are a little out of the usual for this city, as the prices usually hold up well all summer, 50 cents a dozen being low water mark. But I see by reports from eastern cities that the same thing is happening there. For once we can congratulate ourselves on being up with the times.

In speaking of carnations, the sporting proclivities of Enchantress are shown here as well as in the east. Three distinct sports are reported. One of these, a "speckled" one, dark and light pink, will be tested this season. Mrs. M. A. Patten has also sported back to a solid color, pink, the color of Lawson, but with the long stem and general habit of Patten. Flamingo has given us a beautifully variegated sport, but the flower is so crowded with petals that it is top heavy.

Young carnations in the field are looking very well. Planting is usually all finished in this section by April 15. The mortality among rooted carnation cuttings from the east, of new varieties, ordered early but sent late, has been very high.

Outdoor roses are plentiful. The state flower, the rhododendron, is being peddled on the streets in bunches to suit the buyer. A few double white narcissi are all that are left of the bulb stock. Sweet peas are blooming outdoors.

Alfred Peterson, of the Woodland Park Floral Co., wife and family, left May 20, for Europe on a pleasure trip. They expect to be gone four months.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

From present indications out-of-town shipping will not be up to the usual standard of Memorial week. The very favorable season has been prolonged so much that there is an unusual abundance of outside stock in various portions of the state which are generally dry and barren of blooms at this time. As a consequence many interior points will have enough stock to fill their local orders and San Francisco will fall short of box trade.

Flowers still continue very plentiful with us and the prices are as low as I have ever seen them. Still, there is a very fair demaud for fancy stock, both of roses and carnations, and the dealers who can cut long-stemmed flowers that are of good color and substance have no complaint about their ability to dispose of them. Sweet peas continue to be the best selling article and they are extra good at present; from 50 to 75 cents per dozen bunches is the price the growers receive. Peonies are about over, also Spanish iris, but we are receiving some good Japanese iris from several wholesalers. They are good sellers and cost the florists from $2 to $3 per hundred. Valley is in the market but in little demand. Lilium longiflorum at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen stems moves very slowly. Outside stock can be had in abundance at any price and is being purchased in considerable quantities by the dealers who are counting not a little on Decoration day trade.

Various Notes.

J. M. Young, of the Dwight-Way Nurseries, has departed on a two weeks' fishing excursion to Mount Shasta.

E. J. Wickson has succeeded Prof. E. W. Hilgard as the head of the University's horticultural department during the latter's leave of absence for a trip to Europe.

H. M. Sanborn has returned from his visit to southern California.

J. M. Holland, manager of Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, is on a month's vacation at Lake Tahoe.

D. Greuttner, of Vallejo, was in town this week.

The Portland Seed Co., of Portland, Oregon, is disposing of considerable Oregon moss to the San Francisco florists.

G.

CREMATION AFFECTS FLORISTS.

It is surprising what a difference has been made in the business of the gardeners and growers who have especially catered to cemetery planting, since the advent of cremation compared with the amount of stock handled before this idea became so popular here. The trend of the public opinion, at least in this state, seems to be gradually changing and where it was formerly customary to spend large amounts on expensive mausoleums and well kept grounds around them, we now find that many people who are amply able and who, in the natural course of events, would spend much money in cemetery adornment, are neglecting the old-fashioned burial and favoring the more modern form. Whatever may be said pro and con about cremation, it certainly puts nothing into the pocket of anyone connected with our line of business. Many of the smaller growers who used to make a good living in the neighborhood of our larger cemeteries, both in growing plants such as were suitable for cemetery planting and also taking care of the better class of graves, now find it impossible to sell stock enough to make it pay. In fact, I can think of several who have been forced to go out of business for that reason alone.

The cemetery associations themselves feel the difference even more and the grounds are kept up in most cases with much less help than was used formerly. The florists' trade suffers likewise, as it is gradually creeping into the heads of people that it is not necessary to spend so much money or send such an array of elaborate designs when the departed is to be cremated as it is when there is plenty of room as in the usual cemetery plot. This will be noticed more than the majority of florists imagine if they will attend any funeral where the remains are to be cremated, and compare it with one of the same elaborateness from which there is to be a cemetery burial. G.

MACON, GA.—The Idle Hour Nurseries, formerly owned by the late Robert H. Plant, have been purchased by Daniel C. Horgan. There are in all eight greenhouses almost wholly devoted to roses and carnations, both of which do well here. The place is up to date in every particular.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Carnation Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper: flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

LEAF CURL OF CUCUMBERS.

The curling of cucumber leaves into a spherical form is more or less experienced by cucumber growers. This trouble manifests itself in the wilting of the edges of the leaf, which subsequently die, thus producing a narrow whitish area of dead tissue and preventing the leaf from further expansion. As the other part of the leaf grows, while the whitish dead edge is restricted in this respect, it results in the exterior surface of the leaf assuming a convex form with a contorted margin. In other words, the leaf is curled up more or less like a ball. Single plants now and then occur in a house affected in this manner, while all the other plants may be normal in this respect. Occasionally many plants will show only slight symptoms of curling, which would be the case when the wilting and dead areas occur after the leaves have practically reached their maximum size. There are various stages of this trouble ranging all the way from a slight curling to pronounced types. These various stages bear a relationship to the plasticity of the plant and its relative development, together with the nature of the cause and the degree of intensity with which the abnormal stimulus has been applied.

This wilting and dying of the margin of the leaf may evidently be brought about in more than one way. In all instances that we have observed the phenomenon is one connected with absorption and transpiration or the taking on and giving off of water. The most frequent cause of this condition, however, is over-manuring. We have succeeded in producing plants where practically all the leaves assumed the spherical form by growing them in an excess of manure. If strong horse manure at the rate of two-thirds or three-fourths is mixed with one-third or one-fourth soil, such results can usually be obtained. Some of the worst cases we have seen were where the soil had been liberally treated with horse manure with the addition of a considerable quantity of hen manure. Over-manuring, however, is not the only cause, and cases have been observed by us where it has occurred without an excess of manure in the soil. It can be induced in various ways, and abnormal modifications in the light, soil and moisture conditions under which plants are grown are frequently responsible. Any cause which is likely to produce excessive transpiration, such as lack of texture in the leaf, etc., or anything which prevents root absorption, as the presence of a considerable amount of nitrate, etc., in the soil, will produce a curling of the leaf when other necessary conditions are at hand. Care should therefore be taken in not over-manuring, also in the regulation of those conditions which produce plants of inferior texture.—Bulletin of Massachusetts Agricultural College.

TRAINING TOMATO PLANTS.

Though it is by no means the general custom to train outdoor tomato plants systematically but it nevertheless pays to do so where first-class fruit is desired. We too often see the plants allowed to roam at will until they get all tangled up. Then they are attacked with the knife in a haphazard manner, usually too late to be of any real benefit to the plants. In consequence only the fruit set before the pruning will come to anything like maturity, further setting being beyond the strength of the plants weakened by neglect, and the season of bearing is consequently shortened.

As mentioned in last week's article, there are several satisfactory methods of training. Probably the best is to use properly constructed trellises. These can be made quite cheaply if rails can be conveniently procured. A convenient size is ¾-inch strips two inches wide and fourteen feet long. These should be nailed to strips one inch thick by three wide and five feet long, one end being pointed so it can be driven into the soil far enough to give a good hold. The rails should be sixteen inches apart, the first being near the top. This will bring the bottom one about the same distance above the ground, after the trellis is set. Four strips should be used for each length, the end ones being placed one foot from the ends of the rails, the others four feet apart. This makes a good firm trellis. We prefer to set the trellises in double rows, the tops sloping in toward one another at an angle of about 20 degrees but about two feet apart at the top. Some bring them together at the top but the two feet of space is an advantage in admitting light and giving more freedom of air. They of course require to be braced from the back to make them firm.

Each length of trellis will accommodate four plants. These are best trained to three stems, the leaders being allowed to go right ahead without pinching until the top of the trellis is reached, but all lateral or side growths are pinched off as they appear, the leaders being stopped when the top of the trellis is reached.

Another very satisfactory plan is to use three stout stakes for each plant in place of fastening to a trellis, the stems being trained and pinched in the same manner. By this method more plants can be grown in a given space, as they can be set from three to three and one-half feet apart each way and at the same time have plenty of light and air. The only disadvantage is that severe storms are liable to break down the plants much more than they will where the trellis is used. W. S. CROYDON.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E W Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14-17, 1905.

J. C. Hale, Winchester, Tenn., claims that the Tennessee Wholesale Nursery is the largest peach tree nursery in the world.

A New York concern which proposes to raise spruce trees for the lumber has recently imported from Germany nineteen hampers, each of which contains 17,000 seedlings.

Nurserymen will be interested in the fact that the postoffice department is about to simplify the procedure under which catalogues may be mailed in bulk without stamps affixed.

John Craig, secretary, announces that the next biennial meeting of the American Pomological Society, the twenty-ninth in the history of the organization, will be held in Kansas City, August 8 to 10, 1905. The meeting goes to Kansas City at the earnest request of the Missouri Horticultural Society, backed by the horticultural societies of the Missouri Valley and western states in general. J. H. Hale, South Glastonbury, Conn., is president.

CURL LEAF.

I have purple plums and golden elders that have curl leaf. The golden elder is not a light yellow, but was when I got them. Probably there is too much shade. Do they have to be in the full glare of the sun all day to bring out the golden color? Mine are on the west side of the house, with trees a distance west of them, say forty feet. They all grow well. S. J. P.

The fact that the purple plum, which we take to be Prunus Pissardi, and golden elder are grown in partial shade would account in a large part for loss of color in foliage. Both these plants want all sunlight possible and neither should be grown very near the house. The leaf curl is probably caused by aphis. Examine the foliage which is curled. If any aphis can be found spray with a solution of whale oil soap. This will kill insects and eggs, directions for use on each box. A syringing with any of the tobacco extracts properly diluted will be efficacious. W. N. C.

THE SEASON'S BUSINESS.

The following summaries of the season's nursery trade have been received from well known firms:

J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md.—The past season's business has been a good one, in which we have sold several million strawberry plants and several hundred thousand peach and apple-trees. The season was late to start but orders came fast and were promptly waited on. About all salable stock is cleaned up close. Prospects for fall trade are good, especially on peach and apple-trees. Weather conditions are good and trees are making a rapid growth.

J. C. Hale, Winchester, Tenn.—The past season's business among the nurserymen of this section was very satisfactory so far as I know. I sold more peaches last year than usual but prices were low on account of there being such a large quantity. There will be a shortage in the peach-tree crop this year in the south of at least fifty per cent from last year. The seeds planted last fall were cut at least fifty per cent and the stand is not as good as usual. In addition to this a very severe freeze in February, followed by another in April, did considerable damage to our dormant peach buds and the supply of one-year peach for fall delivery will be materially cut.

THE SEEDLESS APPLE.

The Brooklyn, N. Y., Eagle has a portrait of John F. Spencer, of Grand Junction, Colo., and an account of his seedless apple, which, whatever one may think of the facts, is interesting reading. Here are some extracts:

Seedless apples have existed for 200 or 300 years. There are many trees in the United States that bear apples without seeds. But the apples produced are of no commercial value. They are very small, have no coloring to speak of, and are "runty" and inferior in every way. In addition, these trees will not reproduce trees of their own kind.

Mr. Spencer succeeded, in his experimental orchard, in producing five trees that bore apples practically without seeds, but the fruit was of poor quality. From these five trees he began budding and grafting, to see if the trees would reproduce themselves, and at the same time improve the quality of the fruit. As a result he now has trees in his orchard that are four, six and eight years old, and they all bear seedless apples of fine quality and flavor.

Sometimes a seed is found in this new apple, but it is never where the seed pocket should be. This seed is produced by the pollen from the common apple tree, which is carried to the seedless apple trees, either by the bees or winds. Whenever this pollen is deposited in the navel end of a seedless apple, there will be found a seed, usually in the outer peeling of the apple.

The commercial value of Mr. Spencer's work has been recognized immediately. The originator of the new apple is vice-president of a company organized to exploit the apple. Most of the United States has been covered by subcompanies, and within six months the whole country will be covered. The new apples will be raised in orchards in every state, and in addition the company has arranged for a nursery of 60,000 to be started in Switzerland this spring, as well as a nursery of the same size in Great Britain. It is estimated that there will be lined out in the United States this spring 2,000,000 seedless apple trees, which will be budded at the proper budding season this fall, and these trees will be delivered in the spring of 1906. With these trees scattered all over the world in a few years the seedless apple will be as common as the seedless orange.

The Market.

The wholesale market has experienced the worst glut in years this week. Everything is coming in so plentifully, owing no doubt to the ideal spring weather, and quality has kept up well, but prices would not look well in print. The retailers say they never saw business so slow so early before the anticipated dull season. Funeral work has been the only standby. There were thousands of roses and carnations on the street this week that could be bought as low as 5 and 10 cents per dozen and the fakir had to hustle to move them at that.

August Entertainment.

A smoker and a good time at the club brought a very large attendance at the last meeting. It was decided that the Gardeners' Club would entertain the members of the Society of American Florists who will visit our city during the convention in Washington. No definite plans have as yet been decided on but it is understood that the entertainment is to consist of a trip down the Chesapeake bay and probably a drive through the former burnt district of Baltimore and also through some of our parks.

FERTILIZER.

It is hard for me to get cow manure but I can get plenty where the hogs have been bedded. It is about four-fifths oak leaves. Is this good for pot plants, roses and carnations? If so, in what proportions would you add it to good rich soil? Would bone meal be needed in addition?

W. A. L.

We have never used hog manure in this country unless it came from the cattle yard in a mixture and we were not aware of it, but we do know that in England it was valued as much as any and largely used. In the condition you describe we think it could be safely used with the soil at one to six, well mixed through the soil and will suit roses and carnations and our ordinary greenhouse plants. The quantity of bone meal will depend on how much animal manure you are using. If it is naturally good soil with the ordinary quantity of animal manure, one part to five or six, then you could add one pound of bone meal to one bushel of soil.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week has been a record-breaker among the plantsmen. It has been favorable weather and the people seem to have plenty of money and are willing to spend it. Prices are not high but seem to satisfy the growers.

The cut flower men had a much better week than for some time and wound up with a big Saturday. Today, Monday, the day before Decoration day, was like the Saturday before Easter. Every one had all he could do. There are not many outdoor flowers, so that there is a special call for carnations and roses.

The weather having turned very warm, was hard on stock and one could see pots of sleepy carnations in any of the stores and the market stands which were exposed to the draft and air, fared very badly.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co. is sending in an immense cut these days and the stock is exceptionally fine for this time of the year.

A good rain last week would have brought in the peonies, but that would have killed the price of other stock, so it is no loss.

Geo. Marshall, of the Cut Flower Co., is confined to his bed with measles.

Randolph & McClements have been offering premiums for help the past week. Any old kind of a man that knows plants could have been made use of.

The Allegheny market people report Decoration day business the best they ever had.

Theo. F. Beckert is sending in very fine sweet peas.

Geraniums have been retailing in the market all week at $1.50 to $2 per dozen and anything else with a good show of bloom brought corresponding prices.

T. P. McCormick is no longer with the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange and E. J. McCallum is now in charge.

Hoo Hoo.

Araucaria Excelsa

Just arrived, 3,000 on May 1, per steamer Elonian, and 2,000 on May 30, per steamer Oxonian, of the choicest, grown for me under contract by an Araucaria Specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that never before have they been so nice, large and well-grown for the money as they are this year. I herewith quote you special low prices:

10 to 12 inches high, 2 years old, 50c each.
12 to 14 inches high, 60c each.
14 to 16 inches high, 75c each.
16 to 20 inches high, $1.00 each.
Specimen, 7-in. pots, 30 to 35 in. high, $1.50 ea.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, unusually large, very beautiful, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, 75c to $1.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, 30 to 36 inches high, 4 years old, $1.00; 4 years old, 25 to 30 inches high, 75c each. Belmoreana, 4 years old, 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00 each. (Above is the size entered in the Philadelphia Custom House).

Ficus Elastica, imported, 4-inch, $25.00 per 100, ready June 1.

BEDDING PLANTS.

Heliotropes, blue, 4-in., $6.00 per 100. Scarlet Sage, Clara Bedman, 4-in., $7.00 per 100. Begonia Vernon, red and pink, 4-in., $7.00 per 100. Cobaea Scandens, 4-in., $8.00 per 100.

Coleus, Golden Bedder, Verschaffeltii and Queen Victoria; Aster Victoria; Verbenas, Phlox Drummondii and Dwarf Petunias, $3.00 per 100. California Giant Petunias, Scarlet Sage, Begonia Vernon; Ageratum, blue, 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Don't forget that I am the Moonvine grower of the land. Only A. W. Smith's Hybrid Moonvines, (Ipomaea Noctiflora) is exclusively the one I grow and is the only true Moonvine in America, as Mr. Smith has the world-wide reputation of growing the best Moonvine seed. Please bear in mind that this is no morning glory like so many sell for Moonvines but the pure white waxy moon flowers as large as saucers. 2½-inch pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $7.00 per 100; 4-inch pots, $10.00 per 100. Nicely staked up.

Cash with order, please. All goods must travel on purchaser's risk.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Decoration day is waking up the florists all over the north and the demand is much greater than the supply. Every old kind of a flower finds a buyer now and at a price all that it is worth. Outdoor stuff is having a heavy call. Peonies are in full blast and bring good prices. Shipping trade is good and the out-of-town call is using up a lot of stock and keeping prices well up.

There is a pretty good cut of carnations on but the hot sun is making them very small and their keeping qualities are not great. Roses are also poor and mildew is much in evidence. There is not a very heavy cut on at present. Bride is very poor. Kaiserin and Ivory take its place. Chatenay comes nicely. Beauty heads the list and some really good stock is to be had.

The peony is the outdoor flower at present and there are quite a few of them on the market but the cut in this section has been rather light this year. They bring good figures now. The fact that the peony is the coming spring flower can no longer be disputed. It is a fine flower for decorative work and its future can no longer be denied. When some of the newer varieties are well distributed and the growers get on to how to cut and hold the blooms this flower will hold a high place in floriculture.

Lilies were much in demand and George & Allan were in with a good cut of them.

"Green goods" sold well. Smilax was scarce. Southern ferns are in and of good quality. The eastern stock is now all used up.

Various Notes.

W. K. Partridge had the Commercial Club decoration at the Queen City Club this week. It was one of the largest decorations this city has seen for some time. American Beauty and Asparagus plumosus were extensively used.

Max Rudolph is to erect a greenhouse this fall. It will be 40x185, with concrete walls and all modern improvements. It will be devoted to roses, especially Richmond.

Mr. Joy, of Nashville, was a visitor.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A week of unprecedented rush has marked the business of the Memorial period. Stock has moved rapidly even for this season. Some very large funerals have helped to keep stock at a low ebb. Roses have been of very poor quality. Carnations have been fair, but shipped stock has been exceedingly poor. Sweet peas, peonies, carnations, jasmine and roses are the principal stock in trade.

All the plant growers report the best business for years and are about cleaned up with their spring work. Some were forced to buy to supply their customers.

The flower show committee has sent out the preliminary premium list. It is fair to every class of exhibits, and we already feel confident of having one of the greatest shows ever seen in this country.

Among the retail stores the consensus of opinion is that the past season has been the best in years and in spite of the fact that stuff sometimes comes in very poor, still the amount of waste has been slight. Collections have been unusually good and the outlook is very flattering.

W. J. Barnes has completely emptied his houses.

Jacob Tobler, of Westport, reports his branch of the business as exceedingly good and intends to remodel and build enough to handle his trade.

Ed Ellsworth, manager for Geo. M. Kellogg, has been very ill the past week and has been unable to be at his store.

The Harvey Floral Co. has opened a new store at 1009 Walnut street under the personal supervision of Mrs. Harvey. They have a good location.

C. P. Neeley, of Siloam Springs, Ark., was a visitor the past week and reports business in his town as first-class. Mr. Neeley intends to build some new houses after the spring trade is over, to be used for carnations. NARCISSUS.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA.—I. B. Kemble is ill with typhoid fever.

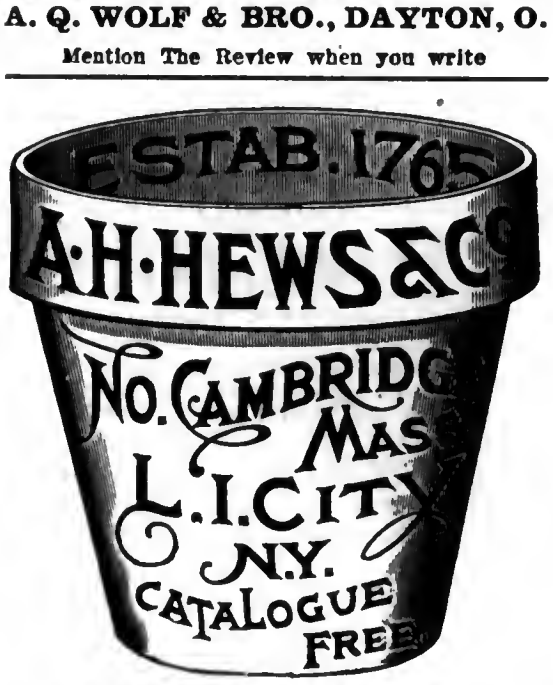
—THE—
WOLF DUMP SIEVE SOIL MACHINE

Pulverizes sods, manure, all kinds of soil, cuts and forces the fibres through the sieve. Dumps the stones out separately. Pays for itself in ten days' use.



THE WOLF IMPROVED PIPE Ventilating Apparatus

is equipped with adjustable roller hangers, circular steel ratchet arms, automatic safety locks which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of adjustable roller hangers and steel ratchet arm, the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive double strength or special fitted pipe is required. Houses 165 ft. long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines, which are furnished with or without pipe shafting. Send for catalogue and references. HUNT'S
Cypress Plant and Tree Tub

Our plant and tree tub is made from the everlasting cypress with which all up-to-date florists are familiar. The merits of this tub are wholly commensurate with the demand for an article which is light, neat and durable. They are made in various sizes. Painted green, or natural wood finish, as preferred. Castings japanned. The feet and bolts for same are packed inside tub to facilitate nesting.

VIOLET GROWING.

BY B. T. GALLOWAY.

Introduction.

The violet will always be a good crop for the beginner and the small florist to handle because, (1) the capital required to go into the business, when compared with that of other intensive horticultural work, is small; (2) the violet is a seasonable flower, hence always comes as a fresh impression each autumn after an entire absence of four or five months; (3) it is a flower which, to be at its best, must be grown close to the consumer; hence the crop is only slightly affected by long distance shipments; and (4) it is a crop which, when properly grown, properly handled, and properly sold, will always yield a fair profit, no matter if the market is flooded with indifferent stock.

Of course, under ordinary conditions the flooding of the market with indifferent flowers, that is, with flowers that have been shipped a long distance, or that may be off color or without odor, always affects the general market. Unquestionably, however, a good grower can so handle his business as to be practically independent of these conditions. If he establishes a reputation for good flowers, and deals with good men in the handling of the same, he will always find a market at a fair price for his produce.

Opportunities in Violet Growing.

The best opportunities at the present time in violet growing are afforded the small florist who may have a local market to supply or who is in a position to ship fifty to 100 miles to a near-by town or city. There are thousands of such florists, and the object of this paper is mainly to point out to them how to start and conduct the business rather than to aid in any way those in the large violet-producing centers.

The few localities having reputations as large producing centers are fortunately favored in soil and climate. In studying the subject in these localities, I have often been struck with the ease with which the violet is grown by men who have had no previous experience. In fact, it is usually the inexperienced man who succeeds best with this crop in the regions indicated. Notwithstanding the large quantities of violets which are grown in these sections, and the success which attends the first efforts of the growers, it is difficult to find men there who have been long in the business. Either the growers find other crops more profitable or reach a state where they can no longer successfully grow the violet. It seems to me that this is to be attributed in part to the very excellent and favorable conditions which nature has afforded. The growers themselves are not careful enough in their methods of handling the stock. The consequence is that some disease or insect comes in and soon makes it impracticable for them to grow the flower. In regions where the climatic conditions are not so favorable, more skill is put forth and developed, and I believe it is in just these sections where the violet can be made a profitable crop, either alone or in combination with some other florist crops.

Many times I have been impressed with the opportunities afforded for building up a good business in violets in towns and cities of from 5,000 to 50,000 inhabitants. With proper management a good local trade in such towns ought to be developed. It would not be a difficult matter for a live, wide-awake grower to make provision for the handling of his crop in a town or city by securing a desirable location for a small stand, either in the window of some store or elsewhere; all that would be required would be a small place where the flowers could be exhibited and where the business would be an attraction to ordinary store work rather than the opposite. A dry-goods store, millinery store, or even a drug store, would furnish excellent opportunities for opening such a violet department. With proper handling of the flowers, neatness and novelty in the method of bunching them, and good advertising, a splendid business might be developed.

Opportunities are always afforded for dealing directly with established florists who have stores in the towns. This trade will, of course, be mainly retail. Then, again, opportunities are afforded for a shipping business if a grower desires to enter into this sort of trade. A combination of two or more of these methods of handling the crop can be followed. Frequently it is desirable to do this, as one serves as a check upon the other.

Kind of Violets to Grow.

There is very little choice in the matter of varieties of violets. Unlike the carnation and the rose, the varieties suitable for commercial purposes are very few in number. Of the double sorts, the Marie Louise and the Lady Hume Campbell are practically the only varieties grown. There are one or two forms of the Marie Louise on the market, such as the Farquhar, but these are merely strains of the Marie Louise and are hardly worthy of varietal names. The Farquhar is somewhat more prolific than the original Marie Louise and will succeed better under wider differences of soil and climate. Neither the Marie Louise nor the Farquhar is as prolific in flowers or as vigorous as the Lady Hume Campbell. The Campbell, however, is lighter in color and for this reason is sometimes more difficult to sell in certain markets. As a general proposition it may be stated that the Marie Louise and the Farquhar will always sell in preference to the Campbell when they are side by side, but in the absence of the Farquhar or the Marie Louise, the Campbell will nearly always bring a good price.

Princess of Wales Violets at the Establishment of William Sim, Who has been Very Successful with This Variety.

For the florist who is expecting to build up a local business, my advice would be to plant mainly Campbell. This variety well grown can always be handled to advantage locally and will bring as good prices as either Marie Louise or Farquhar. The New York City market is about the only one that really demands the Marie Louise type, for the reason that it is about the only one seen there, owing to the large quantities sent in from the Poughkeepsie and Rhinebeck sections. Other cities, such as Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburg, Rochester, Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis, and the territory adjacent thereto, will take good Campbell violets almost as quickly as any other.

Of recent years there has been an increasing interest in the growing of single violets, and there is no reason why this interest should not be developed. The single violets are more easily grown than the double ones and properly handled might be made nearly as profitable. About the only single violets worthy of growing commercially are the Princess of Wales, the La France and the Dorsett. The Princess of Wales is undoubtedly one of the best single varieties now grown and is valuable not only for its large, handsome, sweet flowers, but for the foliage, which may be used for bunching the doubles. Our experience has shown that it is desirable always to have some of the single violets, for the reason that the foliage can be used for bunching and the flowers will more than pay for the space occupied. By saving the foliage of the double sorts, better flowers are secured from them. The removal of the foliage from the single violets does not seem to have any serious effect on their flowers.

Azaleas in Summer.

We all have some azaleas that did not sell this spring and with good care they make the best of plants for next Easter, but not to force for Christmas, as you may suppose. They should now have made a good deal of their growth. Choose a piece of ground that water will not stand on, no matter how much it rains, but let it be in the broad sun. No shade of any kind is needed. The plants will increase in size considerably during the summer, so unless you intend to give them a move about the middle of July you must give them room to spread out. They must be plunged in some material that will keep the sun from parching the roots, like strawy manure, tanbark, refuse hops or ashes. Now the principal thing to bear in mind in the summer care of these valuable plants is never to let them suffer for want of water.

If imported last fall they will have made few roots up to this spring, but with a strong growth they will be making roots this summer and a severe drying-out will be a serious injury. In a few weeks they will need watering, not only every evening but again the following noon. Don't entertain that fallacy that you must not water a plant if the sun is shining on it.

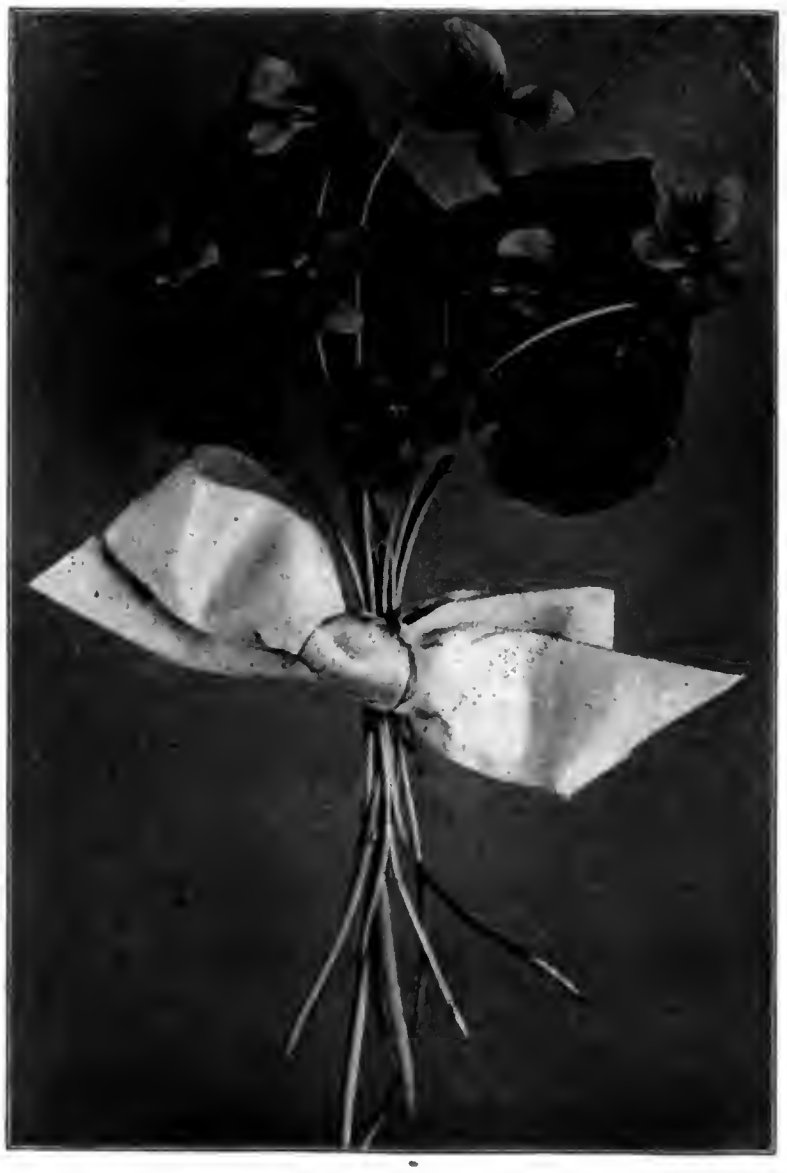
A good, hard syringing once a day to keep down red spider and thrips is of the greatest benefit. Mulching is not necessary for two or three weeks, but by July 1 an inch of broken up cow manure will not only be a fertilizer, but will keep the plants from drying out so quickly. Any pruning should have been done just after they flowered and all that is necessary in that line now is to cut back a few extra strong shoots that frequently take on extra vigor.

Now, these azaleas are well worth faithful attention, as everything is that is worth growing at all. Let air and light get between them. Faithfully water them and give a daily syringing and you will have fine plants for next winter and spring.

Those who have a piece of good, deep loam or peaty soil may take these azaleas out of pots and remove any soil that has no trace of roots in it and plant them out with a light mulching over the surface and soil kept moist. They will do well during summer and lift without feeling it before danger of frost. We know the azaleas endure the transplanting perfectly, because the splendid plants we receive every fall have been lifted from the open beds in Belgium, yet the safest for most growers is to keep them in pots.

Other Plants.

The Acacia armata and the bottle brush should also be plunged out of doors and receive the same treatment as the azaleas.



Any two or three-year-old plants of Cytisus racemosus can also be out of doors, but young plants struck last winter I prefer to keep in the greenhouse.

Araucaria excelsa loses its color if put out in the bright sun and small plants are as well if kept in a light, airy house. Large plants may as well be plunged out. Unless large plants of these are perfect they are of very little use and spending time over them is a waste of money. The rubbish pile is the best place for them.

Palms.

Small palms of all kinds are much better if kept under glass and for the next few months you can give them room to grow and make fine plants. If you were manufacturing them by the tens of thousands you might force them with great heat and shade, but that would not make the kind of plants you want for your customers. A robust, strong plant is what you want and that you can get with plenty of room, ventilation and syringing.

We all possess some palms that are as large as we desire and all we want is to keep them in good order. These are better if placed outside until the end of September. They will not burn unless neglected for water and, therefore, their pots and tubs should be protected from the sun. Latanias, kentias and phoenix do finely plunged outdoors and, if attentively watered, do not burn. That we have proved during many summers. Arecas do bleach out and are better under shaded glass.

The Dorsett Violet, a Little Known but Good Single Variety.

Cattleya Mossiae with Fifty Flowers.

Cannas.

With all the cannas you see advertised in early spring there is never a surplus and we do not always find it is so easy to buy good, sound roots. There is nothing like having them on your own place and you should now plant out all you can. A small plant now means a big root by October and they are easily wintered, yet it is during winter that so many of the roots are lost. Therefore put out plenty of the standard sorts and try a few of the novelties.

Vinca Minor.

Of all the drooping plants for window boxes and vases there is none so useful as well as ornamental as these vincas, the variegated and Harrisonii. We never yet had enough of them. There is plenty of time yet and a very small plant will do. They grow very freely and can be cut close to the ground in October and the roots divided and put into 3-inch pots. They winter almost anywhere in the greenhouse and make fine drooping vines for spring. Don't neglect to plant out a lot of them if you are in that line of business.

Smilax.

Long as this decorative plant has been grown, we often get some question about it. Any one doing a retail trade should have a bed of smilax. The end of this month or early July is the time to plant and they should be strong 3-inch plants. We have seen smilax grown on a very wet floor, but that is by no means essential. I only mention this that no drained bed is necessary. Six inches of good, heavy loam, with a fourth of half rotten cow manure, will grow smilax finely. The only time we had a poor smilax bed was when we used a light soil.

The bed should be on the floor, with plenty of head-room. Tie strings to it as soon as planted and if during the winter you can keep a temperature of 60 degrees, and never neglect to syringe it, you can cut four crops within the year. It does not pay to grow smilax cool, nor does it pay to neglect keeping it tied up. In the care of this easily grown plant there is no place the old adage pays better, "A stitch in time saves nine."

Adiantum Croweanum.

Have you tried this fine fern? Those who see it growing where it originated are quickly convinced that it is distinct from any other adiantum and those who will give it a fair trial will find it a most free and vigorous grower, but it wants liberal treatment. Now is a good time to start a bed.

The writer has seen it growing most luxuriantly in the identical same soil that was producing the finest Bridesmaid roses, a rotted, yellow loam, with the usual amount of manure. If there are steam or hot water pipes beneath the bench they should be low down, for neither this adiantum nor any other fern wants the roots scorched. When growing freely it will be greatly helped by frequent waterings of liquid manure. It should have 60 degrees at night and even 65 degrees will only make it grow the faster. A bed planted within a few weeks will give you fine fronds for next winter.

Air-slaked lime not only keeps down the slugs but the plants seem to thrive on the lime. Do not be afraid to dust between the plants, as well as the crowns of the plants, after they start to grow freely. WILLIAM SCOTT.

HELLEBORUS NIGER MAXIMUS.

The accompanying illustration shows a plant of an improved form of the Christmas rose which J. J. Grullemans & Sons, of Lisse, Holland, are offering under the name of Helleborus niger maximus. The plant shown was photographed on December 24 of last year and the growers assure us that "first-class plants produce a great abundance of pure white flowers which naturally at Christmas are of great value, particularly for funeral work. The plants, after the flowers have been cut, may be planted out in good soil under trees, or at least in a shady place, and can after proper treatment be used again after two years' rest."

The plant thrives in a rich, well drained loam but is impatient of frequent disturbance. When wanted for forcing, strong plants should be given large pots and given heat gradually. They are then easily brought into flower when wanted. Propagation is usually by division in autumn or spring, but if seeds mature they may be planted at once in pans or in open ground. Seedlings ordinarily bloom the third season. Where the potted plants are sold for shipment it is advised that they be shipped before they show flower buds, else they are likely to lose them.

CATTLEYA MOSSIAE.

This is one of the most showy of the early summer blooming cattleyas, a variety which is also of easy culture, free flowering and cheap enough to be within the reach of anyone who handles orchids at all. For florists' use it is one of the very best. Although in cultivation some seventy years, it remains one of our standard orchids and none of the ever-increasing number of cattleya and lælio-cattleya hybrids which we have seen, no matter how rare they may be, nor how costly, can surpass or even equal in magnificence a good type of C. Mossiæ.

There are quite a host of named forms of this showy cattleya. Some are quite valuable and all are beautiful. Of the white varieties C. Mossiæ Wagneri, Amesiæ and bellissima in our collection are quite unique, the first named being probably the purest. Amesiæ is nearly pure white, while bellissima has a little blush pink coloring in the lip. The variety Reineckiana, of which there are several sub-varieties, is a scarce and unique form. Sepals and petals are pure white, while there are rays of violet or slate-colored dots and lines around the base of the lip. The flowers average six inches across, although many will run considerably larger than this.

This cattleya succeeds well in pots, pans or baskets at the coolest end of the cattleya house. We have seen some fine examples of it in an ordinary greenhouse where a winter minimum temperature of 50 degrees was maintained. Plants should be kept well up to the light, with a little shade from March to early November. A compost of pure osmunda fern fibre suits it well. No need to use any moss for surfacing; the plants are better without it.

The sheaths carry from two to six flowers each, four being quite a common number. One of our Reineckianas carries five flowers to a sheath this season. The flowering season extends from early April to the end of June and any commercial growers who can use orchids during this period cannot go far astray in handling a few of these.

The accompanying illustration shows a plant carrying seventeen sheaths and fifty flowers, grown by William Swan, gardener to Mrs. R. C. Hooper, Manchester, Mass. This was a plant included in a case of newly imported stock received from Lager & Hurrell on March 15, 1904. We need hardly say that such a plant far more than pays its initial cost from its first crop of bloom.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Dry Weather Treatment.

In this section continued fair weather has rendered the surface soil very dry and to all outward appearance no moisture is at hand to support plant growth, but an examination will reveal an abundant supply just beneath the surface. This is especially true on land that has been kept cultivated, showing the advantage to be gained by frequent stirring of the soil. Besides, multitudes of sprouting weed seeds are prevented from further development.

It is not necessary to cultivate deeply; in fact, it is inadvisable to do so, at least close to the plants. All wholesale breaking up of the ground should have been done at time of plowing. Some growers plant in rows far enough apart to admit the use of a horse cultivator, but not all of us have sufficient land to allow of this, and in any event it is doubtful if it is economy to use twice the land needed. Certain it is that first-class plants can be grown in rows eighteen inches apart and set eight to ten inches apart in the row, using a hand cultivator to do the bulk of the work, a common hand hoe being needed to put on the finishing touches.

These hand cultivators are made with various adjustable tools, also to run between or astride the row, and it is surprising what an amount of clean, satisfactory work can be done in a day.

Whatever method is followed, it is important that the work be continuous. Even during extremely dry spells, nightly dews followed by the hot sun during the day soon form a crust over the surface. If any of the help inquire, "What shall I do next?" your answer can be promptly given: "Cultivate the carnation patch."

The carnation has been given the credit of being a natural surface feeder but this is largely due to local conditions and surroundings. A light shower, or the amount of water applied in ordinary use of the hose, penetrates the ground but a short distance, serving only to attract the roots to the surface. To be sure, we cannot prevent small rains, but we can cultivate immediately after, not only keeping the soil open but discouraging entrance of roots therein. Then we must not resort to artificial watering except in extreme cases and it is difficult to imagine a case bad enough to warrant the practice.

About the only watering that can be done in the field with profit is in the case of late propagated stock, a small quantity being given directly around the plants when setting, covering the moist soil with loose earth as soon as the water disappears.

Of course summer-blooming stock outside needs regular supplies of water to maintain vigorous growth and to keep up the size of bloom.

During dry spells the ever present cut worm is unusually active. As soon as evidence of their work is noticed no time should be lost in digging them out, as even one of these pests will do several dollars' worth of damage in as many hours.

Geo. S. Osborn.

ROT IN THE FIELD.

We have been having bad luck with our carnations. We have quite a number in the field, rooted cuttings planted from 2½-inch pots. They seem to rot at the roots. Can you tell us what is the trouble and what will overcome it?

J. A. W.

No, I cannot tell you what is causing your young carnations to rot at the roots in the field, because I do not know anything about the soil or the plants. Do the roots rot or does the stem rot? This would make all the difference in the world. If it is stem-rot you may lose only a few plants and they may have been affected before planting out. Pull up all that show the disease and burn them and throw a handful of slaked lime where the plants had been. A liberal dressing of slaked lime would likely help materially in keeping the fungus in check. If it is the roots that are rotting, then I would take up the young plants, dip the roots into lime water and plant into another piece of land. To make this lime water put a peck of fresh lime into fifty gallons of water and when cooled and settled use the clear water. If the rotting continues I would advise you not to house the plants that remain because you will have trouble all next winter with them.

A. F. J. Baur.

CARRYING TWO YEARS.

I have a bench of Mrs. Joost carnation planted late last season which I would like to run another year. In fact they were planted so late that they did not come into crop until the last part of February. The plants seem healthy and free from disease. Would you advise me to plant them out for a couple of months and prune them back or put a mulch on them and let them stay in the bench?

H. S. A.

Our experience with carrying over carnation plants the second season leads us to prefer good, strong, young plants as a rule. You will find that by fall the old plants will become very tall and unwieldy and will be hard to keep supported properly. They will grow in size until there is no air space between them and it is hard to keep red spider off of them without keping them too wet around the lower part of the plants. You cannot very well cut Mrs. Joost back on account of its habit of growth without cutting away the best part of the plant. Anyway it is too late to do that now and to plant them out just as they are would hardly do, as they would soon be lying all over the ground. My advice to you would be to plant good, strong, young plants early in August or late in July and you will have less trouble and a better crop next season.

A. F. J. Baur.

A SASH HOUSE.

I have forty hotbed sash, 3x6 feet, which I wish to use if possible in constructing a greenhouse, 15x60. Can I use these sash as part of the glass and put the ventilators fastened to the ridge? How long must each ventilator be if the house is used for carnations? How high should the side walls be?

J. N. H.

While it is possible to build a house out of your hotbed sash, it will not be an up-to-date house, to say the least. Such a house will answer very well for growing bedding stuff, or for wintering cool-blooded plants, but to grow first-class carnations it is not to be recommended. I would advise you to take the glass out of the sash and build a house with sash bars, as it should be built. The cost of the lumber will be very little more than what you would have to buy for the framework for a well-built sash house, and the value of the house in growing will pay you back the first season. It is difficult to build a sash house as light or as warm as a regular bar and glass house and they can never be built as tight. However, if you decide to use the hotbed sash I would advise you to build as follows:

The sides should be about four feet high. On top of these nail a plate 2x6 and give it the same slant the roof is to have. Let the plate cover two-thirds of the top of the post and let the lower edge project over the siding so that the water will drop clear of the siding. Put up a framework to lay the sash on and to hold the ridge. A 2x4 should run from the plate to the ridge wherever the sash meet. This 2x4 will throw less shade if put with the flat side against the sash. Each side of the roof will need to be nine feet to give the proper pitch, so the ventilators will have to be a few inches over three feet to allow for the lap on the sash where they meet. You can hinge the ventilators to either the ridge or to the sash if you have them made the same width as the sash.

A. F. J. BAUR.

PINE NEEDLES IN SOIL.

We have a compost pile intended for carnations this summer but one of our growers condemns it because there are pines growing nearby and the needles are mixed with the soil, though not in very large quantity. Can you tell me whether they will do harm? H. S. A.

I do not imagine that the pine needles would do your soil any harm if it is otherwise good. I have never noticed that the vegetation around pine trees or cedar trees is any less luxurious than anywhere else. We all know that right under the trees the grass is usually less thrifty than it is farther out, but that comes from the dense shade produced by the trees. Under other very dense trees you will notice the same thing. This, however, is merely my opinion. I have never had any actual experience along that line, so if your friend claims to really know from experience it might be well to heed his advice. In that case I would not discard the whole pile, but only a layer of a few inches thickness where the needles supposedly are. Try a little of the soil with a good lot of the needles mixed in and if it proves harmful let us know about it next winter. It may help some one else in the future.

THE BEST WHITE PEONY.

Charles Klehm, of Klehm's Nursery, Arlington Heights, Ill., where they consider 6,000 dozen peonies as only an average crop of cut flowers, and often harvest them in a week, says that he has a very pronounced idea at variance with the usual opinion as to what is the best white peony. The average grower will answer unhesitatingly that the best variety is Festiva maxima. Mr. Klehm speaks for that sort known variously as Queen Victoria, Whitleyi or Whittleseyi. Mr. Klehm deals in cut flowers for the Chicago wholesale market rather than in plants.

"Whitleyi is a splendid keeper. It may be picked in tight bud and placed in cold storage, where it will remain in good condition for as much as six weeks. On coming out it opens quickly when free from its wrappings and exposed in a store. It develops even better than on the plant and will retain its beauty for twenty-four hours or so, after which it goes to sleep. Festiva maxima does not keep so well in storage and on coming out of storage it pops open and very quickly drops its petals. Festiva maxima is a taller grower and a larger flower but where great quantities are grown for cut flowers Whitleyi is a much more profitable sort."

ACETYLENE IN GREENHOUSES.

At Cornell University experiments have been made with acetylene gas to determine its relation to plant growth. These have been prompted by the claim that acetylene more closely approximates the light of the sun than does any other artificial light. The experiments have been closely watched by Prof. Bailey and Prof. Craig and are thus described by M. J. Irons in a recent issue of the Acetylene Journal:

Has "Old Sol" a substitute? The torch, the dip, the candle, the lamp, gas, electricity, acetylene—all these mark successive stages in man's effort to answer that question. In the plant world it would seem that the answer must ever be negative, but Prof. L. H. Bailey showed that in some cases, even in plant growth, electricity helped out if not replaced sunlight. As acetylene has proved efficient in cases where electricity has failed, it occurred to Prof. Craig to try and see if in plant growth acetylene would not succeed where other kinds of light had been unsatisfactory or failed entirely. By his suggestion, I took up the subject for investigation and have carried it on for some three months and over.

This question has two sides, the scientific and the commercial, and I have tried to learn as much for each side as possible, though naturally laying more stress on the scientific side. As said above, the experiment has been carried on for over three months, a multitude of facts have been gathered, many, very many, observations recorded; but I am not ready to draw definite conclusions. It is my purpose to show some of the striking facts obtained, let you draw your own conclusions, and then by next year's work tell you whether you were right or not. In these days when every new truth has to undergo such close scrutiny, it is not advisable to draw conclusions until you are ready to back them up by repeated demonstrations.

Two houses were used in my work, one a cool house and one a warm house, to suit the different classes of plants dealt with. As the cool house was the one first started and the one from which I obtained the most of my results, I will confine myself to it. The results from the other house in every way corroborated the facts given.

A small greenhouse was divided into two sections by a curtain impenetrable to light. A "Dissolving Process" generator was used with twelve thirty-five candle power burners of various makes. The lights were run all dark hours, making from fourteen to nine hours each night, depending on the season and day. Every precaution was taken to make the sun, soil, temperature and moisture conditions the same on each side of the curtain. The lights were well distributed in one-half the house and suspended about four feet from the level of the beds. Ordinary tin reflectors were used to throw the light down.

Each plant on the lighted side had its exact duplicate on the opposite side of the curtain. In cases where the exact duplicate could not be found the better plant was in every case placed on the dark side. Every effort was made to eliminate everything but the effect of the acetylene light. With this thought ever before you I will pass to some of the results obtained.

There was a marked aeceleration of growth under the influence of the acetylene light rays, Easter lilies attaining twice the height and blooming ten days to two weeks earlier than unlighted plants.

The marked difference in vegetative growth suggested that this increase might be made at the expense of the root development. To test this, radishes onions and several other plants were taken and comparisons of weights of the root and vegetative systems were made, with results shown in case of the radishes. The other plants substantiated to more or less degree these results, so I only give the radishes, the variety being Non Plus Ultra:

	Lighted.	Dark.
Number	37	38
Weight Tops	63 grams	26 grams
Weight Roots	83 grams	35 grams
Total weight	146 grams	61 grams

Photographs show the great difference in vegetative growth of all the plants and, in the case of the alyssum, the difference in the infloresence. On the light side of the curtain the sweet peas have been in bloom for several days, and on the garden peas good sized pods have formed, while on the dark side not even buds are showing on either the sweet or garden peas. Not all the difference in height is due to the lengthening of the internodes.

The closing of the experiment at this time was due to the commercial side of the question. If the use of the light is of value commercially, it will be of greatest value during the short, often cloudy, days of winter; hence it was deemed advisable to close for this season and take it up again next fall and then run it through the winter.

If the acetylene with sunlight causes such difference, what will it do alone? This is one of the most interesting of all the questions from the scientific standpoint. Experiment has shown some of the things it will do, as plants have been flowered that never had seen daylight. They were never brought into the house until it was dark and were taken back to the dark room before daylight, yet the narcissus produced its flowers and these flowers lasted over a week on the plant. All the other plants were doing well when the experiment closed. This work will be carried out much more fully next year.

I have thus sketched for you some of the main facts, not wearying you with detail and figures. Each plant was watched from day to day and any change noted. At intervals of from two days to a week or more, depending upon the needs, complete notes were taken of everything and photographs made of all the more important features. Nothing was taken for granted where proof could be obtained, but even with all that care, I do not wish to draw conclusions until I have still further proof.

In the above list of facts I have said nothing of the effect the light had upon cuttings, buds, foliage plants, flowers and various other things concerning plant growth. Perhaps if deemed sufficiently interesting I shall at some future time treat of them, but I can say that all the results obtained harmonize very well with the ones given.

Are you now ready to answer the first question? Have we found a light that will perform all the sun's functions in plant growth? Who can say, in the face of facts given, what acetylene cannot do?

THE GLASS MARKET.

A New York report says that the market for window glass has been somewhat disappointing. Business which should be active is only moderate at best, but there is less disposition to force a market by indiscriminate cutting, and prices are firm upon the basis of 90 and 20 per cent off the list for the first two brackets single B and 90 and 25 per cent for machine glass. All other sizes are quoted at 90 and 10 per cent off the list. Nearly all the factories have gone out of blast, but a few are still running on A glass, of which the market is rather bare.

The American Window Glass Co. will likely continue on machine glass throughout the summer if the men will agree. The low prices at which they offered this glass some time ago invited such a heavy volume of orders that the price has been withdrawn and they are not offering any stock at present. The manufacturers of all grades have been well sold up and have almost completed deliveries, leaving the stock altogether in jobbers' hands. Very little glass will reach the market for distribution during the balance of the summer. The jobbers will now hold their annual conventions and size up the situation.

CLEANING GREENHOUSES.

When greenhouses are about to be emptied, so that no loss is caused by damage to plants, or after the house is emptied and before replanting, the structures may be cleansed of insect life either by applying hydrocyanic acid gas or by burning sulphur.

To cleanse by the gas the following materials are needed: Potassic cyanid (98 per cent) .25 gram per cubic foot; sulphuric acid, one-half more by measure; water, one-half more than sulphuric acid. Multiply the number of cubic feet to be fumigated by .25, giving the number of grams of cyanid; divide the answer by 28.35, giving the weight of the cyanid in ounces. Take one and a half times as many fluid ounces of acid and two and a half times as many fluid ounces of water as ounces by weight of cyanid. Mix water and acid in an earthen or granite ware jar, then by loose bag and string drop in the cyanid after closing tightly the house to be fumigated. Leave closed forty minutes; then open from the outside and air thoroughly for at least ten minutes before entering.

To cleanse an empty house by sulphur, close the house tight and burn 200 grams (about six ounces) to 1,000 cubic feet of space. Keep the house closed at least twelve hours.

THE SHIPPING MARKET.

There can be no question but that New York handles more cut flowers than any other city in the country, but there is no market which can compare with Chicago as a center for the shipping trade. This has been well understood for years, but the new arrangements resulting from the express drivers' strike in Chicago have served to emphasize the fact. When five express companies each sent a wagon into the market to pick up outgoing shipments it so separated the boxes that their number was hardly apparent, but under the exisiting arrangement the shipments from the seventeen wholesale places are consolidated and make an impressive showing.

On Sunday before Decoration day probably more boxes went out from the Chicago market than on any one previous day. They were all consolidated at the corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street and loaded upon the wagons which the wholesalers are operating on their own account in the absence of the express service. The accompanying illustrations serve to give a partial idea of what the business amounted to on that day. In all between 700 and 800 boxes went out and the pictures only show a small part of the day's business. It is estimated that $20 is a fair average value for each box. On that basis the day's shipments would have approximated $15,000.

Not only do the huge piles of boxes serve to give an idea of the extent to which the shipping business has grown, but the division according to the trains serves to give an idea as to where Chicago gets the bulk of its business. Pittsburg gets a great deal of stock from Chicago; so does Omaha and so do St. Paul and Minneapolis, while other cities in the far west and northwest are also heard from. But it was noticeable that the largest pile of boxes under the present shipping arrangement has been the one that was to go out on the Illinois Central. The south is Chicago's best customer.

The strike of express drivers and other teamsters in Chicago, although it has now apparently worn itself out, has served to deprive Chicago of millions of dollars of business, but the wholesale cut flower industry has escaped better than any other line at all dependent upon express service. The day after the strike began, on April 27, the wholesalers met and organized the Chicago Wholesale Florists' Association, with F. F. Benthey president, John P. Risch secretary and C. M. Dickinson treasurer. The association engaged Fred Lautenschlager to conduct its transportation business. The strikers permitted Mr. Lautenschlager to pass the picket line with "funeral flowers." Since the day of its inception the service has operated to greater satisfaction than the former service of the express companies. On some days, like May 28, five wagons have been employed in hauling the shipments, making trains on short notice and at any hour. The agreement was that the wholesalers should share in paying the expenses of the service in proportion of the number of boxes each house had to go out. To date (six weeks) nearly 7,000 boxes have been handled and the cost has been only about 13 cents per box. And if it were not for Sunday, when overtime has to be paid and few shipments are made, the cost would be much less. Certainly the Chicago wholesale cut flower industry is to be congratulated upon the way it has come through the present labor difficulty.

A PERMANENT BENCH.

At the George Wittbold Co.'s establishment in Chicago, they are building benches after a fashion of their own, but which are warranted to be as near permanent as anything connected with a modern greenhouse and which are also comparatively inexpensive.

To begin with they set a cement foundation for vitrified drain tiles to serve as legs for the bench. When these are set they cover them with a flooring of boards to serve as a temporary bottom for the bench. When this is completed a strip of galvanized iron six inches wide is laid on for the sides of the bench. The end pieces are wood. The sides are held together by rods of half-inch pipe across the bench at the bottom, through which a rod and bolt tie the galvanized iron sides to the pipe. When all is in position they fill an inch of cement around the pipes which are lying on the temporary wooden bottom. When the cement is set they knock out the wooden flooring, which permits the permanent bench to settle upon its tile supports. There is a row of supports through the middle of the bench if it is a wide one and a bench not only has good drainage but is strong, indestructible and easy to empty.

PIPING.

I have a greenhouse 14x50 feet and ten feet to the ridge which is to be heated by hot water. What size and how many runs of pipe will be needed to get 50 to 55 degrees at night when the outside temperature is 6 degrees below zero? I have 100 feet of 2½-inch pipe I would like to use. C. L. L.

Since you have the 100 feet of 2½-inch pipe on hand, it would not be improper to use this size throughout. Three hundred feet in all, of 2½-inch pipe, would be required, or the 100 feet of 2½-inch you have on hand and 230 feet of 2-inch, 290 feet of 1½-inch, or 330 feet of 1¼-inch. The larger pipe should be used as flow pipes and the smaller for returns. L. C. C.

GAS FOR MEALY BUG.

My greenhouses are overrun by mealy bugs and I should like to try the cyanide of potassium fumigating process. Will you be good enough to publish in the REVIEW the formula and quantity to use per cubic foot in a rose house, carnation house, violet house and a house containing orchids, palms and ferns? E. C. D.

If anyone has fumigated orchids with hydrocyanic acid gas it has not come under our attention. The materials required are ninety-eight per cent cyanide of potassium, commercial sulphuric acid and water. The method of combining and quantities required have been published so often that doubtless the editor will not care to devote space to going fully into the subject again. A great deal of caution is necessary, not only because the gas is deadly poison, but because too much of it will burn the plants. The young growth of roses is particularly sensitive. A great deal will also depend on the tightness of the houses in determining the quantity of gas to be used. For a starter the quantity of cyanide should not exceed one-tenth of a gram for each cubic foot. Better start weak and watch results; you can increase the dose as conditions warrant. If you do not keep your Reviews on file for reference, as you should, and if you have no copy of Scott's Manual, send to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Circular No. 37, entitled "The Use of Hydrocyanic Acid Gas for Fumigating." H. O.

Vegetable Forcing.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin, No. 220, entitled Tomatoes, by L. C. Corbett, to supersede the one on this subject issued in 1898. All phases of the subject are covered in the new work.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, June 7.—Cucumbers, 25c to 50c doz.; mushrooms, 35c to 60c lb.; lettuce, 20c to 35c case; head lettuce, 50c to $2 tub.

Boston, June 5.—Cucumbers, $1.25 to $3.50 box; lettuce, 15c to 25c doz.; tomatoes, 12½c to 15c lb.; beets, $1 doz. bunches; carrots, 75c to $1 doz. bunches; turnips, 75c doz. bunches.

New York, June 5.—Cucumbers, $2.50 to $3 case; lettuce, 75c to $1.50 bbl.; mushrooms, 15c to 40c lb.

FIXING UP AND CLEANING.

Now that the busy season is over, this is a good time to look over the houses and benches and have all necessary repairs attended to. It is poor policy to wait and run the risk of delaying the planting, when repairs may be as well attended to now, besides, when plenty of time can be given to repairs they can be done far more satisfactorily than when things have to be rushed.

The houses should be painted over, both outside and inside, if they are at all in need of it. A house kept in good repair and kept well painted will outlast a structure neglected in this respect by quite a few years, so it is poor policy to try and save expense by withholding the paint.

Though plants may not grow any faster in a clean, fresh house, nevertheless they won't be so much troubled with insect enemies. In houses where such pests as mealy bug have been troublesome, the house must receive a thorough cleaning or the pest will be far more troublesome the coming season. The best way to clean it is to give it a coat of paint. This we generally find better and easier than washing when the washing has to be thoroughly done. To thoroughly wash and scrub a house takes quite some time and unless time and labor are spent on it, it might as well be left alone, for the insects harbor in every little crevice and if only a few are left they will accumulate so quickly as to prove a serious menace to any crops on which they find a breeding place.

Where any benches are to be renewed, use cypress in preference to any other kind of wood. It may cost more but its lasting qualities more than counterbalance the extra cost.

When the benches are empty they should receive a good whitewashing with lime. This not only destroys all insect life and spores of fungi but is one of the best wood preservatives that can be used.

Any old tobacco stems or other rubbish should be raked from under the benches and all around under the benches should be dusted with air-slaked lime. A liberal dusting will kill all snails and other insect life and help to sweeten the atmosphere of the house. Some may think that all these preliminaries are unnecessary but those who go to the trouble of attending to them will find in the end that it is time and labor well spent.

TOMATOES UNDER GLASS.

By George E. Stone, Amherst, Mass.

Tomatoes have been grown under glass in Massachusetts for over twenty-five years. They have not, however, been so extensively and profitably grown as cucumbers and lettuce. The method of growing this crop has not undergone any remarkable changes, as is the case of lettuce and other greenhouse crops.

Seeding and Transplanting.

Tomato seeds are usually sown in flats, and when the seedlings are from two to three inches high they can be conveniently transplanted into 3-inch pots. They may be left in these pots until they have thickened up somewhat and reached a height of eight inches or more, when they should be transferred to 6-inch pots, where they can be left until ready for final transplanting. Plants twelve to sixteen inches high are suitable for setting in the beds.

There is an opportunity in transplanting, as in most other things, for the exercise of judgment. We have frequently transplanted the third time into 10-inch or 12-inch pots, but this third transfer is not necessary, although the time of final transplanting can be deferred if the plants are in large pots. One can also get along with one transplanting, namely, into 6-inch pots from the flats. We believe the opinion is generally held that transplanting induces the growth of better and more stocky plants, and we believe that two transplantings give better results than one.

Soil Conditions.

Unlike lettuce, tomatoes are not especially susceptible to soil texture. Any good loam is suitable for them and they even do well in coal ashes when supplied with chemical fertilizers. A soil containing one-third horse manure, one-third loam and one-third decomposed soil furnishes a desirable media for tomatoes. By the application of a liberal supply of manure each year a soil of this nature can be used indefinitely.

Pots, Benches or Beds.

Tomatoes are frequently forced in 10-inch or 12-inch pots, but our experience in growing in pots of the size noted above has not been such as to recommend them for large crops. Root restriction has a tendency to induce early maturity of fruit and limit the life of the plant. Pot-grown plants, according to our experience, are likely to become spindling. Sixteen or 18-inch boxes are superior to pots, and we believe that only one plant should be grown in boxes of this size.

Bench culture is better than pot culture, since the roots have more available space to utilize, and better plants and larger crops can be grown in benches six inches deep than in pots. We have grown extensively in pots, shallow and deep benches and in raised solid beds, and we prefer solid beds to either benches or pots, although benches twelve inches deep and two and one-half feet wide have given good results.

This Spring's Display of Calceolarias at Garfield Park, Chicago.

Pruning.

It is the consensus of opinion among those who have grown tomatoes under glass that the one shoot system gives the best results. In other words, the largest amount of fruit per square foot of ground surface can be obtained from one-stemmed plants. Space under glass is expensive and greenhouse gardeners should consider carefully what returns each square foot is capable of producing under normal conditions.

The single-stemmed plants are obtained by keeping all of the laterals and axillary shoots removed. Plants grown in this manner can be set from twelve to sixteen inches apart in the rows, but we do not think it desirable to have the rows less than four feet apart. The axillary shoots in any system of pruning should be nipped out, as they are of little or no use to the plant. In our opinion, if they are allowed to grow they take more from the plant than they are capable of returning.

Sometimes old plants are regenerated by cutting the leaders back and allowing axillaries to develop and bear fruit. We have tried this method on old plants that have completed their first crop and have found these axillary shoots to be poor, unsatisfactory bearers under all circumstances.

Tomato stems readily take root when placed in sandy soil, and some growers have recommended cuttings of tomatoes rather than seedlings. We have tried both methods side by side under glass and consider the cuttings poor material.

Occasionally tomatoes are pruned to two or more stems. This is accomplished by either allowing one or more of the strong laterals to develop or by cutting the young plant back near the ground and inducing two or more leaders to develop.

Heading.

Tomato plants grown in good soil can amply supply plastic material for the development of a number of clusters of fruit, but experience has shown that single-stemmed plants set closely together are capable of producing the largest amount of fruit per square foot of ground surface. With any system of pruning it is especially desirable, according to our view, to practice heading in the leader above the fourth or sixth cluster of fruit.

We have shown in our experiments that heading in constitutes the best method of diverting the energies of the plant into the fruit. Every part of the plant is influenced and modified in its growth by pruning. For example, pruning the lower leaves affects the size of fruit, but more especially the growth of the stem, whereas, heading in produces the most favorable modifications in the fruit.

In pruning the following law should be borne in mind. Namely, that pruning secondary organs (leaves, etc.) the energies of the plant are directed toward the leader, and, conversely, by pruning primary organs (stems, leaders, etc.) the energies of the plant are directed toward the development of secondary organs (fruit, etc.).

The advantages of pruning are as follows: To secure early maturity of fruit; to obtain larger average size of the same; to expose the fruit to light, and to restrict the vines to certain definite space.

PIPING.

I have just finished a new greenhouse and would like to be told how to pipe it for hot water. It is a lean-to on the east side of another house, forty feet long, ten feet wide, five feet high on the east side and seven feet on the west where there are forty-two inches of glass. I want to keep 70 degrees in the Wisconsin climate. W. P.

For heating this house I would recommend one 2-inch flow pipe along the side next to the adjoining house, this pipe to cross the far end of the house, and six 2-inch return pipes under the bench on the outer side of the house. Two or three of these return pipes should be controlled by having a gate valve inserted near the lower end. These pipes should have a fall of at least four inches in the length of the house. The air outlet should be at the highest point in the flow pipe. L. C. C.

ARSENICAL INSECTICIDES.

The arsenical compounds have supplanted, practically, all other substances for the insects which feed externally and may therefore be destroyed by applying poison to the leaves and stems of plants. The two arsenicals in most common use, and obtainable everywhere, are Paris green and London purple. The other arsenicals mentioned, viz., arsenite of copper, arsenite of lime, and arsenate of lead, are less known and not so easily obtainable, but in some respects are better than the first-mentioned poisons, as will be shown later. Powdered white arsenic cannot be employed on account of its scalding action on foliage.

The arsenicals mentioned have the following characteristics, according to a bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Paris green is a definite chemical compound of white arsenic, copper oxide, and acetic acid (known as the aceto-arsenite of copper), and should have a nearly uniform composition. It is usually a rather coarse powder, or, more properly speaking, crystal, and settles rapidly in water, which is its greatest fault. Its excessive cost, about 20 cents a pound, is due to its being crystallized with acetic acid, making it a more brilliant pigment, but giving it a coarse grain and rendering it a much poorer insecticide.

Copper arsenite is similar to Paris green in color, and differs from it only in lacking acetic acid; in other words, it is the simple arsenite of copper. It is a much finer powder than Paris green, and therefore more easily kept in suspension, and has the additional advantage of costing only about half as much per pound. When properly washed and prepared by the manufacturers it is no more harmful to foliage than Paris green when the latter is brought to an equal fineness, is quicker in effect, and should supplant the latter as an insecticide. It is used in the same way and at about the same strength as Paris green and London purple.

Arsenite of lime, following substantially the Kedzie formula, is prepared by the aid of soda as follows: White arsenic, one pound; sal soda crystals, four pounds; water, one gallon. Boil the arsenic and sal soda in the water for twenty minutes, or until dissolved. Add enough water to make up for the loss by evaporation. This stock mixture will keep indefinitely. For ordinary spraying operations add one pint of the stock mixture to forty gallons of water, in which has been previously mixed about three pounds of freshly slaked lime. Chemically, this arsenical is arsenite of lime. The soda is used to hasten the process and to insure the combination of all the arsenic with the lime. The greatest care should be exercised in preparing the stock mixture, and afterwards in keeping it plainly labeled to prevent its being mistaken for some other substance. In actual practice the arsenite of lime has proven as effective as the older arsenical compounds. Its cost is very inconsiderable, which, with its proven effectiveness, is its chief recommendation. The objections to it are the necessity of handling poisons in its home preparation and its color.

London purple is a waste product in the manufacture of aniline dyes, and contains a number of substances, chief of which are white arsenic and lime. It is not so effective as the green poisons, and is much more apt to scald unless mixed with lime. It comes as a very fine powder, and is more easily kept in suspension than Paris green. It costs about 10 cents a pound.

Arsenate of lead is prepared by combining, approximately, three parts of the crystallized arsenate of soda with seven parts of the crystallized acetate of lead (white sugar of lead) in water. These substances when pulverized unite readily and form a white precipitate, which is more easily kept suspended in water than any of the other poisons.

Arsenate of lead may be used at any strength from three to fifteen pounds to 100 gallons of water without injury to the foliage, and in this respect is much safer on delicate plants than any other arsenical. The combined weights of the two ingredients are here meant rather than of the resulting lead arsenate, which will be somewhat less. Its use is advised where excessive strengths are desirable or with delicate plants where scalding is otherwise liable to result. With this insecticide there is an advantage in using the freshly prepared and wet mixture in that it gives a more filmy and adhering coating to foliage, the same fineness not being secured when it has been dried and repulverized.

In point of solubility and corresponding danger of scalding the foliage these arsenicals fall in the following order, the least soluble first: Arsenate of lead, arsenite of lime, Paris green, copper arsenite, and London purple. The difference between the first four is not great in the particulars noted nor in point of effectiveness against larvæ or other insects. London purple is ordinarily considerably less effective.

John H. Dunlop.

JOHN H. DUNLOP.

The largest greenhouse establishment in the Dominion of Canada, and one of the largest in America, is that of John H. Dunlop, of Toronto. As is the case with all of the older establishments, this one grew from a very small beginning, slowly at first, keeping in step with the development of the demand for greenhouse products. Mr. Dunlop was born in 1855, in New York, but his family removed to Toronto in the early 60's. The boy was not content until he had roamed a bit, but in 1875 he settled down in that city. It was five or six years later that he built his first greenhouse, the embryo of the present enormous establishment. It was added to year by year as space was required, for the business grew steadily, even faster than the normal development of our industry, for Mr. Dunlop has always been a producer of that grade of goods which causes the buyer to seek the source of supply. An old philosopher once said something to the effect that if one sets up his dwelling in the wilderness and produces a better article than can be had elsewhere, the buyers will beat a pathway to his door. Mr. Dunlop has endeavored to act on that line of reasoning.

The early houses in this establishment were of most crude construction but, as years have gone by, every new idea has been given a trial and Mr. Dunlop has said of his place that in no other establishment in America have so many styles of greenhouses been built. He says that his preference is for the modern, high, light, connected houses but that it is his experience that, given a good enough grower, the stock will be all right whatever the style of greenhouse.

Mr. Dunlop was a pioneer in the forcing of lily of the valley in Canada and he has also led the way in the culture of roses and carnations. Even in the face of the tariff charge, Mr. Dunlop's roses steadily find their way to several of the principal cities south of the great lakes.

Mr. Dunlop has traveled widely in his efforts to keep pace with the floriculture procession and has visited most of the well known establishments in the United States. He is active in society matters and was for a term president of the Canadian Horticultural Society. At the last meeting of the Carnation Society he was the spokesman for Canada in its invitation for the society to cross the line, as it has practicaly pledged itself to do in 1907.

BUFFALO.

Memorial Day.

We were told by our weather man that Memorial day was to be cloudy and rainy and other disagreeable things. How good that his word, like many others, is not infallible. It was a glorious day, warm and bright from early morn to dewy eve, and all the population that was not bedridden seemed to be outdoors. It seemed to be an extra day in this city. In the morning there was a small monument unveiled at the grave of Gen. Parker, a full blooded descendant of Red Jacket and who was a right bower of Gen. Grant in the closing scenes of the great war. He lies with other illustrious red-skinned Americans near Red Jacket in beautiful Forest Lawn.

Later in the day a splendid plot of ground was dedicated to the soldiers and sailors of all our wars who lie in Forest Lawn. Their number has outgrown the capacity of the old plot. This attracted thousands to Forest Lawn and other thousands went to visit the resting place of their friends. Altogether it was the greatest Memorial day we can remember and all this helped the business.

Flowers were none too plentiful. Tulips were all gone and lilac and snowballs scarcely in. Valley was just right, but we had to depend largely on carnations, roses, lilies and other greenhouse flowers. The demand was certainly great. Many of the donations from the public schools to the G. A. R. consisted of flowering plants, mostly geraniums, fuchsias and small hydrangeas. Many hundreds of vases had been promised for Memorial day, and, wet weather having delayed work the previous week, it meant a killing forty-eight hours for the Pine Hill folks as well as for the Limestone Ridge florists. In Forest Lawn it was a procession of florists' wagons for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The market people did a great business for several days previous. A. F. Christenson had seven wagons going to Chippewa market all day Saturday. The Main street stores made a fine display and all seem to have cleaned out everything. But in this cool locality the plant business will not be over for two weeks. This is really the week of the rush. All are afraid of frost until June 1 and then all want their gardens fixed up at once.

Various Notes.

Mr. Braik is filling the park beds this week. It would be difficult for the most expert commercial man to turn out more in quantity or finer in quality than he does from three houses each 20x100. But here is a splendid illustration of the great use that can be made of hotbeds and cold frames. Hundreds of sash have been filled with fine stuff, all the overflow from the three houses. All together about 300,000 bedding plants will be put out, besides the large quantity that Prof. Cowell uses in the South park. You know the Elks are coming and, if they will be able to see at all, we want them to see Buffalo beautiful. As the weather will likely be hot when the army of philanthropists meets here, there is some talk of filtering Lake Erie for their especial benefit.

Visitors of late: S. S. Skidelsky and Mr. Platibus McHutchinson. W. S.

PRINCETON, KY.—J. S. Stremler says business has been exceptionally good this season. His Decoration day sales were double last year's.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Decoration day trade, which never amounts to much here, was surprisingly good and all report a great increase for this holiday. The wholesalers, too, report a big shipping business the day before. All grades were picked up at advanced prices and stock became suddenly scarce. Retail prices also advanced to double. The best grade of stock was not looked for, as is usual on floral holidays. The plant business was very heavy, probably far ahead of any year, especially with the florists who are near the big cemeteries.

This week we expect much activity among the local trade for weddings and school closings, and the wholesalers expect a heavy demand all during this month. Today, Monday, stock is coming in small lots and it looks as though there will be a scarcity in all grades this week. Long Beauties are limited to a few hundred. Mediums and shorts are plentiful.

Dandy Adv. Never saw anything like the quick response. Sold out in two days. Had to return about $60 and have orders still coming in.

Bradford, Pa.,

Fancy stock in the smaller roses is becoming scarce, though plenty of poorer grades are in. Carnations have been short of the demand since Decoration day, at from $2 to $3 per hundred. Lily of the valley is selling much better and some extra fine stock is in the market. Sweet peas are coming in heavily. The bulk of this stock comes from Kirkwood, where about ten growers are trying to outdo each other with this popular flower. White, pink and lavender sell the best. A few callas and Harrisii are still coming in. Peonies in this locality are over and those in the market are being shipped in.

Planting season is about over and the growers are getting busy making alterations and building new houses so as to be ready for the fall trade.

Various Notes.

Harry Balsley, of Detroit, is in town.

Charlie Wors is selling flowers at the West End Heights garden and Fred Foster has the stand at Delmar garden. Both report good trade, especially on Sundays.

City Hall park looks very handsome this year. Those fifty fine specimen bay trees set it off nicely. The bedding, too, is very attractive. Forest park, too, under the supervision of George Ostertag, has some very attractive bedding.

President Charles Juengel, of the Florists' Club, has been ill the past week, but is about again and will be in the chair at the club meeting this week.

Miss Tillie Meinhardt reports that they were so busy on Decoration day that they could hardly attend to all the wants of their customers. Everything sold clean.

Miss Schnell, over in East St. Louis, has moved to a better and larger location. She buys all her stock on this side of the river and reports a big trade on Decoration day.

Frank M. Ellis is now one of the vice-presidents of the American Chocolate Culture Co., which has large plantations in bananas and chocolate trees in Panama, with offices in the Fullerton building of this city.

Fred Foster got quite an advertisement out of the daily press by chasing a man who stole $10 from him through the principal business streets, several hundred men joining in the chase.

Henry Ostertag reports that he has several large weddings on for this month. Decoration day business and plenty of funeral work kept them very busy all of last week.

Miss Beula Hurst is now with the St. Louis Palm Co., having left the employ of Miss Badaracco a week ago.

The local seedsmen are making preparations to attend the twenty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., this month. They say quite a number from here will attend.

The American Association of Nurserymen, which meets in convention next week Wednesday at West Baden Springs, Ind., will have a good representation of local nurserymen in attendance.

Henry Lohrenz, who operates the Park Floral Co., reports a nice trade this spring in plants and floral work of all kinds.

Charles Kuehn says he will grow a mustache this summer to make him stronger in his bowling. This one, he says, will so eclipse any former attempts that his friends will hardly know him at Washington this summer.

Carl Beyer, who has not been bowling much of late, says he is getting too fat. Carl should cut out banquets and take J. Austin Shaw's remedy, a fast.

The Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association will hold its June meeting next Wednesday afternoon at 3 p. m. in Louisiana hall.

June 4 was the first Sunday opening of the year at the Missouri Botanical Garden, which is only open to the public on two Sundays in the year, June and September. Nearly 15,000 visited the garden during the day. In the absence of Prof. Trelease, Mr. Irish and the students were on hand to show the visitors through this beautiful place. The garden is in excellent condition. The orchid house was the most interesting point, which is in charge of Geo. McClure. The other interesting point was Tower Grove park, near by, which is one of our finest city parks, under the supervision of James Gurney.

At the bowling meeting on Monday night six members and Harry Balsley, with his peculiar "spit" curve ball, rolled a few games, which resulted as follows: Beneke, 848; Kuehn, 815; Beyer, 736; Balsley, 736; Gerlach, 609; Lohrenz, 324; Meinhardt, 527.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Memorial day trade was admittedly far ahead of that of any previous year. Later reports are practically unanimous on this point. The market has cleaned up remarkably well since then, considering the quantity of material which is coming in. Roses continue plentiful. White moves slowest. From $1 to $4 are ruling quotations on Brides and Maids, a few select going up to $6. Best Beauties continue to bring $25. Carnot and Kaiserin are coming in more plentifully. Select carnations fetch $4, good stock $2, while the poorer grades go as low as 75 cents.

Sweet peas are poorer in quality. Top price for these is 75 cents. Lilium Harrisii is rather scarce at $10 to $12.50. Valley from outdoors is now over. A few peonies are coming in, chiefly the officinalis and single varieties. Doubles will not be in season this week unless we have very hot weather. Such promiscuous stock as feverfew, stocks, candytuft, etc., sells slowly. Good colored gladioli sell well, the best reaching $10. If the drought continues outdoor flowers will not prove much of a factor this season. Peonies look well, but roses are much below the average.

Rhododendron Show.

The annual exhibition on June 3 and 4 took place a week too early for rhododendrons, nevertheless there was a very nice display of this popular flower. The largest exhibitor was Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener, who staged over 300 bottles. E. A. Clark took first prize for twelve hardy varieties. For six varieties, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, Blue Hill Nurseries, and W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen, gardener, won in order named. Mrs. Gardner also made a large general display. T. D. Hatfield secured a silver medal for a magnificent plant, beautifully flowered, of Rhododendron lucidum grown in a tub. The plant was eleven feet high and as much across. For twelve vases hardy azaleas William Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, was first, and T. C. Thurlow second. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was first and T. C. Thurlow second for six varieties. W. Whitman was first and second for finest single sprays.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner took first for the best collection of pyrethrums with an excellent lot, W. J. Clemson being second. For thirty-six vases of Iris Germanica W. Whitman was in the lead. Some extensive collections of hardy ornamental trees and shrubs were shown, E. A. Clark being first, followed by Mrs. J. L. Gardner and W. H. Heustis.

There was a fine display of tree peonies, Mrs. J. L. Gardner winning, followed by T. C. Thurlow. For thirty varieties herbaceous flowers Blue Hill Nurseries won with an excellent lot, a large vase of Incarvillea Delavayi being especially noteworthy. W. J. Clemson was second. J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johansson, gardener, had a fine table of orchids, mixed with adiantums and Asparagus Sprengeri, which secured first prize in its class. The same exhibitor secured a certificate of merit for Lælio-cattleya Lycidas (L. tenebrosa x C. Schrœderæ) and honorable mention for Cypripedium Lamontianum (C. Calypso x C. Rothschildianum).

E. O. Orpet showed another of his seedlings, Lælia Pacavia (L. tenebrosa x L. purpurata) which received a certificate of merit. He also had a vase of fine spikes of Odontoglossum crispum and Cattleya Mendelli Morganiæ. Edward McMulkin put up a large group of palms and other decorative plants, W. Whitman a collection of named pyrethrums from Kelway, sweet williams and moutan peonies; R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had a collection of Iris Germanica and other herbaceous plants; Mrs. E. M. Gill a general display, the Groton School of Horticulture fine white stocks. The Boston park department had an extensive display of branches of flowering trees and shrubs, which was quite an attraction. We hope to see further exhibits from them, but trust J. W. Duncan will have them staged before 12:30, seeing that the exhibits are supposed to be ready at 11 o'clock. Dr. C. G. Weld, Wm. C. Rust, gardener, received a cultural certificate for two big and grandly flowered specimens of the old Calceolaria rugosa Golden Gem. For forty bottles native plants Mrs. Arthur Clark and the East Weymouth School were first and second.

Owing to the season being a little late, the annual peony show has been postponed from June 10 to June 17.

Quite a number of applications for visits have recently been received by the garden committee. Dr. C. S. Minot, Dr. R. T. Jackson and T. C. Thurlow have entered peony gardens and the Plant Estate, Groton, Conn., their herbaceous garden for new prizes offered in the schedule.

Flower Markets' Picnic.

The stall-holders of the two flower markets had ideal weather for their picnic on June 3, which was held in a field kindly loaned by Robert Montgomery, of Natick. As the speedy Boston and Worcester electrics passed the grounds every few minutes, transportation was very convenient. About 100 florists, with a goodly sprinkling of ladies, were present. The chief attraction was a baseball game between teams from the rival markets, which lasted most of the afternoon and proved exciting enough to suit the most pronounced fans. Brophy and Fisher had a great pitchers' battle for supremacy, which was kept up to the end of the tenth inning. The teams were as follows:

Park St.		Music Hall.
Guerrineau	C. F.	Holden
Free	1 B.	F. Capers
Evans	S. S.	Ward
Stock	L. F.	Rough
McGinty	3 B.	Matthews
Manter	R. F.	Elwood
Harrigan	2 B.	H. Capers
Edgar	C.	McFarland
Fisher	P.	Brophy

It was necessary to play ten innings to decide the game, the Music Hall market finally winning by 13 to 12, amid the enthusiastic cheers of their supporters. As all the players showed champion form it would be invidious to select any particular stars. Suffice it to say that we think some of the floral ball players should soon secure admission to one or other of the Boston league teams.

In addition to the baseball games, races and dancing were in order, some inspiring music being furnished for those who chose to trip the light fantastic on the green sward. Refreshments were served to everyone and all present voted that they had had a first-class time.

Mr. Montgomery's rose houses were inspected during the afternoon. Every thing was found in fine shape. A house of Brides and Maids planted April 6 was yielding some fine flowers. Several houses of older stock, some two years old, mostly of the same varieties, looked remarkably well. Mrs. Oliver Ames, which originated here, is well thought of and gives more flowers than any other sort. Some Liberties are grown and Richmond will be given a trial for next season. A small division of grafted plants of Wellesley looked well.

The good fellowship displayed should lead to other joint gatherings and eventually we trust to a complete amalgamation. Boston needs one big wholesale market and there is no reason why the two markets should not come together again.

Various Notes.

J. Montgomery Sears, Boston's heaviest tax-payer and wealthiest citizen, died on June 2, aged 51 years. He and Mrs. Sears were generous patrons of horticulture and had a fine estate at Southboro, Mass., where Alex. Ogg has charge of the horticultural department. Exhibits at Horticultural hall have taken quite a number of prizes, gardenias, amaryllis and Lorraine begonias being especially well done.

James H. Morton was the recipient of a handsome cane from Boston lodge of Elks on Memorial day, Mrs. Morton receiving some bric-a-brac.

Dr. L. O. Howard, of Washington, has been in Boston the past week conferring with Prof. Kirkland and others in regard to natural parasites for the brown tail and gypsy moths, which are to be introduced from Europe. "Let us spray" is at present the cry of those in our near-by towns who are urging vigorous measures against the moth pests.

Very special attractions are being arranged for the June meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. The attendance is expected to be a record-breaking one. The executive committee has decided on a place for the July picnic, one which could hardly be improved upon.

At the recent exhibition T. C. Thurlow showed a fine collection of varieties of Peonia officinalis embracing the following varieties: Aretina Baxteri, splendens fulgens, officinalis rubra, La Nigresse, Sabini, Smoutha, Etoile de Pluton, officinalis alba and officinalis rosea.

A. H. Fewkes and Julius Heurlin will represent Boston at the coming peony show in Chicago.

Prof. C. S. Sargent entertained the directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on June 5. The Arnold Arboretum and Holm Lea were inspected and the visitors saw much to admire during the afternoon. In spite of the drought the trees, shrubs, lawns, etc., looked remarkably well. W. N. Craig.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Flewin's Gardens, Victoria, B. C., native plants; Peterson Nursery, Chicago, peonies and irises; A. Klokner, Wauwatosa, Wis., glass repair clips; J. G. Peppard, Kansas City, seeds; Wm. Bull & Sons, Chelsea, London, England, plants; E. H. Hunt, Chicago, florists' supplies.

Denver, Colo.—The Park Floral Co. will shortly erect an addition to its glass.

Muncie, Ind.—Simon Humfeld has for years heated his greenhouses by exhaust steam from the city's electric light plant at a cost of about $600 a year but the board of public works objects to the renewal of the contract on the ground that a considerable pressure is required to force the exhaust steam over to the greenhouses. Mr. Humfeld may have to install boilers of his own.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business continued good up to Saturday of last week, when the market weakened materially, and this week conditions have been as bad as ever in the history of this market.

The weather up to Sunday had been cool, but on that day the thermometer registered 86 degrees and the local peony harvest began. As one grower stated, he cut 'Old Red in the morning and Late Rose in the afternoon, the day serving to advance the crop as much as had the previous week. On Monday 90 degrees was registered and Tuesday was hotter, with the result that the peonies are arriving in an unprecedented flood. It is impossible to do anything with them except put them in cold storage, and only a few of the growers are sufficiently versed in the matter of cutting and bunching to make their stock possess the necessary keeping qualities for cold storage; it takes a lot of fast work in such great heat. If this weather continues for the balance of the week the peony crop will be out of the way, however, and the cold storage stock will resume the dominant position it held all last week, when sales and prices left little to be desired.

The heat has served to rush along the roses and the market is tremendously overburdened with stock, small, and soft, and pale. The select goods are still making a fair price, but only a fraction of the receipts come in this class. With the bulk of the goods it is a case of taking what the Greeks will give. The rose market is in a much worse way than the carnation market, although the latter is bad enough. There are very large receipts and keeping quality is none too good. Prices are low on the best stock and the accumulation has to be sacrificed.

In fact, it may be said that aside from the shipping trade there is no market and the bulk of the stuff is almost unsalable. But if the heat continues the crops will soon pass off and if a cold wave follows it will send the market to the other extreme. Weather and prices have been found to be "subject to change without notice."

Sweet peas are in large supply, but are selling fairly well at cheap prices. Bulbous stuff, except Easter lilies and callas, is out of the market. Daisies sell well in a limited degree. Spring wedding decorations are calling for green goods. The new Massachusetts ferns arrived this week and good stock in this line is again available.

The Express Service.

On Monday the express companies resumed the pick-up service as operated before the strike, and, although their hands are green, they are doing very well. The wholesalers' association teams will be retained until the end of this week to guard against any possible further difficulties attending the strike.

Various Notes.

John Brod has sold his greenhouse establishment at Niles Center to Albert Lies, a brother-in-law of Matt Mann, who has taken possession and is sending his cut to Zech & Mann. The place comprises about 60,000 feet of glass. It is the old Schiller establishment, but has been rebuilt within the past few years. Mr. Lies will expend something like $4,000 this summer in putting it in first-class shape and will devote it to roses and carnations for next season.

The Des Plaines Floral Co., which has operated the F. C. Pruse place at Des Plaines under a lease, has just consummated the purchase of the establishment. H. C. Blewitt, who has sold the product at the Growers' Market, will in the future devote himself to the growing department and the stock will be sold by Percy Jones.

The firm of Gollan & Wolf, at Downers Grove, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Wolf retiring.

Bassett & Washburn have just completed the planting of their new range. It contains 52,000 rose plants, the varieties being Richmond, Beauty, Maid, Bride and Liberty. Mr. Washburn says that the seventeen-year locust is appearing in myriads at Hinsdale.

The Fleischman Floral Co. has an oil painting of the steamship La Savoie in its show window, draped with asparagus and bearing a modest sign, "Flowers delivered to all outgoing steamers." An electric light is arranged to show the picture and sign at night. This is a means of gaining trade which any florist could adopt. Those who have no regular correspondent in New York should refer to the page of Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

E. C. Amling is handling a large quantity of sweet peas of exceptionally good quality.

There was hail at Joliet on Decoration day, but the carnation growers escaped with little loss. The retail establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co. lost considerable glass and Labo also suffered severely.

There is a new daughter at the home of J. P. Foley. This is number seven. P. J. Foley has six children and there is another brother out west who has done as much for his country.

D. W. Brant has been shipping all his stock from the greenhouses at Forest Glen ever since the express drivers' strike began, as indeed he does most of it at all seasons. He has now closed his stand at 60 Wabash avenue for the summer.

Bryant & Sons, at Princeton, Ill., sent Kennicott Bros. Co. a heavy cut of very fine peonies last week. They always have had good sorts and grown them well, but it is only in the last year or two that they have learned to put them up in first-class shape. The first of their cut came in at just the right time to catch the good prices which prevailed up to Saturday.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. believes in having things up-to-date. They now have a private telephone exchange with two trunk lines and connections to all departments of their Buckingham place establishment. Another recent acquisition is an adding machine for the benefit of the bookkeepers. It cost $375. As soon as the season's rush is over they will erect a new office building just west of the Buckingham place store, larger facilities being necessary in this department.

J. A. Budlong left June 1 for another of his periodical bicycle trips to visit relatives in Rhode Island and trade centers of interest in the east. He is likely to be gone most of the summer.

F. A. Baller, of Bloomington, has been sending Vaughan & Sperry some very nice peonies in the past ten days. He remembered the REVIEW office with a bunch of fine blooms.

Waldheim Cemetery will invest $25,000 in a new administration building, a feature of which will be a large conservatory.

John Muno expresses complete satisfaction with the outcome of the season, having substituted carnations for roses in a large part of his range last fall.

Frank Cummings, of Meridian, Miss., was among the week's visitors.

Peter Reinberg reports shipping trade good. They are strong on Liberty and Chatenay and also on red carnations.

It is reported that Lubliner & Trinz have been offered $10,000 for the lease they hold on the store at 44 Randolph street, covering six years. It is stated that they have declined the offer.

Coreopsis in quantity is arriving at the E. F. Winterson Co.'s.

Mrs. E. F. Winterson has been ill for some time and underwent a surgical operation last week. She is now convalescing rapidly.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports selling 500,000 ferns very quickly last week, stock which had been in cold storage since December.

Mons Olson, who has been with J. A. Budlong for several years, is now with Zech & Mann.

L. Coatsworth and wife returned on Saturday from a week spent at Mr. Coatsworth's home in Canada, where they were called by a death in the family.

Wietor Bros. already have a large part of their rose houses planted. They have practically ten acres in carnation plants this season.

J. A. Budlong has put in one of the largest ice-boxes in town at the greenhouses for cooling the stock. The box is 10x20 feet and eight feet high.

E. H. Hunt reports the sale of To-bak-ine Liquid to the amount of $120 to Bassett & Washburn, who use it for spraying on carnations for thrips, as recently recommended in the REVIEW.

Wm. Dittmann, of New Castle, Ind., has been in town for several days.

This is club-meeting night.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The advent of June has brought a decided increase in business in cut flowers and decorative plants. The close of the horse show last week was marked by considerable entertaining due to many visitors in the city. The weddings this week, the flower festival at Atlantic City on Wednesday and the commencements, notably that at Bryn Mawr on Thursday, together with considerable shipping to more distant points, have combined to make the present a very lively week. The demand is chiefly for choice roses, which are quite scarce, white peonies, lily of the valley and sweet peas. Carnations and pink peonies are abundant but not in demand. There are a few nice orchids, some gardenias and Easter lilies, all quite popular. The volume of business is very large, prices excellent on select stock, though low on ordinary grades.

The Milbrook-Lee Greenhouses.

J. Lehman Maull and J. Lardner Howell, trading as Maull & Howell, have some 50,000 feet of glass on the hillside near Whitford station, where the Trenton cut-off joins the main line of the Pennsylvania R. R. Through the courtesy of Mr. Maull, John Curwen and Phil were shown through this range of glass one afternoon recently. The older range, built some twelve years ago, consists of two series of houses rising one above the other in the rear of Mr. Maull's home. The new range, the highest of all, is on comparatively level made ground on the hill crest. This new range consists of two houses each 30x200 feet, built two years ago by J. L. Dillon, heated by steam with Lord & Burnham boilers. These houses each contain four beds five feet wide, and, except for one bed of asparagus, are entirely filled with carnations that now look, under the shaded glass, quite as well as most plants in mid-winter. Enchantress and Queen Louise are especially fine. The lower ranges, containing many carnations in benches and beds, some sweet peas, swainsona, sweet alyssum, a house of Jacob Becker's Ideal, or improved La France, and a large house of very fine Asparagus plumosus. In the field some 35,000 car-

Dear Sir: We wish to thank you for the Good Carnations you sent us for Decoration Day. If all the wholesale houses would send out as good stock there would be no kick from the retailers. Can you tell us what the scarlet was you sent us? If you have any stock of it to sell, we want some.

nations were starting nicely. John Stanley is the grower in charge. He may well feel proud of the really excellent condition of the entire stock. The major part of the cut is handled to advantage by Wm. J. Moore. Water is supplied by a ram, worked by a gasoline engine, from a stream below and stored in a huge tank.

Various Notes.

M. Rice & Co. have sent out a highly original removal notice, which will attract attention wherever received.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling exceptionally nice Kaiserins and valley. The shipping orders are very heavy this week.

Paul Berkowitz, of Bayersdorfer & Co., has a happy faculty of interesting his customers that wins him many friends.

Mrs. John B. Haines, of Cheltenham, has ordered roofing material for two houses 20x40 feet each from the Lord & Burnham Co. The walls now standing will be utilized.

President J. C. Vaughan has appointed B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., as a traveling delegate for the S. A. F.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons supplied 15,000 roses for Strawbridge & Clothier's June rose display. The flowers were given away to the firm's customers.

Hugh Graham was a judge at the Atlantic City flower festival on Wednesday.

Godfrey Aschmann is experiencing an increased demand for Araucaria excelsa. He has disposed of nearly his entire stock of 15,000 geraniums.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. has disposed of its large stock of Killarney rose in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. The demand for this Irish beauty for outdoor planting has been remarkable, especially when it is considered it is by no means a novelty.

Charles A. Knapp, of Mount Airy, has grown some excellent calceolarias.

J. Nichols, of Olney, is a good carnation grower, who keeps his place in nice condition.

Wm. Berger had ten wedding orders for one day this week and was obliged to decline several others.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons decorated a number of the rolling chairs in the Atlantic City parade on Wednesday.

William Joyce, a famous florist of this city, was run over and killed by an automobile at Broad and South streets last Saturday. The funeral took place on Thursday morning at St. Theresa's church, Broad and Christian streets. Mr. Joyce's sad death is a great shock to his friends. He was gardener for R. C. H. Brock, 1612 Walnut street, and was 78 years of age. His plants in the noted Baldwin collection have won many prizes in the earlier days of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are aure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100: $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Carnation Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has cleaned up well during the past week, the shipments being lighter and the retail demand increasing as the numberless June weddings materialized. This improved condition of things should last until the end of the month at any rate. The society columns of the papers are filled with announcements of an unlimited number of these delightful happenings, both in Brooklyn and New York. All the large retail establishments report an unusual booking this season.

There are enormous shipments of peonies and a large part of their value has been lost in consequence of the oversupply.

The quality of the rose stock now arriving is not up to the mark. There seems to be no end to the supply of lilies, and carnations are wonderfully abundant. The retail windows are, some of them, made very attractive daily by the orchid display. The wholesale market finds it possible to close at 5 p. m., and summer hours will soon prevail with all the cut flower merchants from Twenty-sixth to Thirtieth streets.

The street displays are naturally extensive now and the closing out process is in evidence in the low prices asked by these sidewalk merchants.

Various Notes.

Alfred Goltz, with J. K. Allen, lost his father suddenly last week by a paralytic stroke.

Alfred Dimmock, of Sander & Sons, St. Albans, England, sails for home on the Lucania June 17, and J. M. Keller and family leave on June 15 on the Kaiser Frederick der Grosse for a holiday in Europe.

Harry Bunyard returned to the city on Saturday from a prolonged and successful trip via the steamer Monmouth.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Daniel Wittpen, of the firm of McHutchison & Co., on account of the death of his father.

The New York Club's outing program is complete and will be distributed on ladies' night, June 12. About $200 in advertisements and a similar amount in prizes attest the general interest which has been taken. The attendance promises to be the largest of the club's summer festivals, and Treasurer Schenck has already disposed of a large number of tickets. The Glenwood Co., owner of the resort where the club will spend the day, has donated twelve bottles of its best wine for prizes in the baseball contest. President Traendly, as usual, has offered $25 in prizes for the lady bowlers, and B. Suzuki and the vice-president will make up the balance of the fifteen prizes for which the lady bowlers will compete. The rest of the donors are, up to date, John Birnie, J. K. Allen, L. B. Craw, W. J. Elliott, J. D. Esler, Joseph Fenrich, Ford Bros., E. W. Holt, L. W. Wheeler, Joseph Millang, F. R. Pierson Co., Philip Kessler, L. J. Kreshover, A. L. Miller, Lager & Hurrell, Theo. Lang, A. H. Langjahr, Patrick O'Mara, Alex. McConnell, J. B. Nugent, Jr., Julius Roehrs, Jr., Chas. Schenck, Moore, Hentz & Nash, Walter Sheridan, John Young, Chas. Weathered, W. H. Seibrecht, H. A. Bunyard, John Scott, W. C. Mansfield, A. T. Boddington, John Raynor, Schloss Bros., E. C. Horan, W. H. Donohoe, W. B. Du Rie, A. T. De La Mare and Louis Schmutz.

Patrick O'Mara is now president of the United Irish American Societies of Hudson county, N. J., a well deserved honor and the "right man in the right place."

The annual excursion of the employes of Geo. M. Stumpp will take place at Silver Lake park, Staten Island, on July 12.

P. A. Keene, for many years one of the proprietors of the Bloodgood Nurseries, Flushing, L. I., called upon us last week and announced his new business relations with the Morris Nurseries, of West Chester, Pa. Mr. Keene has opened an office in New York, at 1 Madison avenue, and is arranging for a force of salesmen to represent the new firm in the East.

An addition to the artistic retail florists' establishments of the city has been opened at 2 West Twenty-ninth street, near Fifth avenue, and William H. Donohoe, for a long time in charge of Thomas Young, Jr.'s, retail store on Twenty-eighth street, is the proprietor.

Next week, Wednesday and Thursday, an exhibition of roses and perennials will take place at the botanical gardens, Bronx park, in the Museum building.

Auction sales last week were numerous and very successful. John P. Cleary had charge of the Keller and Ditzenberger sales, both of which were well attended.

All those intending to exhibit at the next club meeting are requested to send their shipments early on Monday next to Secretary John Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street.

Charles Thorley and Thomas Young will take a European trip this summer.

Alex. J. Guttman has leased for a term of years the fine store at 43 West Twenty-eighth street and will take possession October 1. This is one of the

SPRAYING

If all growers could realize that by this method and the use of

they can absolutely destroy and prevent Thrips, don't you think they would always have some on hand?

To-Bak-Ine Liquid, a 45 Per Cent Solution of Pure Nicotine

WILL POSITIVELY DO THE WORK.

Mr. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, says: "In three applications of spraying we destroyed all the Thrips in a 300-foot Bride house."

Mr. Baur says: "Send for a can of To-Bak-Ine Liquid and apply it according to directions every evening for a week and then three times weekly until your plants are clean."—Carnation Notes in the Florists' Review, May 25, 1905.

"I feel I cannot recommend this nicotine extract (To-Bak-Ine Liquid) too strongly. It fills a want that was felt for years, for something that would keep down Thrips effectively and in fact all insect pests."—Carnation Notes in the Florists' Review, May 18, 1905.

Send for full directions of this method of spraying, cost and much valuable information for progressive growers.

largest and most convenient stores in the wholesale district.

Miss Mollie Le Moult, daughter of Adolph Le Moult, the veteran florist of the Bowery, and Joseph Fenrich, the wholesale florist, will be married at the home of the bride in Tremont, on Thursday, June 8, at noon, under a natural bower of roses in the spacious gardens of her father. The home decorations will be oak leaves and daisies. Quite a romance characterizes the union of these young people. They will make their honeymoon trip to Niagara and down the St. Lawrence to Montreal, when the rush of the peony season is over. The wedding day and the bride's birthday arrive at the same time. Congratulations are many.

Bowling.

The new alleys are the best in New York. The location is convenient and popular, but the interest in the club's showing at Washington grows slowly. Until further notice the club's members or those of them who wish to represent it at the S. A. F. convention, will meet at Thum's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street, every Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Last Friday's scores were excellent:

KOKOMO, IND.—W. W. Coles and wife will take a European trip this summer.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A very satisfactory amount of business has been done the past week in all the stores. Several large funerals and some wedding decorations have taken up the surplus stock and there is still a good, healthy demand for blooms in spite of the fact that outdoor flowers are coming in. Prices have fallen considerably the past week and there is very little good stock on the market. Many orders for wedding decorations are being booked, being distributed pretty well, and call for some good material.

Various Notes.

It is with feelings of profound sorrow that we must record the sudden death of one of our oldest florists, Edward Bunyar, of Rosedale. Mr. Bunyar was born in England, fifty-eight years ago and came here a young man, working at different places until eighteen years ago, when he purchased the property where he died. Mr. Bunyar left a widow and four sons, two of whom are in business, Edward, Jr., in Independence, Mo., and Robert, in Independence, Kan.

A large number of the growers are getting interested in the flower show and some are taking unusual pains to weed out poor stuff.

J. Smith, of Westport, reports very good business in plant trade this spring and contemplates building two more houses, which he intends to use for growing carnations.

Outdoor sweet peas are coming in and prices are taking a drop. The demand for old-fashioned flowers is becoming greater and it is only a question of time when the florists must look for other material than what is grown at the present time.

R. S. Brown & Son report a phenomenal business the past spring and contemplate remodeling their place this summer.

The Kansas City Floral Co. is finishing up a lease upon one of the most prominent corners here, Tenth and Grand avenue, where it intends to open the finest florists' establishment west of Chicago by September 1. This firm has met with much success since entering the business, under the supervision of C. A. Schaeffer.

Jacob Tobler reports everything of a salable nature sold this spring and intends to build this summer to meet the requirements of his increasing business.

A. Blankenfeld, out on Main street, has done some fine business this spring, as his place has a vacant look and it will take some time to make it look as full as it did early in the season.

Ed. Humfeld is cleaning up, having sold out almost entirely and was forced to buy a great deal in order to meet the demands of his customers.

DES MOINES, IA.

Death of David Smeaton.

Word reached this city, May 31, of the tragic death of David Smeaton, of 513 Thirty-eighth street, near Stavely, Alberta, Canada, where he had gone with his wife to spend the summer.

With Mrs. Smeaton he was driving near their farm, on May 20, when a severe thunder storm came up. Lightning struck in the road not a great distance from them and the horse lunged, throwing both the occupants of the buggy into the road. Mrs. Smeaton was not injured seriously, but Mr. Smeaton was fatally hurt. He died from the injuries the day following.

Mr. Smeaton was about 73 years of age and for many years has been a resident of Des Moines, owning the greenhouses on Ingersoll avenue and raising cut flowers for the retailers. He had accumulated some property, owning his home on Thirty-eighth street, just off of Grand avenue, and considerable farm lands.

CALDWELL THE WOODSMAN,
The man who gave you the Wild smilax.

SOMETHING NEW

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call your attention to the

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves, and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not. Will you try a case on these terms?

THE VERDICT OF THE TRADE

The case of Huckleberry was very satisfactory as a decorating green, and we wish to compliment you on the new discovery for decorating at this time of year.
FRED C. WEBER, St. Louis, Mo.

We are in receipt of your shipment of one case Huckleberry Branches and are pleased with it. Send by express 5 cases at once.

BALTIMORE, MD.

If we had suffered a soaking rain on Memorial day, business could not have been much worse. Large shipments of flowers came in on Monday morning, especially of carnations and peonies, but the demand was unusually light for that day, falling far behind recent years. Thousands of peonies and carnations went to the bad, and, as the manager of the Exchange said, we had not enough vases to put up the stuff in water. The same can be said of the city markets, where there is a large retail business in cut flowers and plants. Usually the larger part of the people want something in cheaper flowers for grave decorations and naturally go to the market for them. The report in general is that everything sold very slowly, even at low prices, and a great many flowers were taken back home. A. F.

CLAY CENTER, KAN.

On May 24, this vicinity was visited by one of the most severe hail storms of which there is record in this state. The hail was of prodigious size and did a great deal of damage, both S. D. Brant and C. Humfeld losing much glass. The latter had just 17,210 feet of glass area, of which only about 900 feet is left, and his stock was badly cut up. He is reglazing as rapidly as possible and has material and glass on the ground for a new range of 12,000 feet, which will give him badly needed facilities for another season.

SEDALIA, MO.—Chas. Pfeiffer reports that the local demand for all lines of stock is increasing very satisfactorily and gives promise for many better seasons than the one just closing, which was the best to date.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

VISITED CHICAGO:—R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.

TRUE to early indications, prices on French Romans are weaker.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is working a force of 200 women this week, weeding onion set fields.

THE California growers see no improvement of the onion seed crop situation. Latest reports are to the effect that former ones were too conservative. Conditions seemingly are getting worse.

THE prospect is for a slightly increased crop of Bermuda Harrisii bulbs for 1905, with quality better than for some years, due to an awakening on the part of the growers to the exigencies of the situation.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The onion set situation here is about as it was at this time last year. No increase in the acreage planted over last season and the prospect favorable for about as large a harvest as usual.

THE recent heavy rains in Wisconsin and Michigan are likely to have caused damage to the pea and bean crops. No definite information has as yet been received from the growing stations as to the amount of the damage. It is thought that the peas are far enough along to stand a severe flooding, but as regards beans considerable anxiety is felt.

SEED TRADE CONVENTION.

Charles N. Page, president of the American Seed Trade Association, which meets at Alexandria Bay June 20 to 22, sends out the following letter under date of Des Moines, June 3:

"Word has just reached me that special round trip tourists' rates have been made to Alexandria Bay, New York, from various parts of the country. Full particulars can be obtained by inquiring of the local ticket agents at all important points, and is contained in the summer tourists' sheets.

"Alexandria Bay is not on any railway, but is reached by steamer from Clayton, New York, or, if preferred, by a longer lake trip from Charlotte, New York, Toronto or Kingston, Ontario, via the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co.'s elegant steamers.

"Special excursion rates have also been made to conventions held at about the same time at Toronto and Watertown, New York, to which points rates may be found more favorable from some places.

"Please be sure and make your arrangements to be present and I assure you of a good time. Many consider the Thousand Islands the finest piece of scenery in all America, and some who have traveled all over Europe say that there is nothing there that compares with it.

"Matters of great importance to every seed dealer in America will be presented at the convention and I am sure that you will afterwards look back to the three days spent there as among the most pleasant and profitable in your experience."

FIRST early Harrisii will arrive at New York within a month. These are not in so great request as in some previous years, growers preferring to wait for better ripened bulbs.

R. H. SHUMWAY, Rockford, Ill., reports a good business done during the season. He thinks his plan of conducting a mail order seed business profitable enough to have his catalogue and methods patented.

Very little in the way of information has been given out by the vine seed and sweet corn growers so far. The weather has not been favorable in many sections for early planting and where early planting has been done a poor stand is reported.

CHICAGO. — Information is being sought by some of the western seedsmen as to how large a delegation is expected to pass through this city for the seedsmen's convention two weeks hence. Two weeks seems to be a long time for a seedsman to figure ahead, but it is hoped that by next week some definite information may be given.

UNDER date of June 2, Huntington & Page write: "Regarding future onion set crop we beg to advise that the onion sets around Indianapolis, of which we practically control all of them, including our own planting, are looking fine. Our fields are very clean and we have had a remarkable season and look for profitable returns. The acreage is considerably less than last year."

DENVER.

The Market.

Decoration day trade was exceptionally brisk this year; in fact, better than for several years past. Denver has never before observed it with such a unanimity of sentiment. Throughout the state also it was fittingly observed, making an exceptional demand for flowers from out-of-town customers. Sunday was the busy day for the shipping trade, which all the houses enjoyed, and with some of them it necessitated some hustling until late into the night.

Prices stiffened on some lines, although the increase was not as much as the demand seemed to warrant. Every dealer was practically sold out, the larger stores closing in the early morning of Decoration day.

Owing to the unfavorable weather before, there was not as large a supply of peonies, lilac, snowballs, etc., as usual and other flowers, while plentiful, were not equal to the demand. The principal shortage developed in carnations and it was difficult to supply the needs, the prices not being prohibitive. From 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen were the ruling rates. There was a good supply of Brides but not so many Maids. Liberties were fairly plentiful. While Beauties sold well, it was noticeable that the demand was for carnations, and roses did not move freely until the buyers found there were no carnations to be had. Sweet peas were also plentiful and sold well, especially the white. There was a large supply of odds and ends which were all cleaned up. Cape jasmine arrived in large quantities but was not in great demand.

Various Notes.

There are a considerable number of coming June weddings and these and the commencement exercises of the various schools and colleges will stir up some business for a week or two.

On May 27, one of the most severe hail storms that have visited this locality for several years, passed over the northwestern part of the city, damaging the greenhouses of Ben Boldt at Mud Lake very severely, there being over 2,500 panes of glass broken, and damaging stock that was ready for Decoration day, as well as 8,000 carnations and 3,000 peony plants outside. He estimates his loss at $2,000.

In the town of Lafayette the Cannon Floral & Seed Co. suffered a loss. Every window facing the west was broken and several hundred dollars' worth of cut flowers which were ready for Decoration day purposes were entirely destroyed.

One of the most brilliant affairs of the season was the McCourt ball at the Adams Hotel, June 1, the decorations being elaborate. Myriads of incandescent lights gleamed among palms, ferns, delicate pink honeysuckle vines and southern smilax. Clusters of bridal wreath, pink roses and peonies gave color to the scene. Yellow-coated song birds perched in branches of young trees vied with the orchestra in making sweet music for the dances. The work was done by A. H. Bush, of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, was calling on the trade the past week.

The fishing season opened June 1 and we noticed some of the craft who are experts took advantage of it, N. A. Benson, J. A. Valentine, G. H. Cooper and others. They have not yet reported the number caught or nearly caught. E. S. K.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Decoration day business was first-class this year. As was expected, stock was scarce and many orders could not be filled. All last week stock was scarce, several weddings and the high school commencements creating an active demand. Prices were well maintained.

Beauties were in fine shape and brought prices averaging a dollar per foot of stem. Golden Gate, Ivory and Kaiserin were also in good form, but Brides and Maids are now almost out of it.

The weather is hot at present and carnations are piling up in all the wholesale houses and a drop in price seems to be inevitable. Roses are not too plentiful and good ones are in demand. Beauties are holding up fine and the quality is good for this time of year. Sweet peas are in good demand and none too plentiful. Some beautiful irises are selling well. It is of the small variety and when worked up looks very much like orchids. Peonies are all the go and this market takes to them pretty well. The demand for lily of the valley, also lilies of all kinds is good and can scarcely be supplied. Candytuft, sweet alyssum, etc., sell well.

Various Notes.

G. Bruner's Sons report the usual good trade for their hardy roses.

Peter Weiland is sending some very fine peonies from New Castle and they sell well.

A. R. Johnston has started in the florists' business at the corner of Ward and Fairfield avenues, Bellevue, Ky.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held June 10.

J. B. O'Neal, of Chicago, was a caller.

Business is evidently good with Louis H. Kyrk for he has recently added the room adjoining his quarters and thereby largely increased his facilities.

C. J. Ohmer.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

H. W. Buckbee will at once proceed with the addition of a range of over 60,000 square feet of glass. The houses will be located on Buckbee street, close to the present plant. The style of construction will be ridge and furrow and the ground to be covered is 196x290 and the plan is to put up a thoroughly up-to-date range for cut flowers. Mr. Buckbee is led to take advantage of the present low price of glass and the quiet market for other material by the fact that more room is badly needed and would be an absolute necessity in a year or two if the present rate of increase in the business is to be kept up.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held June 2, President Hale in the chair. Final arrangements were made for the rose exhibition at our next meeting, June 16. After the business was through a discussion was brought up on "Bonora." The general opinion was that it is wonderfully quick acting, particularly on soft-growing plants and ferns. Mr. Kettel states that he had used it on young grass with gratifying results. Mr. Turner used it on a small scale on half-starved ferns. The improvement was plainly shown after the first application. Mr. Butterbach used it on antirrhinums and cauliflower under glass with excellent results, also on different ferns and small palms. After one application they were much improved.

In order to make our meetings more interesting, Mr. Turner suggested that at each meeting some exhibits be shown, such as herbaceous flowers, shrubs, fruits, etc., and to have some discussions about their nature and merits. A pair of fine cucumbers which scored 85 points was shown by Mr. Hale. The judges were Wm. Turner and H. Griffiths. B.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business for Memorial day was very quiet indeed until Saturday, when the shipping orders began to make their appearance, but not in such quantities as we have had in years past. I think it is safe to say that they averaged one-third less than we usually enjoyed at this time. Otherwise business was about up to the average and all day Sunday and Monday we were kept busy with the local trade. Flowers were abundant. Some of the growers tried to inflate the prices of sweet peas, but they only succeeded in tacking on 25 cents per dozen bunches, so that $1 per dozen bunches was the price the retailers had to pay. The public seemed to prefer this flower to anything else and vast quantities were handled. Roses and carnations held out well and there seemed to be enough to fill all orders. Bride gladiolus sold well, also calla lilies at 50 cents per dozen retail. Other varieties of hardy stock were well cleaned out and by Tuesday noon most of the retailers were entirely sold out.

School commencements are now in order and for the next week we will have plenty of demand for all kinds of good stock. Funeral work is rather slack, but there is some wedding decorating doing.

Various Notes.

F. Pelicano has returned from his southern trip, also John Vallance, of the Cox Seed Co.

W. J. Thomas has opened a store in Tonopah, Nevada, under the name of the Nevada Floral Parlor.

W. P. Hammon, of Oroville, Cal., for many years in the nursery business in this vicinity, but now interested in mining ventures, is in town.

D. Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery Works, San Jose, is in town. Mr. Raymond has recently returned from Syracuse, N. Y., where he went to pay especial study to the flower pot industry. He has promised to give this section of the country the benefit of his new ideas.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, intend to build three large rose houses for the coming season's business. They intend to dispose of their Melrose nurseries.

J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, addressed a meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society on Saturday evening last. Mr. Vaughan gave a very interesting talk on general trade topics before a large and enthusiastic gathering. The meeting was also addressed by Professor Smith.

It is with deep regret that we note the death of M. Lynch, of Menlo Park, who was buried at Holy Cross on Memorial day. Mr. Lynch's demise was quite sudden, although he had not been in his usual robust health for several months. Probably no grower was better known on the coast than Mr. Lynch. He had lived in the neighborhood of Menlo Park for over twenty years and at the time of his death was actively engaged in business. As a plantsman he had few equals and as a successful grower of cut flowers his reputation was established many years ago. His widow and family have the sympathy of the entire florist craft in their bereavement.

E. Gill, of Oakland and West Berkeley, left San Francisco on the steamer Alameda on Saturday last for an eight months' trip around the world. He is accompanied by his daughter Elizabeth, a recent graduate of Stanford University. G.

A LEMON DISEASE.

In addition to the many plant and orchard pests that trouble California fruit and plant growers, a new and dangerous plant disease has arisen and the services of Prof. R. E. Smith, assistant professor of plant pathology, have been enlisted in an attempt to check it. Prof. Smith announced this week that the government at Washington will co-operate with the department here in an attempt to wipe out the lemon brown rot, a disease which is threatening the destruction of the entire lemon growing industry in California.

This brown rot constitutes a problem for plant pathologists to study, its character differing radically from any parasitic growths known here. Its effects thus far have been to partially paralyze the lemon growing industry, nearly forty per cent of the last year's crop having been spoiled by it. The disease leaves a brown mold on the surface of the fruit, which eventually shrivels the lemon and leaves it absolutely unfit for use.

Three years ago the first sign of the brown rot appeared in the lemon orchards of Southern California. It spread and attacked nearly every orchard in that portion of the state. It is a pest as far as known that does not exist in other countries and so constitutes a new problem for our experts to work on. Hundreds of letters have been received from southern growers asking the assistance and praying that something will be discovered to afford relief in the near future. G.

PIPE JOINTS.

I am building some greenhouses and have some 4-inch cast-iron pipe I would like to use for hot water. Is oakum a good material with which to put them together, or is there anything better? I am using oakum and red lead. What kind of paper is best to use between the walls? J. J. C.

The usual method of putting cast-iron hot water pipe together is by means of oakum and red lead mixed with pure linseed oil. The oakum should be saturated with the lead and oil and the strands well twisted in order that they will pack together tightly. Ram the oakum in tightly and keep adding ring after ring until the joint is entirely filled. Another method of making the joints is by using clean iron filings and a small quantity of sal-ammoniac. A small amount of oakum is first tamped in, after which the joint is rammed full of the filings and sal-ammoniac. This is known as a rust joint and is difficult to remove or repair.

The best paper to use between the walls is a good grade of rosin-sized building paper. Tarred paper is more lasting but more expensive, and the use of tar in any form in connection with the greenhouse is objectionable.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E W Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14-17, 1905.

EVERY indication points to the banner meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at West Baden, Ind., next week.

WESTERN nurserymen are well pleased with the financial outlook in their section. It speaks for even better business than in the past.

IT is pretty hard to see that there is any change in the old, established methods of growing nursery stock, either in the matter of heading or other details.

A NEWLY discovered species of juniperus has been named Pinchoti, in honor of Gifford Pinchot, of the U. S. Bureau of Forestry. It is found in the thin soil of certain parts of Texas.

FROM east and west the report is that weather conditions to date have been favorable to give the season's plant a good start and that the prospect is for excellent stock for next season.

MANY growers are expected to leave the nurserymen's convention at West Baden next week Friday night and have Saturday at the exhibition of the American Peony Society at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago.

FROM all sections of the country comes the report that the call for ornamental stock was greater the past season than ever before. While the business in fruit trees is good it shows no such increase as is noted in the ornamental department. In the older sections of the country large specimens are wanted.

THE BABY RAMBLER.

In a recent circular letter Chas. J. Brown, of Brown Bros., Rochester, calls the Baby Rambler "the best rose ever introduced" and says of it:

"We have never handled anything that sold as this rose does, and furthermore we have watched it closely and are confident that it is bound to be in great demand for the next fifteen or twenty years. We are pretty familiar with the stocks both in this country and in Europe. Many representatives of foreign houses are traveling around and offering this rose and I am satisfied that they are booking a great many more orders than will ever be filled. In our experience last year, under a very definite agreement with the originators, we received only about one-half the number agreed upon, and two-thirds of the half so received were very inferior plants."

FORESTERS WANTED.

The Bureau of Forestry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has published a circular giving information regarding employment on the national forest reserves. This circular explains how appointments to the forest service on the reserves are made, states the salaries of its members, and indicates the knowledge and experience required of rangers and supervisors, and the duties each must perform. The future organization will include forest supervisors at $1,800 to $2,500 a year, deputy forest supervisors at $1,500 to $1,700, forest rangers at $1,200 to $1,400, deputy forest rangers at $1,000 to $1,100, and assistant forest rangers at $800 to $900. The law requires that every applicant for a position in the forest service pass a civil service examination.

Work upon the forest reserves offers good and increasing opportunity for men of the right sort. Requests for information about the times and places when and where examinations will be held should be addressed to the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

THE NURSERY LANDSCAPIST.

In the past few years it has become the practice for nearly all large nurseries to prepare planting plans for anyone in need of such and it has invariably been found that the landscape department is a valuable adjunct to the sales department. There are those who deplore the tendency of the nurseries to go into landscape gardening. By some it is professed that the artistic temperament, or at least an artistic training, is necessary in the landscape architect. On the other hand there are those who do not hold the belief that long hair and a flowing red necktie are necessary attributes of the landscape architect. They believe that if landscape architects knew less of art and had a more intimate knowledge of plants the work they do would be more uniformly successful. As a matter of fact those nurseries which are known to practice the most careful cultural and the most thorough business methods are to be relied upon to procure the best talent for their landscape departments, and in any event one is as safe in trusting to a nursery planting plan as he is in entrusting his work to those of the landscape architects who are without practical gardening experience.

WASHINGTON.

Business at present, with the exception of some few commencements, is practically at a standstill. Roses of all kinds are beginning to get small on account of the warm weather. Sweet peas, as well as other outdoor stock, are now coming in plentifully. Blackistone, Schaffer and Cooke have had quite a few June weddings to start the ball rolling.

The business of J. Louis Loose has been incorporated for $100,000, J. Louis Loose, president; Otto Bauer, treasurer and general manager. The style of the firm will be the Washington Florists' Co., Inc. The balance of the stockholders are all unknown to the trade.

F. H. Kramer signed a contract June 5 and purchased outright the whole stock of the new rose of Peter Bisset, of Twin Oaks. The new rose is pink in color, a cross between Mme. Abel Chatenay and Liberty, very fragrant and as free as the Maid and Bride and Mr. Kramer thinks it without question the finest rose to date. He will disseminate his new rose in the spring of 1906. The name of the rose will be Queen Beatrice, in honor of Miss Beatrice Smith, who has been in Mr. Kramer's service for the last three years.

Convention matters at present are at a standstill until after the coming club meeting, which takes place Tuesday, when almost all final arrangements will be made.

The lady bowlers are practicing and the results this week are as follows:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Mrs. Oliver	46	78	76
Miss Beatrice Smith	69	82	82
Miss Annie Kramer	47	68	49
Miss Hattie Hill	31	40	29

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The May meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society being the annual ladies' night, only necessary business was transacted. Three new members were elected and two names proposed. The occasion was graced by a large attendance of the fair sex. A good musical program was provided, also refreshments. All agreed that it was a very enjoyable evening. The exhibits consisted mostly of cut flowers from hardy shrubs and herbaceous plants.

The June exhibition of roses, strawberries, hardy flowers, etc., will be held in the Young Men's Lyceum on the afternoon and evening of June 13. Schedules for this as well as for the fall show may be had from the secretary, E. W. Neubrand.

MUNCIE, IND.—Edward L. Hime will be custodian and florist at McCulloch park.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have been having delightful weather but too cool for growing, almost frost Saturday night. With business above the average all week, the retailers were kept in a good humor. Roses were much benefited by the cooler weather and were much better in color and size. While the better grades were not so plentiful, there were more than plenty of the cheaper ones. Home peonies are coming in fine but will hardly last long, as the later ones seem to be coming in with the early reds.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Lauch place on Brownsville road, Carrick, Pa., was sold to a land company, to be laid out in lots. Mr. Lauch has purchased land near New Galilee, Pa., where he has already planted out carnations, asters and such other stock as he will need for summer blooming. He will begin taking down his houses at once to remove them to the new place, as he expects to get them up in time for fall planting.

Jos. E. Bonsall, of Salem, O., who closed his houses when winter set in and went south, is now back at the old stand and is already cutting flowers from some things which did not need any winter attention.

Wm. Cromack, of Irwin, Pa., is erecting two new houses, each 120 feet long. He has secured the contract for planting the Pittsburg Exposition grounds. This will make his third year.

Charlie Crall, of Monongahela, Pa., says they are already sold out of the largest stock of bedding plants they ever had and at good prices. A good carnation grower might find it to his advantage to communicate with Mr. Crall.

Blind Brothers also say this is a banner year for plantsmen. Most of the stock cleaned up at satisfactory prices. They are also cutting some fine Spanish iris.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is now getting immense quantities of fine peonies from Theo. F. Beckert, also fine sweet peas. They report business above the average for this season of the year.

Hoo-Hoo.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA.—Ira Kemble is convalescing after his illness with typhoid fever.

GENESEO, ILL.—On June 1 Will Austin, who has been in business here twenty-three years, sold out to the Hill Floral Co., consisting of Howard L., Leroy B. and Blanche E. Hill.

Over $78,000 has been paid by the FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION for glass broken by hail, for the past 17 years. For particulars address

John G. Esler, Sec'y., Saddle River, N. J.

WASHINGTON, N. J.

Alonzo J. Bryan, formerly of New Hampton, who has there successfully conducted a business, mostly in the line of plants, for the past five years, has purchased a tract of land at 282 E. Washington avenue, for $7,000. He has removed his large stock of plants and two greenhouses to the new location within the past few months. It is Mr. Bryan's intention to engage extensively in the florists' and trucking business, for both the wholesale and retail trades, having now several acres of vegetables under way. A greenhouse 20x100 will be commenced within a few days for carnations and other cut flowers, while other houses will be added for plants as needed. His property contains over 100 acres of land and is beautifully located in the Borough of Washington, of about 5,000 inhabitants and is within three minutes' walk of the railroad station and is along the main turnpike which leads to other large towns, where thousands of people pass every day and a trolley line is now being built. Mr. Bryan has named his farm "Bryan's Flower and Truck Garden" and will make it worthy of the name as fast as time will permit him to do so. Mr. Bryan is an active member of the Methodist church where he formerly lived and president of the Epworth League Society and treasurer of the Sunday school. He is only 24 years of age.

CONCORD, PA.

On the night of May 25, the greenhouse establishment of Pennock E. Sharpless was partially destroyed by fire. Seven houses 20x100 were burned, making a loss of about $7,000, partially covered by insurance. Four greenhouses were saved by good work of the men of the neighborhood. It is impossible to say just how the fire started, but the greenhouses were being cleaned out preparatory to replanting and during the day sulphur was burned as a means of destroying insects. It is likely that the burning sulphur set fire to the structures.

PRACTICAL VALUE OF RESEARCH.

In these days of abundant horticultural literature, every intelligent gardener profits by the knowledge of others, and recognizes his indebtedness to the specialists who dip beneath the surface, to some extent, and do much to improve the plants which constitute their special study. Outside this, however, there is another great body of specialists with which, as a rule, he has not the same sympathy, and whose literature, it must be admitted, is as often as not a sealed book, owing to its technical and purely scientific character. If we are privileged to go behind the scenes, as it were, of our botanical and experimental laboratories we see students and professors busy with microscopes on what seems to us most unpromising material, stored in glass bottles, etc., all around them; or, it may be, making recondite experiments with chemicals, electrical batteries, thermometers, and so on, the relation of which to practical gardening strikes us as extremely remote.

None the less, it is upon the knowledge thus gained that a vast deal of our practical knowledge is based. The microscopist may be busy studying the life history of some of our minute plant foes, those insidious fungoid ones which pervade and undermine their tissues, or, on the other hand, that of those beneficent bacilli which we are now beginning to learn, thanks entirely to such investigators, play a vital role in the soil as plant builders. The chemist may be studying the composition of the plants, and gaining thereby knowledge of what it is they extract from the soil as they grow, and, therefore, what should be supplied as they are removed therefrom as crops.

The intermediate state between this class of minute research and practical horticulture we see in our experimental farms, where the chemists' discoveries are utilized on a large scale, with the result that in lieu of old-fashioned, haphazard procedure, often on very wasteful lines, the market gardener, agriculturist, and even the amateur are enabled to supply the needs of their plants to the most beneficial and economical effect. Could we but trace the origins of the majority of the sources of our progress in these directions, we should find it to be in these laboratory operations, pursued day after day and year after year on systematic, scientific lines, following up the clues to the cause, and so eliminating mere guesswork, and putting practical work on a rational basis. The great primary cause will probably ever remain far beyond man's reach, but applied science has enabled us to extend our ordinary faculties of observation to such a wonderful extent that we are constantly discovering more and more of the secrets of the mystical world of vitality of which we ourselves form a part, and, by virtue of these discoveries, we are ever better enabled to hold our own in that struggle for existence common to all created beings. All this we owe entirely to systematic research of the class we have in view, and the subsequent intelligent application of its results to practical ends.—Gardeners' Magazine.

VARIATION IN ASPARAGUS.

"There has been a good deal of controversy concerning Asparagus plumosus nanus," says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. "In one of the earliest batches of seedling plants that I handled I found some variations. Generally the seedlings under good culture form strong crowns, and each succeeding growth will be stronger and attain to a greater length; but some plants form more tufted crowns, and may be divided. These if worked on (that is kept for divisions) and potted in a light peaty compost or any ordinary soil that is not too rich, will retain the dwarf habit; and practically maintain the true character of nanus, which is not applicable to most of the stock sold as such. I may add, that there is a great difference in regard to seeding. I have known the same plants to give a good crop of seed successively year after year, while others under similar conditions have failed as regularly. It is not always that when a plant flowers profusely that seed is produced. A slight irregularity in temperature, etc., may cause the whole of the flowers to drop off."

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at its rooms in Orange on June 2. The occasion was made a special ladies' night and to the usual floral display was added this pleasant social feature. The evening was varied by a musical and dramatic entertainment and light refreshments. Photographs of the exhibits receiving the highest marks for the last five months covered one side of the room.

The exhibits for the evening consisted of orchid plants in flower from the collections of Henry Graves, grown by Edwin Thomas, and William Barr, grown by Arthur Bodwell. A collection of cut orchid blooms came from Julius Roehrs. Two vases of Papaver orientalis were shown by Peter Duff. Gloxinias in variety and palms were shown by D. Kindsgrab. A vase of mixed aquilegias in light tints, and other hardy flowers came from William Read. Peonies were brought by A. Caparn, and papaver and iris by Max Schneider. Arthur Bodwell's Nicotiana Sanderæ were the first which have been shown in this vicinity and a white of the same variety, one out of forty plants raised, is the first so far mentioned. The judges were Joseph A. Manda, Arthur Caparn and James Goodyear. J. B. D.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. supplied 5,000 bedding plants to the new street railway park at Plainfield, Ill.

MT. CARMEL, ILL.—Geo. S. Clarke has sold the business known as the Mt. Carmel Floral Co. to M. L. Tilton, one of the wealthiest men of this place, who proposes to at once enlarge the range by the addition of three good-sized houses, which will make it one of the largest greenhouse plants in the southern part of the state. W. A. Hoffstodt is in charge.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Memorial day trade was a "corker," to use the shortest expression. It was away ahead of any holiday in the past year and excelled last year's business for the same day. Everything was sold out clean and prices were satisfactory all around. The call for carnations was unprecedented and if demand governed the prices, these went the limit. Roses, cape jasmine, valley and lilies were plentiful enough to meet all requirements.

Owing to unfavorable weather during the early part of the month, the outlook for unloading all the bedding stock was poor, as there is a lot of it grown in this market, but the call took a brace during the latter part of the month and nearly everybody cleaned out. Geraniums sold well and the call for hardy shrubs has increased considerably.

Various Notes.

The Exposition building, where the convention of the S. A. F. was held in 1903, was totally destroyed by fire last Sunday evening.

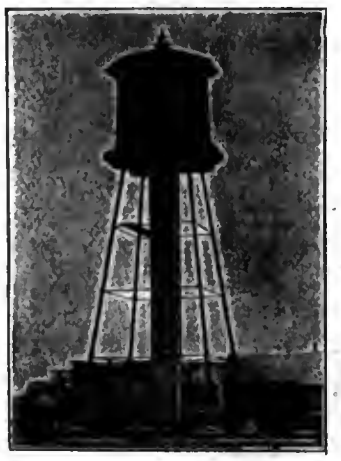
The Florists' Club gave an entertainment to members and ladies Tuesday evening. C. B. Whitnall gave a stereopticon lecture on California. Refreshments and a dance followed. A most enjoyable evening was spent. INCOG.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Livingston Seed Co. reports that the business in the plant and cut flower department surpassed all previous records for Decoration day.

TOLEDO, O.—A wagon in which Bert Ostertag was making a delivery May 29, was struck by a street car. Mr. Ostertag was thrown to the pavement and his hands and face severely cut.

CRESTON, IA.—Eric Joneson had the order for bedding at McKinley park but cannot make the beds stay planted. He has complained to the police that the stock is stolen as fast as set out.

MATTOON, ILL.—The peonies have done exceptionally well in this vicinity this season, the quality of the blooms marketed having never been better. J. W. Schrader shipped a fine lot to Chicago.



CARTHAGE, MO.—On May 31, heavy hail played havoc with the glass at the greenhouses of Perry Finn and B. W. Speece. Mr. Finn's loss will not be far from $1,000 but it would have been greater had he glazed the new houses being built to replace the ones burned last winter. The glass for the purpose was on the ground in the boxes.

VIOLET GROWING.

BY B. T. GALLOWAY.

How to Start the Business.

The question of the location of a violet establishment is governed by so many local conditions that it is difficult to offer any specific suggestions in regard to this matter. Other things being equal, it is always desirable, of course, to be within easy reach of the local market. Telephone and trolley connections are highly important, for the reason that it is frequently necessary during the busy season to make extra pickings and extra shipments, which can only be done where all modern conveniences are available. Anywhere within fifteen to twenty miles of a town, there may be found good locations for such work. Many of the largest violet establishments are located right in the towns, and as a matter of fact four-fifths of all the violets sold in this country today are probably grown on what may be called city lots.

Land Required.

One-half to three-quarters of an acre will suffice for an establishment, capable of growing anywhere from 15,000 to 20,000 plants. This is about all one man can handle with such help as would be required from time to time, especially in the picking season. In fact, a quarter of an acre of ground properly handled will afford a good business. In such cases, however, the soil used will necessarily have to be purchased. Where sufficient ground can be obtained without too much expense to afford means of handling one's own soil, it is always an advantage. If the violet is to be grown in connection with other crops it is never desirable to mix the plants in the house with others. Difficulties will be encountered in the matter of fumigation and temperatures which will prevent the production of the best stock.

The Use of Frames.

The violet may be grown in either houses or frames. Frames are now practically abandoned in all sections except the southern portions of the country, where the winters are mild. Even there it undoubtedly would be much better to grow the violets in houses, as they are much more easily controlled and the plants are at all times easily accessible. When violets are grown in frames it often happens during the winter that several days must elapse before the frames can be opened. This, of course, is a serious drawback where one has business interests in the city or town which must receive attention. It may happen at just such periods that extra demands will come for flowers, and if these cannot be met the trade will be lost or seriously injured.

Aside from these facts, which are vital, are those concerned with the comfort of the grower himself, who must necessarily be exposed to all sorts of weather if the crop is grown in frames. Suitable houses are now so cheaply constructed and easily handled that only under very special circumstances should frames be used.

Number of Plants for Start.

For the florist who already has a general business and who has a fair general trade with plants and flowers, the question of a start in violet culture must be considered from a number of standpoints. If the desire is simply to use the violet as an additional crop, probably 2,000 plants would be a fair number to begin with. Any number less than this would not give sufficient flowers to enable the grower to make the best trade arrangements, either if he handles them himself or sells them to some one else. In other words, like all other crops it is important to be able to have a constant supply. If the supply is spasmodic, good prices can not be secured, as the grower must necessarily take what the market offers. If the grower can develop a trade that will take about all that he can grow from 2,000 plants, he will find that such trade is more or less constant and he will find, furthermore, that, being always able to supply good stock at the proper time, he can get better prices.

For one who is desirous of starting in the business without any other crops, 5,000 plants would be better to begin with. From 5,000 to 6,000 plants will occupy pretty fully the time of one man, and properly handled should yield fair returns.

The location decided upon, a decision made as to the kind of business one intends to develop, and the number of plants one intends to grow, the first essential, of course, is the securing of stock.

How to Secure Stock.

It is highly important that the grower begin with good stock. Every year from February to the middle of summer the advertisers in the REVIEW offer violet stock for sale. Rooted runners are offered all the way from $5 to $10 per thousand. Our preference has always been for good, strong, sand-rooted runners, which should be ready to take from the bench by the middle of March. In many cases the growers wait until after the main Easter picking is over and then advertise stock for sale. This stock is for the most part divided crowns, which are not as good as sand-rooted runners put in earlier. It is better to pay $10 per thousand for good sand-rooted runners than $5 for indifferent divided crowns.

The stock secured, it may be either potted off into 2-inch pots and placed in cold frames, where plenty of air and water can be given, or in flats. Our preference has always been for flats, for the reason that the plants do not seem to dry out so readily, and make a better root growth. We use flats fifteen inches wide, two feet long and two and one-half inches deep, and put about seventy-five to 100 plants to the flat. Plants will stand in these flats until planting time, the middle or last of April. The young stock will have to be watched carefully, and in addition to keeping them well watered, care should be exercised in the matter of syringing for the purpose of keeping off red spider. A thorough syringing once a day will prevent this pest, taking care to do this work always early in the morning, so that the plants will dry off before night.

ECHEVERIAS.

I intend growing some echeverias for next spring and would like to know the best way to get a start. Can they be propagated and if so would it be best to get plants now and propagate in fall? Which are the best kinds to grow?

W. A. S.

With the exception of the variety E. secunda glauca the echeverias are not so generally grown as they were ten years ago, but for the florist the above kind is indispensable for carpet bedding. The taller growing sorts are increased by cuttings. Metallica makes a fine plant for the conservatory or the center of a carpet bed and retusa is a pretty flowering plant for early winter. They should be lifted before severe frost. After flowering the tops should be cut off and the old plants kept in a warm, dry place, when small growths will start from the stems. These, when large enough, can be removed and put into flats of dry sand and when they have made a few roots potted into 2-inch or 2½-inch pots.

The low growing, stemless species, such as secunda glauca, Californica, Peacockii, rosea and others, if planted out make a number of shoots, little miniature plants, often called hen and chickens, and in lifting in the fall these are removed and planted in shallow flats of sandy soil and placed in some cool, dry house. Very little if any water is needed during winter and avoid any drip on the plants.

In lifting them in October it is well to sort them into different sizes, placing the old plants in one flat and the next size in another flat and so on. This is economy of space. We noticed this spring that our park department wintered many thousands of secunda glauca in deep cold frames, protected with mats. They received no water at all during winter and came through in fine shape.

To get up a stock of these bedding echeverias buy what strong plants you can and plant out at once. You will get a lot of shoots in the fall and, if desirous of getting up a large stock, you can propagate by the leaves. Lift the plants in October and box in dry, sandy soil. A month or two later carefully twist the leaves from the stems, a few from each. There is a latent bud at the axle of the leaf and if that is not removed with the leaf you will get no plant. Put two inches of sand in a 4-inch pot and place the leaves around the edge of the pot, each with the base only deep enough to keep it upright. Give no water until the roots appear. When the little plants are formed and large enough to handle, place them in flats of sandy soil and be careful not to over-water. These little plants can be kept warmer during winter than the larger and older plants, because you want them to increase in size, while with the older bedding size you only want to keep them dormant.

IMPORTANCE OF VENTILATION.

Now that firing has practically to be abandoned and we are liable to have many sudden fluctuations of temperatures, accompanied by cold rains, great care should be taken that mildew does not get a foothold among the young stock, as the effect of a dose of this pest on newly planted stock is very debilitating and difficult to get rid of without causing injury to the plants.

As a preventive there is nothing to equal a plentiful supply of fresh air judiciously administered, and if the art of ventilation is properly understood and carefully attended to, there will be less need of sulphur or any of the other mixtures recommended for this purpose.

To derive the full benefit from ventilation it must be carefully studied, taking all the attending conditions into consideration and avoiding at all times a sudden raising or lowering of temperature, both of which are very injurious at this season, as the foliage is of such rapid growth and development that it must of necessity be very soft and susceptible to injury.

Above all, pay particular attention to night ventilation, as many crops which are otherwise well handled are simply ruined by carelessness or ignorance in this respect.

During the summer there should always be from four to six inches of ventilation during the night (unless when wind or rain compels shutting down) even if it requires some firing to keep up the temperature, and it will pay to have a man in charge who thoroughly understands this and has energy enough to apply it. During the day ventilation is not so liable to be neglected, but even then care and judgment are required to carry it out judiciously.

During the early hours, when cutting is being attended to, the temperature is liable to take a run up. This should be guarded against, as any abnormal heat during the early part of the day, when the plants have just emerged from their rest, has the effect of softening growth, bud and foliage, and if this is continued morning after morning, as I have frequently observed it, the most careful treatment during the rest of the day will not overcome the injury done and this sort of treatment will be certain to bring its troubles when cold weather commences and firing has again to be resorted to.

In order to guard against accidents it is advisable, however, to use the sulphur blower at least once a week and have the sulphur paint put on the pipes on every occasion when there is need of a fire. Then by shutting down for half an hour or so, even though the temperature runs up to 100 degrees, the liberated fumes will kill any germs that may have got a start.

By careful and persistent use of these methods the danger from mildew will be in a great measure restricted, and, as all growers know what a troublesome pest it is, especially during the summer months, every sort of precaution should be adopted to suppress it.

ROSE RUST.

Enclosed please find foliage which was cut from an outdoor rose bush. There is a scale or bug on it and we would like to know what this scale or bug is, and a remedy for it.

R. L.

After a careful examination I fail to detect any scale or bug on the specimen sent, but find that it is thickly infested with rose rust (Phragenedium subcorticum) in the aecidia form. This fungus very rarely attacks indoor roses, but in some districts is very prevalent on hardy hybrids. It also infests wild roses and these are often the cause of infection.

This form of the fungus usually appears late in spring or early summer and is distinguished by forming orange yellow powdery spots on the young twigs, leaves and leaf stalks. These spots become darker in color and larger as the summer advances and at this stage the mycelium, by feeding on the inner tissues of the plant, causes malformation of the shoots and leaves.

The best remedy is to cut off all affected leaves and twigs and burn them. In early spring, and before the buds expand, the plants should be thoroughly washed with a solution of copper in water. For immediate use try Bordeaux mixture and syringe thoroughly.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A WORD FOR DOROTHY PERKINS

Dorothy Perkins, the light pink Rambler, the craft generally seems to have been rather slow about taking up as a forcing rose. I have used it as an Easter pot plant five seasons with uniformly satisfactory results. I have always found it a very good seller and much more satisfactory in every way than the Crimson Rambler, as much smaller plants may be had to bloom well in small pots, which makes it much more useful in many ways.

Always having had a high opinion of it as a cut flower for decorative purposes, last fall I benched a number of plants in an old pit or lean-to, where they have been grown with very little artificial heat. That bench has been simply glorious. It furnished a tremendous lot of splendid flowers and we have cut from this bench in quantity for thirty days, commencing May 5, and we have a few hundred clusters still left.

The value of this rose for decorative purposes lies first in its exquisite color, a clear shell pink, which is good at all times and in all lights. A secondary consideration is its gracefulness and lightness, which makes it very easy to arrange and put up in almost any place. Third, you never need be afraid of its shedding its flowers, which the Crimson Rambler does.

We have used it for most varied purposes. The most beautiful bridesmaids' bouquets I ever saw, the most exquisite wreaths for funeral purposes, or the most elaborate table decorations were made of it. It can be used in garland fashion for windows, etc., always with the most satisfactory results.

A Vase of Dorothy Perkins Rose Arranged by August S. Swanson, St. Paul.

I would like to add that its extreme hardiness makes it a splendid rose for outdoors in this latitude, where very few roses will survive the winter. I have given it the most severe test, having left it in pots on top of the ground and it came out sound to the very tips. It is a rose always clean, no mildew or spider, the foliage standing out green and glossy until very late in the fall.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

The business of delivering flowers on board outgoing steamers on orders from friends of people en route to Europe has assumed large proportions, but it is capable of still further increase. Here are the principal sailings from New York for the rest of June:

Date.	Steamer.	Destination.
June 17	St. Louis	Southampton.
June 17	Lucania	Liverpool.
June 17	Vaderland	Antwerp.
June 21	Baltic	Liverpool.
June 21	Rotterdam	Rotterdam.
June 21	Helig Olav	Copenhagen.
June 22	La Bretagne	Havre.
June 22	Deutschland	Hamburg.
June 24	Etruria	Liverpool.
June 24	Patricia	Hamburg.
June 24	Philadelphia	Southampton.
June 24	Kroonland	Antwerp.
June 27	Kronprinz Wilhelm	Bremen.
June 28	Teutonic	Liverpool.
June 28	Potsdam	Rotterdam.
June 29	La Lorraine	Havre.
June 29	Prinzess Alice	Bremen.
June 29	Hamburg	Hamburg.
June 30	Celtic	Liverpool.

THE COAL TRADE.

The coal trade has improved slightly. The Black Diamond says of the market: "For the first time in a number of months there is a slightly better feeling in the western soft coal trade. Demand is more active and according to the reports of operating and shipping interests there is a slightly larger tonnage moving. For fear that this slight improvement may be exaggerated and be given more prominence than it deserves it may be well to add that prices have shown no appreciable advance, but that the altered tone of market conditions is largely confined to a heavier movement and a better condition as to inquiries."

THE FRENCH EXHIBITION.

In the closing week of May the Societe Nationale d'Horticulture de France held an international exhibition at Paris, accounts of which are just coming to hand. It is quite evident that a new mark was set for European flower shows, both for extent and quality of exhibits. So far as exhibits went, however, the affair was more international in name than in fact, for there were few things shown from outside of France. But the French growers were out in force and made a splendid show, one English observer writing home that the display by the great firm of Vilmorin-Audrieux & Co. was a complete horticultural exhibition in itself. A large number of gold and other medals were awarded to the large number of exhibitors.

But what most impressed the American visitors was the arrangement of the exhibits and the general effect of the whole ensemble. In this respect the show is said to have been superior to the best seen on this side of the Atlantic. The building was decorated to fine effect and the plants were arranged on slopes, mounds, and undulations of various degrees, rather than on dead levels or monotonous tables. Every group of plants, whether in flower or not, was disposed in a position where it could be seen to the best advantage; thus most of them were below the eye-level, many being on the surface of the ground as a flower bed. Moreover, the pots were hidden from view wherever possible, not by the crowding of plants together for the purpose, but by the plunging. The whole indicated that the managers had had advance information of the exact extent and character of every exhibit, something it has been found impossible to get in the case of our American shows.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

Pink and white seem to be the prevailing colors this season. At a fashionable dinner party pink pelargoniums were the feature of the dinner table decorations. Pink roses for ball room decorations are quite the thing. In bedding out this year I find pink and white take the lead, and white zonal pelargoniums are more in demand.

The highly colored varieties of Acer palmatum or polymorphum are now among the most popular subjects we have, and are used extensively for various decorative purposes, and the demand has been further increased since Japanese gardens have been made a feature. It seems likely that this form of gardening is destined to take the place of the subtropical gardens which were so highly esteemed a few years ago. I find many in the trade are alive to the fact that the acers will be wanted in the future.

All summer bedding plants are going out freely and there is also a good demand for the better flowering plants in pots. There is certainly a better all around business being done this season. Supplies, however, are quite equal to all demands. Verbena Miss Willmott is now coming from a good many growers. It is surprising how well this sells, for though one of the prettiest pink flowers we have, it does not last well. Lilium Harrisii, though good, have been going out at low prices.

I find the American galax leaves are still procurable, and as most English hardy foliage is yet rather soft, these leaves are found very serviceable.

Taking the appearance of the market all around, growers should be doing fairly well this season, but there must still be a considerable difference in things now and what they were some years ago.

I find that for ball decorations, etc., Crimson Ramblers, Dorothy Perkins, and others of the same type are used extensively for hall and staircase decorations, also for forming archways. The long Ramblers can also be used effectively for hanging down from landings or high windows, and these naturally grown long trails of bloom are more effective than made-up long trails, and also last so much better. The trained bushes of these roses are also most effective for corners or any position where larger plants can be used.

Floral offerings were an important feature among the tributes sent to Marlborough House, on May 26, for the Princess of Wales' birthday. From America came a case of roses, American Beauty, which were packed in ice, and after crossing the Atlantic came out fresh.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Sweet Alyssum.

Put in a few hundred cuttings of sweet alyssum now and they make the right kind of plants to place along the edge of a carnation bench in September. It is a most useful little flower and I never noticed that a few plants along the edge of a bench or bed did the slightest harm to the main crop, only don't overdo it. A plant every three feet is enough. They root readily now if kept watered and shaded.

Begonias.

Besides the wonderful Gloire de Lorraine there are others of this numerous genus worth growing as winter plants. Among the best are B. incarnata, and particularly its wonderful improvement, B. incarnata Sandersi. The plants we saw of this splendid variety last winter were a mass of bloom from Christmas until our late Easter. This begonia was not named for the well known Mr. Sanders, of England and Belgium, but originated in New England with another Mr. Sanders, a private gardener of that advanced horticultural section, and as it reached this city under the name of Sandersi, it is doubtless known in other parts under that name. It is a beauty, whatever name it bears, although it should, like other shrubby begonias, be propagated in early spring. It can yet be rooted in the sand if kept only moderately moist and in not too dense a shade. Too heavy a shade is the curse of all classes of begonias, except, perhaps, the Rex type. All the shrubby begonias root well now and this incarnata type makes fine cuttings just now.

Gloxinias.

These beautiful summer flowering plants deserve careful treatment. There are few plants so satisfactory for a living room as the gloxinia. The dry atmosphere seems to suit them. A heavily shaded greenhouse and the careless use of the hose will soon bring on the rust. They need only light shade from the bright sun. The best we ever grew we put into a cold frame about this time, raised the sash back and front a few inches and shaded only when the sun was powerful and watered carefully, never wetting their foliage on a dull day, but they can be managed all right on a greenhouse bench with moderate shade and carefully watered. This is a plant that cannot be splashed over with the hose, as you do a bench of cannas.

Lily of the Valley.

It is a nice thing to have some lily of the valley on your place throughout the summer and you can have shipped 1,000 pips or so weekly or semi-weekly from some cold storage specialist and then flower them and save considerable, for I consider the expense of flowering them during summer next to nothing. Put the roots in boxes in five inches of sand, or in five or six inches of sand on a bench. Let the glass over them be shaded and the house kept cool and, what is particular, do not let a draught like that from an open door be playing on them or they will wilt. It should be unnecessary to say that you should not wet the opening bells but give plenty of water at the roots.

Pelargoniums.

Most of the show and fancy pelargoniums will soon be out of flower and now is the time they make a vigorous growth, making the cuttings you want for propagating in August and September. Some growers plant the old plants outdoors, and you will get a free growth and lots of cuttings by so doing, but I like the more mature cuttings that you get from plants kept in pots under glass, and the old plants, if you wish to grow them another year, are easier to manage. Keep them growing now in a light house, with plenty of water and when their growth is made give less water until you cut them down for propagating.

Lilium Speciosum.

The time will soon be here when you expect cold storage bulbs. The longiflorum lilies will be gone and then we are very glad of these beautiful and sweet lancifolium lilies, album and roseum. They are most valued in August and September. We should endeavor now to keep them cool and shady and never let them suffer for want of water. Fine beds of these are seen growing in the open ground, but the flowers are not of the same purity as those grown under glass. Shade, abundant ventilation and careful watering are the present conditions. We say careful, because lilies when actively growing like an abundance of water, but few plants are more quickly ruined than those lilies with water standing round their roots. Water should pass quickly away. A well drained bed is the first essential for their cultivation outdoors.

Pruning.

In the spring I attempted to point out some shrubs that should be pruned while dormant and others that, if pruned at all, it is better to cut back after flowering. The early shrubs that flowered on last year's growth are mostly out of bloom and can now be shortened back. The African tamarix is one and needs a far severer pruning than most any of our flowering shrubs. Its long, slender shoots that were covered with little pink flowers should now be cut down to within a foot of the ground. I hope it has been done before this. The lilac and the viburnum and the early spiræas, also Pyrus Japonica, are all the better if their faded flowers are cut away. They will make all the stronger growths to bear blossoms for another year. I am aware this is rather late advice for some things, and for some latitudes for all, but better done now than make the mistake of pruning them next winter, when you prune hydrangeas, althaeas, etc.

Painting.

Some months ago a gentleman in Canada wrote an article on butted glass, and in his opinion all were fools who did not adopt that method. Then a week or so later some one from our side of the Niagara condemned butted glass so sweepingly that he went quite as far the other way and made evident that if he ever tried the butted method, he knew nothing of how it should be done. Both, in my opinion, went too far. The majority of American growers still adhere to the old method of lapping their glass, but there are dozens of establishments in Canada, and some very large ones, that would not dream of doing anything but butting their glass, and this after twenty years' experience with it. And they grow as fine roses as can be found anywhere, so there you are.

There is one advantage in the butted system: Every two or three years you can, without sacrifice of glass and without a great expense of labor, remove the glass and give your house a thorough painting. Whether you do this or not, a painting every few years is of great benefit and successful growers know this. Not that cypress bars will rot if ever so dirty, for our experience with cypress put up sixteen years ago is that there is no rot about it. Light is what we are after and a scrubbing of the woodwork and then a good coat of white paint makes a new house. The short period we have between our bedding plants and chrysanthemums, or between the throwing out of carnations or roses and replanting, gives us no rest at this time of the year and, where painting is needed, it should be done without delay. A newly painted house will be a joy to you every time you enter it, and death on the bugs. WILLIAM SCOTT.

WILL some one give the reason why the growing of head lettuce under glass has never been successful in the Chicago district?

TOMATOES UNDER GLASS.

BY GEORGE E. STONE, Amherst, Mass.

Temperature and Moisture.

Tomatoes require about the same temperature as cucumbers, namely, 60 to 65 degrees at night and 80 degrees or more during the day. During cloudy weather lower temperatures should be maintained than during bright days. Too much moisture should not be maintained in the house, as this encourages mildew. In fact, the most effective remedy for mildew is to hold the moisture down. The soil should be well supplied with water. There is not the same danger from overwatering tomatoes as there is in cucumbers. The latter crop often have their roots rotted off by excessive watering during cloudy weather.

Pollination.

During the winter and spring months it is necessary to pollinate the plants. This is done either by directly pollinating them with a camels-hair brush, a wooden ladle or spoon, or by shaking or jarring the plants. The latter method succeeds in pollinating about 50 or 60 per cent of the blossoms. By the use of the ladle or camels-hair brush, pollinating ought to be done quite successfully if practiced every day or two. In case jarring is practiced, it should be done when the air in the house is dry, since pollination is not so certain when the air is full of moisture. Even with the somewhat tedious process of pollination by hand, one-sided fruit is likely to develop occasionally from imperfect fertilization.

Chemical Fertilizers.

Tomatoes respond to chemical fertilizers more readily than some other greenhouse crops. A considerable number of experiments have been recorded by our experiment stations relating to the effects of fertilizers on tomatoes, both with greenhouse and outdoor crops. When the soil contains a certain amount of phosphoric acid and potash, such as is likely to occur in well prepared loam, one early application of nitrate of soda should prove sufficient and be all that is desirable. Nitrogen appears to be the ruling element in tomato fertilizers. The Connecticut station produces a good crop in coal ashes with 6.40 pounds nitrate of soda, one pound of bone black, 2.40 pounds muriate of potash per 100 square feet of bench surface. This formula might be applied to advantage in growing tomato plants, but in good loam the two latter constituents could be omitted.

Time to Manure Crop.

From a considerable amount of data available it would appear that it requires about 150 days from the time of seeding to mature fruit of tomato plants. About one half this time, or seventy-five days, is required to develop the plants to sufficient size for transplanting.

Yield of Tomatoes.

The average yield in our northern climate should be from eight to twelve pounds, or more, fruit per plant. A certain number of these will have to be discarded on account of inferior size and rot. In order to make a profit from a winter or spring crop of tomatoes the fruit ought not to be sold for less than 20 to 30 cents per pound; 40 to 60 cents per pound are prices frequently obtained, however.

Considering the length of time required to mature tomatoes, their liability to disease and the price usually obtained for the product, we consider cucumbers superior to tomatoes, and lettuce better than either, from the point of view of financial returns. Much, however, depends upon the market and prices obtained for these crops. At least three crops of lettuce can be grown to one of either tomatoes or cucumbers. Moreover, a lettuce crop practically covers every square foot of ground surface of a house. Three crops of lettuce at 50 cents per dozen would give a yield of 27 cents a square foot of ground surface. To utilize a house to the best advantage for these three crops the following estimate may be taken. These estimates are based on a house eighteen feet wide, and the returns per linear foot would be as follows:

Tomatoes at 25 cents a lb., 6 lbs per plant	$4.50
Cucumbers, 5 doz. per plant, $1.25 per doz.	6.25
Lettuce at 50 cents a dozen heads	8.91

It should be added, however, that these figures should not be taken too seriously, as many conditions enter here to modify these estimates, but on the whole the majority of experienced men would consider lettuce and cucumbers as giving better financial returns than tomatoes. It should be noted, however, in connection with this that it does not require so much coal to heat a lettuce house as it does a cucumber or tomato house.

Diseases of Tomatoes.

Among the diseases affecting the tomato are the following:

Blossom end rot.—Three species of fungi and at least one species of bacteria are associated with the blossom end rot, but the most common greenhouse rot is caused, according to our observations, by bacteria. This comes on the green fruit when five-eighths or three-fourths of an inch in diameter. It probably affects the fruit at the base of the style, at which place there is likely to be seen more or less cracking of the cuticle, thus probably furnishing a suitable point for infection. Some observers have intimated that lack of water in the soil is responsible for blossom end rot and others have been led to believe that manuring has something to do with it. No satisfactory remedy can be offered at present for this trouble.

Mildew (Cladosporium).—This occurs on the under side of leaves as a mildew-like growth causing more or less of a yellow appearance to the upper surface. It can be completely controlled by keeping the moisture in the house at a low limit.

Timber rot.—This occurs occasionally on the stem of the tomato above the ground, but is not a serious trouble and should it become so, it can be controlled by changing the soil or sterilizing.

Eel worms.—These occur frequently on tomato roots. They can be eliminated by changing the soil or by freezing or sterilizing.

Leaf blight (Cylindrosporium).—This produces a spotting of the lower leaves similar to that occurring on the lower leaves of the chrysanthemum. As we have met the disease, it is not a serious one. The best means of preventing it is not to plant too closely in the rows, thus allowing the light and air from ventilation to reach the foliage.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

Chicago, June 14.—Cucumbers, 35c to 60c doz.; leaf lettuce, 15c to 25c case; head lettuce, 90c to $1 tub.

New York, June 12.—Cauliflower, 75c to $1 doz.; cucumbers, $2 to $3 case; lettuce, 50c to $1 bbl.; mushrooms, 10c to 50c lb.

cannot dispose of, you will do well to discard and begin to get it ready for the next planting. Take out the soil and if the bed or bench needs repairing, do it now; when you are in the thick of the planting you will have little time to do a good job of building benches. If no repairing is needed clean off the boards, then whitewash and refill with the new soil. Never empty a bench and let the sun beat down on it any length of time.

Clean up the house all over, get out the weeds along the paths and under the benches and throw slaked lime around where the ground seems sour or moldy. If you can empty the house of all plants it will pay you to burn a pan of sulphur in it to kill all manner of insects that hang around in the corners and cracks.

This is also a good time for repainting if there is any to be done. Patching the roof where glass has been broken out we usually leave until fall, when there is less need for all possible ventilation. However, if there is a broken pane that lets the water pour in on a bed you would better repair it. A hard rain soon after transplanting may do much damage. In short, this is no time to idle, but it is the time for whatever odd jobs need doing this season.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The next annual meeting of the American Carnation Society will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, January 24 and 25, 1906. These dates have been reserved for us and at this early date there are indications of an unusual interest being taken in this meeting and exhibition.

The preliminary premium list will be issued early in July and will be mailed to all members and any others who may apply. There will be some special features that will be of interest to all carnation growers. Special premiums and inquiries should be addressed to the secretary, Lancaster, Pa.

CARNATIONS

Seasonable Reminders.

During the next three or four weeks, up to transplanting time, the carnation grower is able to get a short breathing spell. There is no great change to be made during this time that calls for an unusual amount of hustling and you are able to take your time for what needs to be done. It is a good thing that we do not have to hustle all the year around as we do during planting-out time and housing time, else I fear the ranks of the carnation growers would rapidly become depleted.

During this breathing spell, however, you must not go to sleep altogether, nor can you close up shop and run off to the sea shore. There are many little and in themselves insignificant things which can be done during these next few weeks which will help out a great deal later on in pushing the transplanting and the general fall work. The plants in the field must be looked after, too, cultivating and topping. Both of these topics I have touched on repeatedly and I merely want to say now that neither can hardly be overdone. Whenever you don't know what to do, cultivate your carnations, then look over them and top what need it, and then cultivate again. But don't water plants that are to be transplanted.

In the houses you may have some beds that are still bearing pretty well and the demand for good blooms will keep up a few weeks more. Keep them well watered and keep a good shade over them, especially the pink and light pink ones. Enchantress is still giving fine blooms, but it requires a heavy shade to prevent bleaching.

Those beds that are through for the season should be pulled up and thrown out to save watering.

Of course these things depend largely on what kind of a business you do. Those who do a local retail business can use up quantities of blooms, in design work, etc., that the wholesale grower could not possibly dispose of at any figure. So you will have to modify these suggestions to suit your case.

Any bed, the flowers from which you

PLANTING FOR MARKET STOCK.

It is high time for the commercial grower to be planting his stock, if it is not already done, and now that bedding trade is practically over, there is not much excuse for delay. Planting has been mentioned before in these notes, when speaking of exhibition growing, and the difference between planting for exhibition or cut flowers only is nil so far as soil and other conditions are concerned and it is needless to go again into detail.

There is a difference, of course, in the distance apart that the commercial grower sets out his plants as compared with the other fellow, and this distance apart governs very largely the quality of the product. For a first-class grade, the kind that wholesales for from 25 cents upward, nine inches by six is plenty close enough to set out for single stem plants. A little smaller grade can be produced by running two stems to a plant in this space, while other growers who look for quantity much more than quality take up three stems or more in this same space.

Those growers who propose to wholesale their flowers in a large market will find that it will not pay them to produce this latter grade. Every year by November 1 there is more or less of a glut in the chrysanthemum market and then it is always the poor grades that are slaughtered. The florist who needs a lot of cheap flowers for funeral designs or such work may, perhaps, find it to his advantage to produce a large quantity of small flowers, but even he, I often think, might improve his grade with advantage to himself, financially and otherwise.

When plants are too crowded in a bench leaf spot and other diseases are a natural consequence, and perfect stem, foliage and flowers are, under such conditions, impossible.

After planting, open all doors and ventilators and leave them so night and day. If one goes into a house in the early morning and sees how the plants are reveling in the cool, moist night air it will be a good object lesson on the needs of the plant.

On hot days the paths and roofs and plants should be copiously sprayed several times during the day. This can easily be done without wetting the soil in the benches if the right man has hold of the hose, and it will keep down the temperature very considerably. We should always remember that growing chrysanthemums indoors is an unnatural condition, since they are naturally a cool growing plant, and the blazing sun is not to their liking, and anything we can do to keep down the temperature is good for the plants. Side or bottom ventilation is a great help in this respect, since it keeps a current of air moving under the benches.

Shade has been tried on the glass, but it does more harm than good, since we must have a certain amount of sunlight to keep the growth hardy and firm. During a dull spell the growth gets too soft and tender for best results. From my own experience I would say never shade a chrysanthemum house during the summer months. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

THE SEAL OF ILLINOIS.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a design made by A. Gude & Bro., Washington, D. C., to be placed on the tomb of John A. Logan on Memorial day. It is the seal of the state of Illinois executed in cape flowers, immortelles and leucothoe leaves. As is easily seen, the piece is on an easel. It was a large size and probably attracted more public attention than any other display piece of the many supplied by Washington florists for the tombs of celebrities which are annually decorated at Memorial day.

PLYMOUTH, O.—Fannie E. Case reports the largest spring trade in the eight years she has been in business. The call for bedding stock was phenomenal.

FERGUS FALLS, MINN.—S. N. Mehlin's greenhouse was hit by hail just ten days after he joined the Hail Association. He lost 886 square feet of glass and promptly received $92.23, which, as he says, "is a fine thing for a beginner."

GREENPORT, N. Y.—I. Merwin Rayner is adding 5,000 feet of glass to his plant, made necessary by the increasing demand. R. M. Randel, formerly of Cheboygan, Mich., is now with Mr. Rayner. Stock is fine, particularly carnations and sweet peas.

NEWBURYPORT, MASS.—J. A. Keniston says that the spring business has been better than ever, especially at Memorial day, for everyone sold all the flowers which were to be had. Perennial plants have sold splendidly and roses better than ever before. Shrubbery was slow sale.

WINDOW BOXES.

[A report by a committee appointed to investigate this phase of gardening for the Hartford Florists' Club.]

Window box, vase and veranda gardening it would seem at present is within the threshold of a successful era in this country, and it seems strange that this effective and comparatively inexpensive method of beautifying houses, especially in cities, has not been long ago more universally adopted and advanced, considering the long standing of this art of gardening in European cities, which are annually visited by thousands of American tourists. True, our climate here is not as favorable to such gardening as it is in London, for instance, where window boxes are in evidence the year around, receiving from three to four different fillings as the seasons call for the different varieties of plants. But cutting out the winter season, which with us is too severe to admit the use of such plants as aucubas, euonymus and choice conifers as they are so effectively used in England, there is no reason why our windows should not be adorned with beautiful foliage and flowers in almost inexhaustible variety from the time when the crocuses and tulips break the ground, when pansies, forget-me-nots and daisies respond to the warmth of the welcome spring sun, to the time when Jack Frost, the unmerciful, bereaves our fields, parks and gardens of the endless combinations of bright colors produced by plant life.

Influence of Parks.

It may truly be said of most of our attractive cities that the creation and development of park systems all over the country has had a very far-reaching beneficial influence upon the beautifying of home grounds through the residential districts of these cities, and it is quite natural that it should be so. Indeed, it would be a strange, unresponsive, cold people that would not take its lesson so easily learned and within the reach of all; and the very fact that those lessons given have been so fruitful, bringing additional happiness and attractiveness to so many homes, should lead us on to further efforts to extend the cultivation of flowers at all seasons of the year at the homes of all.

The fact that the wind will blow the seeds of grass, of a shrub or even of a tree into the smallest crevice of a stone pavement, a stone wall or any almost inconceivable space, often too small to be noticed by the superficial eye, and that said seed will germinate and produce a plant which will live its term, should teach us that there is hardly a space or location which will refuse all conditions necessary to plant life, but that, on the contrary, with the help of painstaking care, adverse conditions can be overcome and plant life can be introduced and maintained everywhere where barrenness otherwise rules supreme.

Gardening in Heart of City.

We see now here and there well filled window boxes and vases on porches and verandas along residential streets, on houses, the front yards and often the back yards of which are already in themselves beautiful and attractive, and they are certainly becoming to the houses which they adorn, as tasteful and handsome as the architectural appearance and the surroundings of those residences may already be. Now if those floral ornamentations are well placed here and help to still more enhance the beauty of the already beautiful, how much more valuable must the same methods of beautifying and making more homelike the homes of all be in those parts of a city where there are no attractive front yards, lawns, flower beds, shrubbery and trees, where there are the barren, formal brick walls, or where even the elaborate creations of modern architecture are unable to overcome the monotonous and tiresome impression which prevails in all the business and tenement streets of our cities.

In other words, there is a way open and it should be taken advantage of to bring the gardening which we admire so much in the outer districts to all parts of the city, through our business streets, to the homes of our less fortunate fellow citizens, the homes of those of our fellow beings who have to live in the crowded tenement districts.

We have spoken of the influence that parks have in any city on the public in general. Now let us consider what the influence will be by the introduction of window, porch and roof gardening into the busy, monotonous life of a city. Imagine window and veranda boxes loaded with foliage and flowers on our school houses, municipal and business buildings and residences, vines growing over windows and hanging down over window sills and balustrades. What a beautiful sight, worthy of a beautiful, progressive city. Imagine window boxes in all their glory of spring and summer flowering plants, not only screening the unsightliness of rows of tenement windows, but giving them from the in and outside the cheerful, cozy appearance, which plant life alone can produce. Imagine the pleasure and joy of those under whose painstaking care the seeds are germinating to a seedling, the seedling to a full grown plant, the plant producing the flowers; and imagine the pleasure those flowers give to all and the feelings and sentiments they will in their turn germinate and bring into life among those people who in the pursuance of their daily hard labor are not so fortunate as to know of the pleasures of those who have their gardens and yards.

Benefits to Accrue.

Imagine the good seed that will be sown into the hearts of the children of those crowded tenement districts, a seed that is bound to take root; for the soil in all human hearts is more or less alike and it depends upon the cultivation whether the seed entrusted to said soil will grow to be a useful plant.

Everything that can be done to create healthy, joyful life for the human race should be advanced through continued and united efforts of all citizens of a community.

We horticulturists, florists and gardeners, following a time-honored profession, should look upon our calling not only from a pecuniary commercial point of view, but we should take pride in the well proven fact that our accomplishments and our labors of progress in our noble profession, are bringing more universal and wholesome enjoyment to the human race in general than almost any other profession and we should do everything within our power to further the good work which is within our reach.

The cultivation of taste, understanding and love for plants and flowers mean the advancement of the people to a full appreciation of our achievements, and with said appreciation will come the commercial remuneration, which we are deserving by following such principles.

How to Go to Work.

The methods of bringing those desirable conditions about are surely not as difficult as they may appear to be. In fact, we believe that the florists are mostly to blame that window box, vase and veranda gardening is not further advanced than it is today. We believe that if the commercial florists would have completed window boxes for sale from the least expensive up to the most elaborate, there would be a ready sale for them within a very few years. We believe that if the professional organizations all over the country would publish through the public press, articles giving plain instructions and descriptions how to proceed in this and other lines of horticultural and floricultural advancement, a general awakening to those desirable improvements would soon show itself to the benefit of the community in general, and the business interests of the florists in the end.

Wishing to practice what we want to teach, the following plain instructions and information for the people who may wish to make a trial in window, porch and roof gardening, may be of use:

Size and Cost of Box.

Window boxes are easily constructed and can be made at a small expense. Taking ordinary spruce or pine boards for the construction, the box should be made the length of the window's width, six to eight inches wide and as deep. A box three and a half feet long would therefore take about twelve feet of lumber, which would cost about 35 cents. The cost of labor, nails, and two coats of paint should not be more than that much again, and the result would be a very plain but well constructed, durable box at a cost of 70 cents. The box should have six ¾-inch holes in the bottom, which should be covered with broken pots, stones or something that will prevent the falling out of the soil, but still provide drainage. It will take about one bushel of good composted soil to fill the box, which could be delivered by any florist for 50 cents. The soil should be rich, composed in the main of rotted turf mixed with well decomposed cow manure, leaf-mold and a little sand. Now the box is ready for planting.

Filling With Bulbs.

Suppose the box was already on hand in the fall, it could be planted, say, in December with tulips, hyacinths and crocuses, planting the bulbs about three inches deep and keeping the box in a cool room or cellar with a fairly good light. Where the proper locality is not available, however, it will be rather difficult to obtain good results, as the bulbs are apt to grow too quick, stretching toward the light and coming into bloom before they could be safely put outdoors. The box could, however, be placed at the inside of the window and you would have your bulb display indoors. As the bulbs will not require too much watering, it could be given without damage to floors or furniture; besides a tin or zinc box outside of the wooden box would take care of that.

A box of the size described above would take fifteen tulips for the back row, ten hyacinths for the middle row and about fifty crocuses for the front and side rows, and the total cost of good bulbs would be from $1 to $1.50. Daffodils, jonquils, snowdrops, etc., could, of course, be grown in such boxes.

A Second Filling.

After the bulb display is over the bulbs can be taken up and pansies, forget-me-nots and daisies can be planted. A good effect would be to have the forget-me-nots in the back toward the window, the pansies in front of them and a border of daisies in same position in which we had the crocuses; ten forget-me-nots, fourteen pansies and twenty daisies will fill the box nicely and they should not cost more than $1 for the lot.

Filling for Summer.

By about June 1 it is time to establish the summer planting and for that purpose we have an almost inexhaustible variety of plants, and effects are obtainable by a proper selection to suit all tastes.

The following planting lists for window boxes may be of use:

1. Cost of plants for one box, $2.25; two Pennisetum Ruppelianum, three heliotropes, two calendulas, four sweet alyssums, four geraniums, two Cobæa scandens, two maurandias, two Centaurea gymnocarpa and two fuchsias.

2. Cost of plants for one box, $3: One Dracæna indivisa, six geraniums, four petunias, four Vinca major variegata, four German ivy, two fuchsias, two coleus, two verbenas, six Begonia Vernon, two marguerites, two nasturtiums and two lobelias.

3. Cost of plants for one box, $5: Two Phœnix Canariensis, four crotons, two geraniums, two fuchsias, four Abutilon Savitzii, six fancy begonias, four Vinca major variegata, four German ivy and two Abutilon ecleps.

Other plants besides those mentioned in these three planting lists are: Salvias, ageratums, hydrangeas, achyranthes, mignonette, dwarf cannas, gladioli, tuberoses, zinnias, marigolds, stocks, etc. The same plants are, of course, also suitable for vases, baskets and tubs. This means well filled boxes giving immediate effect. Planting thinner means of course a saving and a good complete effect later in the season.

Less Costly Boxes.

The boxes herein described are such as would naturally require the planting material to be furnished by the gardener or florist, and as plain as they are constructed and as reasonable as are the prices considering the class of planting material used, they are above the means of the poorer classes of people living in the crowded tenement districts. Just as well, however, as boxes can be made more elaborate both in construction and in planting for people of larger means, so can also much cheaper boxes be made and planted, bringing them within the means of even the very poor. Where there is a will there is a way. The man and woman proud of their home can nail a box together of almost any kind of lumber, fill it with loam from a garden or the fields and fill same with annuals by planting seeds. Not counting the cost of self-provided labor, such a box can be made and filled with soil for 25 cents or less and the seed itself will be still less expensive.

Such seed boxes can be sown outdoors, beginning the first week in April, and the following seeds can be used: Petunias, nasturtiums, zinnias; Phlox Drummondii, balsams, portulaca, scabiosa, marigolds, morning glory, asters, candytuft, coxcombs, godetias, poppies, snapdragons, violas, etc.

Each seed package gives information as to height of plant, color of flowers, time of blooming and instructions for sowing, so that it will be an easy matter for anyone to form proper combinations of plants. A box can be planted with one showy variety alone or with a combination of suitable varieties, and the cost of seeds for one box of one variety will be five cents and for five varieties twenty-five cents, but the five packages in the latter case will furnish enough seeds for five boxes. Therefore window gardening is within the reach of all.

A Word to the Trade.

To our brother florists and gardeners, especially the commercial men, we would earnestly make the following recommendations:

First: Keep up to the times by growing and introducing such plants as are well adapted for such work, giving due recognition to all deserving varieties and novelties.

Second:—Encourage this line of gardening by having some window boxes tastefully planted on exhibition in front of your stores, ready for sale.

Third:—Set the price for those plants at as low a basis as possible, so as to bring them within the reach of all.

Combined efforts along those lines will, we believe, result in a general adoption of window gardening, will bring happiness to numberless homes, and help to beautify our city in no small degree and all will be to the ultimate benefit and satisfaction of the florists' business.

The whole respectfully submitted.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

There is every prospect that the second annual exhibition of the American Peony Society, to be held in Chicago this week, will be a most successful affair. The extremely warm weather during the first week of June hastened the blooming period very materially, and it was necessary that a large part of the stock which will be on exhibition be placed in cold storage for from one to two weeks. Large quantities of stock were shipped from eastern growers and placed in cold storage in Chicago between June 6 and 9. There is, of course, more or less loss in handling stock in this manner, but such large quantities are in sight that a good showing can hardly fail to result, adding to the cold storage stock such late blooming varieties and such exhibits as are coming from northern growers where the blooming period is just at hand. In fact at Chicago the height of the peony season is just passing.

The number of entries has been very gratifying to the officers of the society, and their judgment in holding the exhibition at Chicago has already been demonstrated to have been good. There will be many more exhibitors than last year at New York and a much wider territory will be represented. It was a distinct disadvantage, particularly to western growers, to be compelled to have their entries in the hands of the secretary at Newton Highlands, Mass., on June 10. They could only make their best guesses as to what they would have in exhibition shape a week later.

The exhibition will be open to the public by ticket, the cards of admission being distributed through the retail florists. The first lot of tickets issued read that the exhibition is to be held June 17 and 18. This was an error. The dates are June 16 and 17.

WESTERN PEONIES.

And now we have the glorious peonies, which, in all the west and northwest, lead all the other flowers. Roses are tender and very disappointing, but the peonies are hardy. I found them at their best in Manitoba, sixty fine blooms on a single clump. You can always depend on them. Here they are massed, 30,000 in one field, 20,000 in another. A little way off the flowers seem blended into a carpet of dazzling beauty fit for the touch of angels' feet. There the deep crimson and the glistening red. Some are of purest white, some are white and yellow. How well they stood the changes of our peculiar spring!

A close inspection shows why many peonies do not bloom. They were nipped in the bud by the severe late frosts. That is the trouble with the tree peony, which seldom blooms in the west. The frosts do the mischief.

I have had Richardson's, Terry's and Rosenfield's new sorts growing side by side with Kelway's and they beat them almost every time. I have had Agnes Mary Kelway for years and it has no comparison with Terry's Cynthia or Sada Evans and many others. We have picked them off and compared them often. Rosenfield never sent out one which was such a puny one as I got from England for $5 a root.

As an all-round peony it is hard to beat Golden Harvest. It will bloom on the least provocation. It has a large, fragrant, beautiful flower. It is wonderfully prolific as a bloomer. It glories in tribulation. Nothing can discourage it. When eighteen inches high it was once frozen solid in a sleet storm for forty-eight hours. It looked tired and droopy for a day or two and then went on covering itself completely with glorious blooms. I never knew it to fail under any circumstances. Floral Treasure is also fine.

An English firm sent out Bunch of Perfume for $2 to $3 per root. It holds no comparison for beauty or grandeur with Terry's Gen. Grant or his Bertha. As for beauty and fragrance it cannot stand a moment by a new one I have secured called Red Jacket, which is exceedingly fragrant and symmetrical and deep red or crimson. I have imported a good many and will stop it. In most cases we can do better at home.

Many of the Japanese, of which I have about thirty kinds, are quite feeble and lack vigor. I am now securing a fine lot of American grown seedlings, which are far superior to many of the Japanese singles. Terry's Queen is an immense white one of the old albaflora type. Full Moon is a semi-double crimson with a large heart of gold. It is a jolly looking flower, smiling all over. May Davidson is a large pink striped with silver. Mrs. Terry is a beautiful single with a sort of lilac color. I have 100 or so of fine singles and it is hard to discard any of them. C. S. Harrison.

INCORPORATION.

The following notice of incorporation in the state of New York is supplied by the usual reporting agency:

Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Co., Irvington, N. Y.; manufacture and operate greenhouses; capital, $2,000,000. Incorporators: Wm. A. Burnham, Irvington, N. Y.; Lyman B. Craw, No. 147 West Eighty-fourth street, New York; Henry F. Ford and Andrew Elder, Irvington, N. Y.; Charles Armitage, Charles G. Hall and E. W. Hitchings, Mont Clair, N. J.; Paul M. Pierson, Ossining, N. Y.; William Sefton, Jersey City, N. J.; Lincoln Pierson, Madison, N. J.

A request for information as to the purposes of the company brings a response that no announcement is possible this week. The incorporators include the officers of the three large corporations already engaged in manufacturing greenhouses in the east.

SPIRAEA FLORIBUNDA.

Will some of your readers kindly tell me how to treat Spiræa floribunda? This is my first season in growing it. Now it has done blooming, what shall be done with it and when started so as to have it in bloom by Easter? The roots can be divided, I suppose, as I divided some of the clumps. When is the best time?

Y. L.

The treatment of all these herbaceous spiræas, or astilbes, is the same. The fact is, we can buy fine clumps every fall from the importers, or import ourselves, at so low a price that we never considered it worth while to bother with the old clumps, excepting to plant them out as a hardy, herbaceous plant. They are very hardy and flower in June, but they do not make the fine white spikes that we get under glass. If you have a piece of deep, rich soil inclined to be moist you can divide the clumps that have flowered this spring and plant at once, but do not expect to produce a clump such as you import, for three years. If you want to again force the same old root, then at flowering time, or just after, there should be no neglect of watering, for they should be kept growing vigorously and planted out as soon as possible and lifted again in November. As you have handled the dormant roots you know all about their treatment. My sincere advice is to plant out the old roots, if you have any ground to spare, and buy fresh roots every fall for your Easter plants. Leave the Dutchman and his fat, black land to raise your clumps. W. S.

Laelia Purpurata.

CONVENTION RATES.

Inquiry of the Central Passenger Association shows that the rate of a fare and one-third, on the certificate plan, to the S. A. F. convention at Washington, was granted on June 10. An official of the Western Passenger Association states that his association will concur.

CALLA LILIES.

I have a lot of calla lilies planted on benches and some in pots from last winter. Where do you think is the best place to keep the roots during summer and when is the proper time to plant them again in order to get a good crop of lilies for Christmas? Which variety do you advise as the best for big flowering lilies? H. H.

Years ago we always treated the calla as an herbaceous plant, resting it in the summer months, and this is usually done now. A rest is not essential and if your bench has eight inches of soil there will be no need of disturbing them. Some of the surface soil may be removed, less water given for a month or two, the oldest leaves cut away and a heavy mulching of new soil and manure put on and they can be kept going.

If you must move them and also rest them in pots, withhold water now entirely. Dig up those on the bench, leaving some soil around the roots, and lay them beneath a dry bench or in a shed. About August 1 shake off the soil and repot in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, according to size of bulb, and plunge them out in frames. Let them be in the full sun and water copiously when once started to make leaves. If you intend planting on a bench again I would still start them all in pots, for two months out in the open gives them a robust growth. I do not think you can regulate their flowering by the time you start them growing.

The common Richardia Africana is usually grown. Nana compacta is a dwarf variety, but the flower is too small for florists. There are several forms under name, but the only difference in them is the size of bloom, and that we know depends mostly on cultivation. Planted out in a rich bed they produce much larger flowers than when grown in pots, but the monster flowers are not generally desirable. The medium flower is most useful.

Some years ago we took plants in pots in May and, without any rest, planted them in the open ground in deep, rich soil and kept them watered in dry spells. Before frost they were very large plants and lifted well. They needed 8-inch to 10-inch pots and made plants six feet high. I think they gave us more flowers to the plant than any we ever grew, but perhaps not more flowers to the square foot and that is the important point.

LAELIA PURPURATA.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made at the establishment of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose head gardener supplies the following note:

"Laelia purpurata, from Brazil, is a magnificent species, one of the finest orchids in cultivation and of easy culture. We give them the same treatment as for cattleyas, keeping them in the cattleya house. This laelia grows two feet high and has furrowed stems and oblong light green leaves. The stem bears three to five large, richly colored flowers which are very showy. The sepals and the larger petals are pure white. The lip has the basal lobes folded over the column, streaked with rose. The throat is yellow striped with crimson, the broad front lobe expanded, of a rich dark crimson purple, paler toward the tip and marked by crimson veins. Some varieties are light rose-colored. It blooms during May, June and July and lasts three weeks in perfection. When they are in flower we put them in a dryer house and the flowers last much longer. We grow them in pots and pot them in fern roots mixed with a tenth part of green sphagnum moss."

The Market.

The report for the past week will depend altogether on the way you look at the market. If consideration is taken only of the low prices at which carnations and, particularly, peonies have sold, it will be said that the market has been in a most demoralized condition, but if, on the other hand, consideration is taken only of the number of orders and the vast quantities of material which have been moved, the result will be a conclusion that trade is not so bad after all. As a matter of fact the totals of sales in the wholesale houses have been quite good, except for an occasional dull day, although average prices in most lines are very low indeed.

During the past week receipts of roses have shortened up materially, due in a large measure to replanting operations. Good roses now have a stable value and Brides are occasionally hard to find. Those growers who have summer crops now coming on will meet a very satisfactory market. There are still considerable quantities of long Beauties, but the market is much stronger on this item than it was a week ago.

Carnations continue in very lage supply and very low sales have been made to clean up; in fact the wholesalers have found it almost impossible to keep the stock moving. On Monday morning several houses opened with considerable quantities of carnations carried over from Saturday. The quality of stock is still good for the season. Little change is looked forward to as regards carnations until toward the end of this month, when the growers will begin cleaning out the benches preparatory to planting for next season.

This market never had so large receipts of peonies as last week and some of the sales reported are almost too low for credence. One of the down-town stores that makes a specialty of cheap sales reports having bought at one place that plentiful variety called "crap" for 2 cents per dozen, by the wagon-load. Up to Monday the practice almost everywhere was to let the buyer make the price on the grades which could not be held. Good stock has largely gone into storage and the first of this week saw the end of the local crop. There are many thousands of dozens in cold storage, certainly more than ever before, and there will be no shortage of peonies for some weeks, but there are only a few who have had the knack of bringing out cold storage stock in the right shape. This grade of goods will likely bring a fair price, no matter how much of the poor stock there may be to be slaughtered.

Receipts of sweet peas continue excessively heavy, but the flower is in as good demand as any other item in the list. Valley is doing well because of the wedding season. Few callas are seen and Harrisii lilies have again assumed their normal position. Gladioli are more plentiful but sell fairly well. A few water lilies are seen. "Green goods" are doing fairly well, but smilax is a little more plentiful and slightly lower in price.

On Wednesday the weather again turned hot, to the injury of all.

New Rose Range.

Application has been made at Springfield for the incorporation of the Chicago Rose Co., with $15,000 capital stock, the incorporators being John P. Weiland, D. J. Murphy and John Degnan. Mr. Weiland recently sold to his partners his interest in the firm of Weiland & Risch. The new concern has bought fifteen acres of land at Libertyville and has placed an order with the Moninger Co. for cypress and with the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. for glass for three 500-foot greenhouses, approximately 50,000 square feet of glass, the houses to be put up with all possible speed to be ready for planting in early July. Brides and Bridesmaids and some of the new storts will be grown. In the one season Mr. Murphy has been growing for this market he has given ample proof of his skill with teas and the new concern is expected to develop rapidly.

Various Notes.

A meeting was called for last evening at the store of E. C. Amling for the purpose of organizing the Chicago Wholesale Florists' Association on a permanent basis. The association has done so well in handling the wholesalers' interests during the teamsters' strike that it is thought best to perpetuate the organization. It can be of material assistance in many ways, as, for instance, in disseminating information of those buyers who make a practice of refusing C. O. D.'s "if it happens to be raining when the box arrives."

ANNOUNCEMENT

INCREASED SUPPLIES AND RAPIDLY INCREASING BUSINESS necessitate increased facilities and we wish to announce to the trade that MR. MONS OLSON, for many years identified with leading shipping houses in Chicago, is now with us and we bespeak the patronage of the many buyers whom he has served in the past.

There is no house better able to take care of your orders and none more anxious to please.

the stock and fixtures at the store in the Masonic Temple, although this avails nothing, for Mosconesotes' brother has been able to show title. However, on Saturday he sold out to Frank Williams, who already has a store around the corner on Randolph street. The reported consideration was $1,100.

Jas. Foerster, manager of George Reinberg's city store, was married June 8 to a Miss Riggs. The announcement came as a surprise to Mr. Foerster's many friends.

Bassett & Washburn report that thus far this has been the best June in years. They are getting a good cut of Kaiserin, which helps out.

The first part of this week has seen the height of the peony season at the Peterson Nursery and the peony fields have been visited by a large number of those interested in the popular spring flower, including many in the trade. Mr. Peterson says the season's blooming has confirmed his good opinion of Delicatissima.

It is reported that one of the downtown cheap sales stores bought 40,000 carnations on Saturday.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has been sending large consignments of peonies to a number of the local wholesalers the past week. They lost a considerable part of their crop, however, in the hail storm at the end of May.

A. B. Austin, at Downers Grove, has been sending E. H. Hunt immense shipments of peonies of fine quality the past week. A large quantity have gone into cold storage.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is at work on another good sized addition to its plant, seven houses each 27x195 feet.

There was only a small attendance at the club meeting June 8. The next session, June 22, will probably be the last for the season.

Besides the rebuilding operations already mentioned, Emil Buettner is extending three of his old houses 129 feet each.

P. J. Hauswirth says that so far in June business has been exceptionally good with him, a large part of it wedding work and decorations in the Auditorium.

The Fleischman Floral Co. is to erect a handsome show house 27x50 feet at its new branch store at State and Division streets. The J. C. Moninger Co. is drawing the plans.

The jobbing houses have announced a slight increase in price on the larger sizes of window glass. The discount on ordinary greenhouse sizes continues to be 90 and 30 per cent from the list; 16x20 is reported scarce.

Ed. Hauswirth has returned from an early vacation.

The roses at the wooded island in Jackson park will be at their best next Sunday.

Carl Niemann, at Norwood Park, is building three houses 21x125 to be finished July 10 for early planting with carnations.

Peter Reinberg is rebuilding a range of houses, raising them and substituting iron gutters for wood, without removing the glass.

E. E. Pieser says that, although there is sure to be big business in peonies for the rest of this month, he does not look for any shortage at the end of the season. The Kennicott Bros. Co., which was the pioneer in storing peonies has several thousand dozens more in storage than ever before.

Kindly cut out all my advertisement but the late cabbage plants. I surely have no complaint to make, for Zech & Mann are getting the first auratum lilies of the season.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is getting candytuft and coreopsis in quantity and nasturtiums are beginning to come in.

C. W. McKellar reports a good business on cattleyas. He is also handling vandas, but they are slow sale.

W. L. Palinsky says that the bedding plant trade came all in a very short time this year but that everyone so far as he knows is well cleaned up. Some geraniums which were not in flower bade fair to be left but are now selling as fast as they come into bloom.

C. W. Ward, president of the peony society, is due to arrive today for the convention.

J. A. Budlong reports rose plants selling well.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Summer weather is here at last and Monday a much needed rain fell. The seedsmen and nurserymen and all kinds of growers are rejoicing with great joy.

The market is a thing of shreds and patches. Plenty of everything and too much of some things. New roses are coming in and old ones are still abundant. Prices are uneven and problematical. Boxes go without disturbance and at prices that must be heart breaking to the grower and his faithful agent.

Carnations are also in oversupply and quality continues quite up to the mark, but prices! You should see the stock that goes at 50 cents per thousand. Lilies are no longer a flower for special seasons. Like Will H. Siebrecht's valley, you can have them "every day in the year."

Peony night at the club came at the right time for an exhibit. Hardly a wholesale house but is flooded with them this week. One man on Twenty-ninth street tells me he has contracted for a shipment from one grower of 60,000 flowers. The Cottage Gardens pour their wealth of bloom daily into their regular channel of distribution. One only has to walk through the wholesale section to be set to wondering where the enormous supply can come from. There are some beauties among them, how many varieties it would be hard to tell.

Club Meeting.

The final club meeting until the second Monday in September was a great success. Between 100 and 200 were present, including a large attendance of ladies. Chairman Nugent, not only provided an extra room for the comfort of the guests at the musical and literary feast, but spread dainties tempting to every palate and pre-arranged a distribution of the exhibits so that every one of the fair sex became a walking peony garden when she left the hall. Mr. Nugent sang many songs in fine voice and was ably assisted by the professor. Dancing was also indulged in. Wallace sang Scotch songs and Pepper told dialect stories and some of the young ladies did their share of the singing though called on unexpectedly. The best of good feeling prevailed and the whole evening was voted a fine success. This places another feather in the president's cap and makes the road all the rougher for his successor to travel.

The exhibits were first-class and Messrs. Guttman, Guttman & Weber, Chas. Lenker and the Cottage Gardens received the unanimous thanks of the club for their displays. Peonies were sent by Messrs. Ward and Lenker and Victory never better by Guttman & Weber.

The transportation committee reported that it will notify the members by letter as to the route to the convention in August. A letter from Commissioner Kennedy, of the Brooklyn parks, was read, announcing the rescinding of the order closing the Prospect park conservatories to the children. A letter of thanks was ordered sent as the club's recognition of his prompt attention to the president's suggestion. Messrs. Kakuda and Fellouris were proposed for membership and the resignation of J. C. Gowing was accepted.

The club thus closes the most successful six months of its history. In beauty and extent of exhibits, average attendance, harmony, union of interest and good fellowship, its record has never been equaled. The outing is expected to be the consummation of a brilliant season. The programs were distributed at the meeting and since our last report J. W. Reimels, Charles Lenker and C. W. Ward have been added to the list of prize donors. The tickets are going fast and President Traendly requests that those who are going send to Treasurer Schenck, with remittance, as soon as possible so that proper arrangements for entertainment may be made. The committee anticipates an attendance of 400.

Various Notes.

Quite a number of growers, bulb men, retailers and wholesalers have gone or contemplate a European trip. Don't hear of any newspaper men, however, going over, except Dimmock and John Birnie. Birnie slyly got away without waiting for the club's send-off and godspeed, to which he was entitled for faithful service. He sailed last Wednesday on the Oceanic for Bonnie Scotland and a visit to his aged mother. He will have to take a swift boat home if he does not wish to miss the outing. There is a younger John at home, who is managing things while he is away.

A new wholesaler will make a bid for a share in the cut flower pie. Phil Kessler has graduated from the management of the Cut Flower Exchange into a full fledged mogul and he has a good list of growers on his string already. He is a popular fellow, generous, tireless and everybody wishes him success. He will be located above Young & Nugent's on West Twenty-eighth street.

A new heating company makes its bow this week, the Johnston Co., with offices at 1133 Broadway, the same building where the Lord & Burnham Co. and the Parker-Bruen Co. make city headquarters. Mr. Johnston is a graduate from the firm of Hitchings & Co.

The bowlers last Friday were conspicuous by their absence, the secretary and treasurer maintaining the semblance of organization. Some fine averages were made, however, and nothing under 150 goes.

Charles Loechner, with Suzuki & Iida, is back from his European trip.

A goodly number of the New York seedsmen are planning to attend the convention of the Seed Trade Association at Alexandria Bay, June 20. A grand time has been promised the visitors. No more restful and delightful spot could have been chosen.

A firm of Greeks doing business as the Olympia Florist at 52 and 101 West Forty-second street have filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $3,012 and no assets except those covered by a chattel mortgage. The debts were all contracted between April 15 and May 15.

The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences has received an endowment for a botanical garden.

A practical joker is reported to have put a live lobster in Wm. Gilbert's pocket. Gilbert started for town and had plenty of room on the "L" train.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

There has been very little let-up in business the past week, an unusual state of affairs for this time of year. There is an unusual number of weddings, even for the month of weddings, and the decorations have been very generous for most of them. Stock sold well and the offerings during the week have been very good. Sweet peas are almost a glut on the market. The supply exceeds the demand. Daisies, cornflowers and the different outdoor flowers are coming in and are crowding carnations and roses off the boards. A large number of weddings are booked for the coming week and things promise to be lively.

Business has fallen off considerably at the market the past week, as every one seems to be supplied with bedding stuff and the market looks lonesome. Some of the growers have sold out everything and were forced to buy stock plants, while a very few had some stock left over.

Various Notes.

John Vesey, who has had the lease of the Baker Bros.' establishment the past two years, has closed up his business and will return to his home in Indiana, where he will engage in the real estate business with his father. We regret to lose him, as he has made many friends among the florists here, who will miss his genial presence.

Mrs. Eola Shiras, who has charge of the retail division of the Kansas City Floral Co., has returned to work after a vacation of two weeks.

The Budd Park Greenhouses report a very satisfactory business since the firm took charge of the property last fall, and they are contemplating making quite a number of improvements that will bring it to an up-to-date standard.

Clarence A. Doty, one of the representative business men here, who is now in the confectionary line, is about to open a flower store on Main street. Mr. Doty intends to handle all kinds of first-class blooms and is making arrangements to open a first-class establishment by September 1. Mr. Doty is an energetic, up-to-date business man and we predict for him success in his new venture.

The Harvey Floral Co. reports a very satisfactory business the past week and Mrs. Harvey, the manager, is confident that they will handle a generous share of the business.

D. Fruedenthal is handling the finest sweet peas seen here this season. They come from Ed. Bunyar of Independence.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.

For last week's firemen's tournament, J. F. Wilcox had a window display which attracted much attention. It was a floral reproduction in miniature of a wide lawn, dotted with flower beds and edged with foliage plants. At the rear was a three-story dwelling house constructed of white carnations, and having balconies and porches. A red sheet of flames, represented by red carnations, was mounting the building, and from a window on the third floor two golden haired tots appealed for help. A macadam drive crossed the lawn, over which an auto chemical engine, preceded by a hose cart drawn by three horses, was hurrying to the rescue.

The entire design covered a space the width of the show window, and at about equal depth. The work was done by William Speth.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The demand for choice roses and sweet peas continues brisk, the former being scarce, the latter plentiful. The advent of the sweet peas grown from seed sown outdoors has increased the supply. The quality is very fine. Prices are declining. Carnations of medium and poorer grades are an absolute drug, only the better grades bringing satisfactory returns. Peonies are waning and this week will probably see the end of the local stock, making room for those put in cold storage. Centaurea imperialis, white, yellow and pink, with large flowers and long stems, may be seen in quantity at the Leo Niessen Co.'s. The white pyrethrum prize for design work is now handled by the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. Beauties and Kaiserins are scarce. S. S. Pennock is getting some fine Maids from down east that command about double the price of good ordinary stock.

A Pretty Sight.

Green is universally recognized as the most restful color on which the eye can dwell. When the green is of deep hue, rich and glossy, the pleasure of seeing is enhanced. Such a sight may be seen at Wyncote, where Joseph Heacock has house after house of kentias in perfect condition, robust and vigorous. This is the age of the specialists. Mr. Heacock is one of these. Ten years ago they were rare in our profession. Today their number is increasing. He believes that there is but one palm, the kentia, just as he believes there is but one rose, the American Beauty. Of course, this is figurative language. He has other palms. He has also other roses. All are good, but the kentia and the Beauty stand out pre-eminent.

I suppose you will expect a detailed account of the Belmoreanas and Forsterianas in medium sizes, as well as of their big sisters in larger pots and in shapely grass-green tubs, of the made-up plants and single specimens, of the arecas and the cocos, of the cibotiums, and the Scottii, and the Barrowsii, but you will be disappointed. Some pen more facile than mine will gladly do this for you. I can only say that while many choice kentias were in "sixes" and in "sevens," these symbolic numbers in no wise describe the condition of the place, for a neater, cleaner, more orderly and systematic place than that of Joseph Heacock it would be scarcely possible to find.

A Novel Proposition.

"I am Miss Belle," the sweet voice said. "I want to tell you that I was disappointed about sailing for England today and all the lovely flowers that my friends sent me from your shop have come to mamma's from the steamer. Now I want you to send here for the flowers, sell as many of them as you can and send their value in fresh flowers next Wednesday to my steamer in New York, charging me with the expressage. You see," the sweet voice added, "I do not want my friends to be disappointed. They expect me to enjoy your lovely flowers on the ship."

"But, Miss Belle," the astonished young man replied, "it is not our fault that you did not sail today."

"Please ask Mr. White himself to come to the telphone." The sweet voice was quite stern now. The proposition was repeated in full.

"Certainly, Miss Belle. Do not give the matter a moment's anxiety. But you shall have all the boxes of flowers in New York next Wednesday exactly as you received them this morning," was Mr. White's gracious answer.

SOMETHING NEW

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call your attention to the

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves, and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not. Will you try a case on these terms?

THE VERDICT OF THE TRADE

The case of Huckleberry was very satisfactory as a decorating green, and we wish to compliment you on the new discovery for decorating at this time of year.

Wm. J. Muth is justly proud of the good showing made by the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. throughout the season.

Robt. Craig & Son straightened out their affairs with their creditors on Thursday last. Mr. Craig's many friends rejoice that he is once more at the helm.

It is said that Charles P. Poryzees has received satisfactory compensation from the insurance company for his recent loss.

Frank R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, was in this city last Monday.

Joseph Heacock, M. Rice, B. Eschner and C. E. Meehan attended the meeting of the Masonic Lodge 107 at Beverly on Monday, by invitation of John Cook.

John Wilson, of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, established a new record at the Bellevue-Stratford recently. He received an order for fifteen large bouquets of choice flowers when available stock was low. With but one assistant he hustled around and secured the stock and filled the order on time, which was about three hours.

The Hugh Graham Co. is having its loss adjusted by the insurance companies for a small blaze that occurred recently in their handsome store, 104 South Thirteenth street.

Ed. Reid had an order for 1,000 Beauties on Monday.

The rose meetings of the Pennsylvania and Germantown Horticultural Societies were held on June 8 and 12 respectively.

Charles A. Knapp has a good stock of bedding plants.

A. M. Campbell paid a pleasant visit at the Flower Market quite early last Monday morning.

PHIL.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.—Mrs. R. Pritchard, who has been quite ill for three months, is convalescing. Mr. Pritchard has had a busy season.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

We are now in the midst of June festivities, the usual number of weddings and commencement exercises. Cupid has not been quite as liberal in the dispensation of darts as heretofore, especially among the wealthy class of young society ladies. Large wedding decorations, which call for quantities of fine flowers, are very rare this season. On the other hand, work for the public schools and colleges will be in full swing, commencing about June 15.

The call for good flowers is increasing rapidly and the quality diminishing very fast, owing to the hot weather the past week. Beauties locally grown are of good quality and sell at a fair price. Brides and Maids have suffered considerably the past week, both in price and quality. There are a few fine flowers, which command as high as $6 per hundred, but most of the stock is sold by the bulk without a price. Carnations were never better at this season of the year. Lawson has again regained its color and is extra fine, as also are Enchantress and Joost. Crane has seen its best day, having succumbed to the hot weather and red spider.

Peonies are at this season of the year what the chrysanthemums are in the fall. They fill in very satisfactorily for decorations and are also used for commencements. Some extra fine Festiva maxima, the grand white, are to be seen at the stores, which retail readily at $2 per dozen. It is a happy thought to know we are about to realize a beautiful pink. While there are numerous other kinds, the above is really king. Pyrethrums, double and single, are very fine. Many other herbaceous flowers are in their prime at present.

Various Notes.

The Gasser Co. has a fine showing of gladioli for this season of the year. Spanish iris will soon be in flower outside. Mr. Darnell reports trade about normal, with fewer weddings of magnitude than last year.

Collins & Harrison are, as usual, quite busy with school commencements and wedding decorations, of which they are getting their usual quota.

Smith & Fetters handled a large wedding decoration lately which called for the best quality of flowers.

Miss Eadie has been quite busy since Decoration day. At present her store is receiving a new coat of decoration, which will add materially to the appearance of the place.

C. M. Wagner finds business fairly good, having booked several weddings of late.

Milton Parks, of the Citizens building, says trade has been exceptionaly good. He has captured the Masonic order for several thousand roses and carnations and will accompany them to Niagara Falls. Forest City.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The market has been quite dull the past week. June weddings are numerous, but do not seem to make any appreciable difference in prices. Roses are of much poorer quality. One or two growers are sending in Beauties from the new crop. From $10 to $25 per hundred are prices for select stock of these. Brides and Maids are getting poor, but some very nice Kaiserins and Carnots are arriving. Prices on these remain about the same. Quite a few outdoor Jacqueminot should appear this week. Carnations are druggy. While a few select flowers bring $2 to $3, large lots are unloaded at 50 to 75 cents per hundred. Quite a few double peonies are arriving. These sell at from $4 to $8 per hundred. Singles are quite plentiful. Outdoor valley is now over. One grower has been shipping 20,000 very fine spikes a day for some time. Prices vary from $1 to $3 per hundred. Quite a few German irises, pyrethrums, Spanish irises, Iceland poppies and other outdoor flowers are coming in. A few Earliest of All and Mont Blanc sweet peas from outdoors are now appearing. The best indoor grown still bring up to 75 cents, poor grades as low as 25 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

Holm Lea, the famous and picturesque estate of Prof. C. S. Sargent in Brookline, was opened to the public on June 10 and 11 and attracted thousands of visitors. The magnificent specimen standard wistarias in tubs and the big collection of Indian azaleas were in prime condition. The rhododendrons and hardy azaleas, as well as many other trees and shrubs were very attractive.

Big masses of Primula divoricata and Primula Sieboldi were especially fine in the rock garden. The large collection of Moutan peonies, which included many fine seedlings, and the herbaceous varieties were gorgeous. Many new, rare and valuable hardy plants were noted. Everything on the place was in splendid condition and reflected the greatest credit on the skillful head gardener, Charles Sander.

James Farquhar has left for a second trip to Porto Rico, where his firm recently established a nursery.

Superintendent J. A. Pettigrew, of the Boston park system, leaves for Europe early in July on a well earned vacation. He has not visited Great Britain for thirty years and expects to see many striking changes.

A good delegation of members of the American Rose Society's executive board will attend Hartford, Conn., on June 19. The program includes a visit to the famous rose garden in Elizabeth park and an automobile ride round the city in addition to the regular business session. The Hartford Florists' Club will entertain the visitors at a banquet in the evening.

Unless all signs fail, the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on June 20 will be the most largely attended in its history. Mr. Walsh's paper on roses and the subsequent discussion, to say nothing of other special attractions arranged, are the drawing cards.

W. E. Doyle had the decorations at Trinity church last week for the Gray-Tudor and Higginson-Sargent weddings. At the latter he used large quantities of pink hydrangeas and Enchantress carnations in addition to palms, etc., to good effect.

Our long drought was broken last week by welcome rain but much more is needed. June 8 was, according to the weather bureau, the coldest June day in seventeen years, the maximum being only 47 degrees. The temperature fell at night to freezing in some locations. At North Easton it went to 34 degrees and a number of tender plants were injured.

E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, made a large exhibit of peonies in all the leading varieties before the Worcester Horticultural Society on June 15. Mr. Shaylor has a large collection of peonies, including many new and scarce sorts.

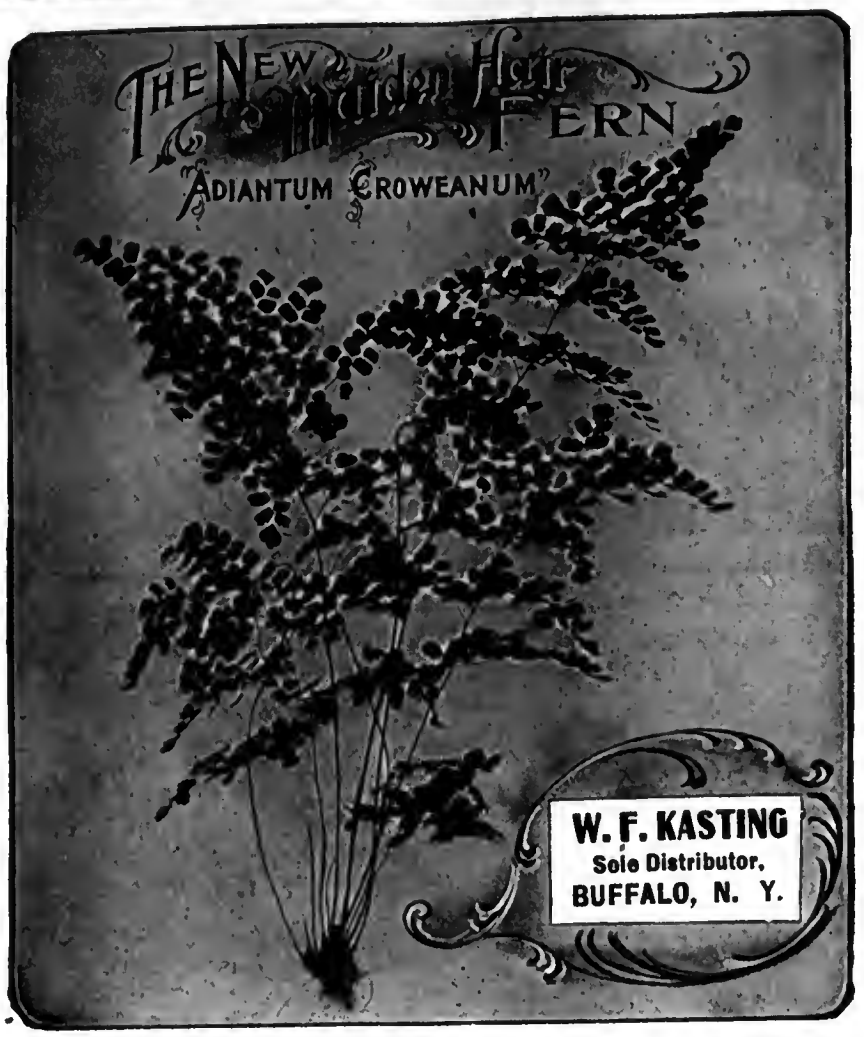
The Boston Globe of June 11 contained an illustrated account of the Waban Rose Conservatories. In an interview Mr. Montgomery stated that they grew 100,000 rose plants, their annual cut being one and one-half millions. "The growing of roses," Mr. Montgomery stated, "is becoming much more of a science than formerly and I might add that the successful rose grower today should take chemistry as an important foundation stone in his curriculum."

H. H. Barrows & Son are having a remarkable demand for Nephrolepis Barrowsii. They also report N. Scottii as being much called for. They have refused orders for over 50,000 Bostons the past two weeks, but have big stocks coming on.

Some of the large private estates have a new fad, viz., pasturing sheep on the lawns to keep the grass short. We are told "it saves expense, the trying noise of the lawn mowers, and does the work more neatly and quickly, besides which, the sheep add greatly to the rural aspect, constitute a distinctly picturesque feature, demand no pay and on the contrary, prove a source of profit in meat and wool." How alluring! Progressive seedsmen should stock up on sheep and here would seem to be an opening for wide-awake florists who have some grazing land to make a dollar.

Indications are for a very fine peony exhibition on June 17.

At the Arnold Arboretum, where cratægus is being especially studied at present, 300 beds were planted this spring each containing a distinct species of this genus. Many of these are very beautiful and all are interesting.



W. N. Craig.

BROCKTON, MASS.

W. W. Hathaway reports Decoration day trade as being the largest he ever had. Flowers in most demand were carnations, spiræas, stocks and roses. Among plants spiræas and hydrangeas were in heaviest request, in addition to the regular bedding plants. Other storekeepers report similarly good business.

Since Memorial day trade has slumped. Most contracts for flowers close after May 30 and prices naturally take a big tumble. One large department store is handling all the carnations from the Crawford greenhouses at 25 cents per dozen. One or two of the florists' stores responded by cutting prices also and retailing at 15 to 25 cents. From 50 cents to $1 is, however, still paid at one store for first-class stock.

The season's business will compare favorably with other years, trade at the holidays being heavier. C.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The past week brought forth another glut of carnations and many were thrown out. It appears to be over now and the price is rising a little. The quality of the stock is, for the most part, very good, especially those shipped in from the north. Roses are about done for. Brides and Maids are few and far between. Beauties are also off crop, but will be in again in a few days with a good cut of new stock. The best roses are Kaiserin, Chatenay, of which some good ones are to be had; Golden Gate and Ivory. Some good outdoor roses are being received, especially Maman Cochet.

There are still plenty of good peonies on the market. Some good candidum lilies are also in. There is plenty of sweet alyssum, candytuft and stocks for funeral work. Small quantities of indoor gladioli are to be had. Lily of the valley is in heavy demand, also Bermuda and calla lilies. All kinds of "green goods" are scarce and the new crop ferns go like hot cakes, faster than they can be brought from the mountains of Kentucky.

Club Affairs.

One of the greatest events in the history of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will take place at Oakley on June 29. It will be the entertainment given the society by George & Allan and D. Rusconi, of which I wrote some weeks ago. All the plans are now perfected and a great time is promised. Doings will start at 2 p. m. The annual meeting of the society will be called to order at 3 p. m., when the board of directors will be elected for the ensuing year. At 6 p. m. a feast in true Italian style will be spread. There will be no lack of wet goods. Bowling and dancing will also be indulged in. All florists have been given a cordial welcome and there will be a big crowd on hand.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held last Saturday evening with quite a few of the members present. Nominations for board of directors were in order and the following names were proposed: Ben George, Geo. Corbett, James Allan, C. J. Ohmer, R. Witterstaetter, H. Konzelman, Gus Adrian, J. M. Rodgers, D. Rusconi, Wm. Murphy and Geo. Murphy. They will be voted upon at the next meeting held at George & Allan's June 29.

President George read a communication from the Oakley Fair Association stating that they will offer $500 to be distributed as prizes for cut flowers and plants at the Oakley fair to be held August 15 to 18. The schedule of prizes will be issued shortly and can be had by addressing the secretary. Chas. E. Critchell was proposed for membership.

The topic of an annual outing was brought up and the society was informed that several florists had banded together to give an outing under the heading of the "Florists of Cincinnati." It was stated that they had made a contract with the Coney Island Co. to hold the outing at Coney Island on July 20, thereby usurping the date usually selected by the Florists' Society. Tickets are already out. The society voted to have nothing to do with this affair and the matter of an outing was laid on the table till the next meeting.

Various Notes.

Mr. Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va., accompanied by his brother, has been in the city for the past few days. Mr. Dudley has been making a specialty of hydrangeas for the past year and with marked success.

H. M. Altick, of Dayton, O., is on the sick list, but is rapidly recovering.

E. G. Gillett has posted a notice that he will close his wholesale house at five p. m. beginning July 1, as is his custom. The other houses usually do the same thing.

C. J. OHMER.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Memorial day was excellent, far ahead of last year. Taunton Greenhouses report a tremendous demand; in fact, they were taxed to the limit to fill orders. Scarlet and dark red were about the only colors called for among geraniums. There were not enough of these to supply demands. Next season some of our florists are going to advance the price of scarlet geraniums 25 cents per dozen.

G. L. Williams, of the Taunton Greenhouses, has been quite sick with typhoid fever, but is improving.

H. W. P. Carstens we are glad to report as being improved.

The vegetable garden of the Taunton Insane Hospital has been entered in competition for the special prizes offered the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Cut flower trade for the season now ending has been very satisfactory. Prices have averaged about the same, except in the case of fancy carnations, which have sold higher.

AMERICAN ROSES.

At a recent London exhibition English growers showed some American roses which gained awards of merit. Of these the Gardeners' Chronicle says:

Rose Lady Gay is a Wichuraian rose of American origin. It is quite one of the best things among climbing roses and should prove a valuable addition to the rose garden. The trusses of flowers hang in the form of sprays on long growths, and are produced in clusters of a score or more flowers. The color of the flowers is deep rose, and the individual blooms may be not inaptly likened to a small pink carnation.

Rose Philadelphia Rambler is a climbing variety, resembling Crimson Rambler, save that the flower is of a much richer type, the color being dark scarlet. The flower is also of somewhat more substance than the older variety.

Rose David Harum is a hybrid tea, with flower of large substance and of a pleasing rosy-pink color. The shape is good, and the petals when reflexed give deeper shadings of rose. The variety should prove valuable for planting in beds and borders.

SOLID BEDS.

In making solid beds for lettuce and other crops would it do to put in stone to a depth of twelve to eighteen inches and then put in good soil to nearly the same depth? How do you get the drainage? G. S.

The manner of bottoming your beds will depend both on the situation of your greenhouse and the nature of your subsoil. If your greenhouses are situated on rising ground, where there is no danger of water standing too near the surface of the ground in the case of a protracted rainy spell, there will be no need of drainage as far as location is concerned. If your subsoil is of a sandy or gravelly nature through which water would pass freely there will still be no need of drainage. If, on the other hand, your houses are situated on low ground or if your subsoil is of a close, retentive or clay nature, drainage will be necessary to insure the free passage of water.

Of course drainage is always a necessity, but the natural drainage of the soil is preferable to the artificial article, providing the natural drainage is sufficient. With the natural moisture from below, far less water will be necessary to supply the wants of your plants. Under glass your conditions as regards moisture are entirely under control and there is no necessity for providing for surplus moisture, since surplus water need not be applied. For some crops, lettuce, for instance, it is a big advantage to have beds that will retain sufficient moisture to sustain the crop without too frequent applications of water, especially through the dull months in winter.

If, however, conditions demand artificial drainage about twelve inches ought to be sufficient and I would prefer broken bricks to stone if they can conveniently be had. A green sod turned upside down on top of the drainage, or a thin layer of salt hay will prevent the soil from working down through and clogging up the drainage. The amount of soil you suggest should be sufficient to sustain any crop.

If no artificial drainage is to be used, unless your soil is very good, it might be as well to make provision for new surface soil to a depth of about twelve inches. This can be enriched according to the requirements of the crops to be grown or renewed occasionally, as circumstances may demand.

NICOTINE A POISON.

In England there is a law confining the sale of poisons to chemists (druggists) under strict limitations and lately a number of horticultural firms have been prosecuted under this law, for the selling of nicotine insecticides. Recently a deputation of the trade appeared before the Board of Agriculture to urge a change in the law.

G. H. Richards stated that in 1892 he first commenced to make experiments with nicotine for insecticide purposes, and after proving that it was far in advance of anything previously used for the purpose, he secured the services of one of the largest chemical manufacturers in London for the manufacture of nicotine. When supplies were ready and nicotine was available as a commercial article, he at once introduced "XL All Insecticides" to the horticultural trade, who confirmed his opinion that they were greatly in advance of anything previously used for destroying insects on plants, and the trade unanimously decided to catalogue these insecticides and recommend them to their customers. After they had been in circulation through nurserymen, seedsmen, and florists for some years, chemists became alive to the fact that they were successful articles, and proceeded to urge the Pharmaceutical Society to take out prosecutions against horticultural traders for selling them on the plea of public safety.

He also pointed out that there was not any greater danger to the public through these articles being sold by horticultural traders than if sold by chemists, and that it would be a great injustice to now take away the sale of these articles from horticultural traders who have been to the expense of introducing them to the gardening public.

THE ALLAMANDAS.

For covering the inside of a roof of a small house, it is difficult to name a plant that is more striking and showy than Allamanda Hendersoni, and though it puts forth a vigorous growth, and produces in plenty its large yellow blossoms, many ornamental-leaved stove plants will do well beneath it. We see at our large flower shows specimens in pots, trained to balloon-shaped frames, but at their best—and some examples of A. Hendersoni and A. nobilis are very fine—the plants are too much confined in pots to do them full justice. But when planted out, and fed as required, one is led to recognize to the fullest extent the glorious freedom of development of which the plants are capable. I have found cut sprays of Allamanda Hendersoni to keep for a considerable time in a sitting-room, care being taken to give them fresh, lukewarm water. A specimen planted in such a house as that above mentioned, needs to be cut back every year much as a vine is pruned. A. Williamsi is also well suited for being employed in the same way, the flowers are small, like those of A. cathartica, but they are borne very freely in clusters, and are of a deep yellow color.—Horticultural Advertiser.

Indianola, Ia.—L. P. Springer has built a greenhouse on West Ashland avenue and has a good start toward a prosperous business.

Bozeman, Mont.—M. L. Langohr has presented the city with enough bedding stock for planting the grounds about the public library.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

THE good weather of the week has improved the onion set fields at Chicago very much.

EVERYTHING points to an unusually large attendance at the seed trade convention next week, especially of the eastern members.

IT is reported from Sheboygan, Wis., that one of the canning companies there claims to have had great damage on crops. They were also unfortunate in losing 1,000 bags of seed peas by the flooding of their canning establishment.

FROM all the information available to date there will be no combination in the movement of the western seedsmen toward the meeting point of the seedsmen's convention. Each will move independently of the others, trusting to providence to get there safely.

UNDER date of Sheboygan, Wis., June 12, the John H. Allan Seed Co. reports: "We have had some fearful storms which have done great damage to property along the river fronts, and in all probability we must have suffered considerably by the rains, but are surprised that very few reports of damage have reached us up to the present time. We had expected many and serious ones."

Too much rain in the Mississippi valley, too little on the Atlantic coast.

THE next two weeks is likely to make or break the onion set crop of the country.

VISITED CHICAGO: Robert Livingston and Thos. Ludwig, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, Ohio.

CRENSHAW BROS., Tampa Fla., have just moved into a new building erected especially for the seed business.

D. M. FERRY, Jr., is with Lem W. Bowen, visiting European seed growers. Young Mr. Ferry is now actively identified with the business.

REPORTS covering the pea growing sections of Wisconsin show the growing crops to be in very good shape, notwithstanding the heavy rains.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a circular to refute the popular belief that the "cabbage snake," or hair-worm, is poisonous. The statement is made that the cabbage-growing industry has suffered severely from this fallacy.

JUDGING from the reports of the travelers, there is yet in the hands of the smaller seed merchants throughout the country a considerable overplus of standard stocks.

REPORTS from California growers are very discouraging as to the prospect for onion seed. One large operator suggests one-third of a crop as the probable harvest.

IN Michigan but few beans had been planted previous to the flooding rains reported in this column last week, so that if conditions become favorable for immediate seeding no special damage will have resulted.

D. H. GILBERT, Monticello, Fla., writes under date of June 9: "There is a large acreage of water melons and, with the exception of a very few sorts, we will have a good yield. Cantelope is doing well, but the acreage is short. Egg plant is also doing well."

H. W. BUCKBEE, Rockford, Ill., has bought a new saddle horse from a Mexican mail order man named Wild Bill and the local newspaper gives up half a column to an account of the fun there will be when the seedsman introduces his steed to the local puff wagons.

THE Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., says that "the season's seed business has been very satisfactory. Both the mail trade and home retail trade have been above the average. We presume the prosperous times has much to do with it. Everybody at work means money to spend for seeds, plants, and, in fact, everything in our line."

From the Indiana onion marsh district, under date of June 12, a correspondent writes as follows: "We are having an awful time. We have had such heavy rains that fully one-half of the onion crop is destroyed and the weeds are fierce. We are weeding and ditching between showers. Some onion fields this morning were from six inches to two feet under water. I sowed what seed I could get but had to let some ground go. We are badly in need of help for weeding."

THIS appears to be, indeed, the young man's day in the seed trade.

THE headquarters of the Seed Trade Association next week will be at the Crossman House, Alexandria Bay, N. Y. Rates will be $3 to $4.50 per day.

SUTTON & SONS, the English seedsmen, have purchased a new forcing cucumber named Delicacy, on the Telegraph order, but more prolific and of better quality.

THE past week there has been inquiry at Chicago for pickling cucumber. The packers had made practically no growing contract but at this late date seem to have decided to contract for a small crop, there having been practically nothing planted.

FRENCH SEED CROPS.

Writing under date of May 25, a correspondent of the Horticultural Advertiser writes as follows of seed crop prospects in France:

We are now very busy with the sowing of annual varieties and transplanting of bi-annual varieties of seeds. Leeks, onions, radishes, and lettuces were sown some time ago under very good conditions, and most of them are doing well now. Only those kind of radishes which were sown a bit late have suffered on account of heavy rains which we had lately, and made the soil very rough and hard.

I may also mention the difficulty which we had in placing our contracts for radishes this season. The big prices obtained last season for mangolds have encouraged our growers in growing more mangolds this year than usual, so that radishes have been somewhat set aside. If it were not for the large quantity of radish seeds carried over from these last years by most firms, no doubt such a thing would have affected prices for next season. Radishes and lettuces are now being transplanted under most favorable weather conditions.

Bi-annual plants have suffered a little from the very cold weather we had for a few days last winter, and we lately feared that cabbages, turnips, swedes, etc., would be but a poor crop. However, the conditions of these have improved these last few weeks, so that a better crop is expected.

A great point with us is the tremendous difficulty we again find in growing dwarf and runner beans. On account of the bad seasons we had these last years for beans, growers will not touch them any more at any price. Well, this year we find the same evil again, and I believe I am not wrong in saying that beans will fetch high prices next season again. Butter beans especially, we find impossible to grow; and as these varieties were already very dear last year, no doubt they will stand very high again next season.

A great cause of anxiety for the seed growers and merchants will be the onions and leeks. These varieties reached last year such a high price as had not been heard of for years. Now on account of big prices also obtained by the dry onions, a very few have been put in earth for seeds; under such circumstances, our friends will easily realize what the market will be next season. To give you an idea of prices, I lately saw here a big grower of onion seeds, who assured me he had lately refused a large order of White Spanish onion seeds at the price of three shillings per pound for 1905 crop.

Our friends will have to look sharp at the stocks of onions offered now at low prices, as no doubt they are mostly old seeds. Last year's seeds were very good growth, but it was shocking to see the poor stocks sent out by many a firm, who took a large profit in mixing up the new seeds with the tremendous quantity of old onion seeds left over for a few years. I feel certain the same trick will be repeated again next season, but on a smaller scale, as most of the old stocks were sold out last season.

Mangolds, namely half sugar varieties, sold very well last season; up to present time prospects for next crop are not bad, and prices might fall down very much on account of the tremendous acreage planted.

The weather is cold here for the season, and we are anxiously looking forward for a bright sun and warm weather.

ENGLISH SEED TOPICS.

The following is an extract from a letter by Richard Dean, which appeared in the Horticultural Trade Journal for May 31:

The trade experienced during the last season such an extraordinary demand for mangel seeds that practically every house will be cleared of stock when sowing is completed. Thus, the supply of seeds for next season depends entirely upon plants, which look healthy on the whole at present, but, as the prospective crop is subject to damage in hot, dry seasons, such as that of last year, there is a natural uncertainty attending the crop. In such a hot season the black aphis attacks both mangel and beet; they cluster on the stems of the plants when in bloom, and apparently suck up their life-blood. The result is, many of the seeds are unmature, and at cleaning time these seeds, being light, are blown out by the winnowing machine. Prices of mangel seeds rule high this season; indeed, any stocks of high quality for this month's sowing fetch greatly advanced prices. The last ten days of July are regarded as a critical time for the mangel crops.

On account of the hot and dry time of last summer, which lasted up to the end of September, sowings of stock seeds of swedes and turnips could not be made until late, and many plants showed signs of imperfect development, and in the case of the plants which stood the winter pretty well, quite an epidemic of canker set in. A dripping June is more strictly a good time for swedes and turnips than for any other crops.

The early varieties of turnips have responded very badly to the calls of nature, and imperfect development rules; the forcing weather in the spring was the main cause. There is a decidedly better promise of crop in the case of the hardy field varieties.

Brassicas are generally affected in much the same way as the turnips. These are sown for seeding any time between the middle of March and the end of May. When the time came for the plants to make a good growth, many of them wilted away. Cabbages are running to seed more uniformly than has been known for years, and they start much more quickly in poor than in good holding land, having greater supplies of plant food. What plants there are standing give good promise of crop, but there is generally a thinness of plantation; vermin and birds have also taken their toll of plants.

Parsley plants standing for seed look very well so far, and the deep rooting character of the parsley makes it to a great extent independent of drought.

Parsnip and carrots may be bracketed together, as so far the promise of good crops is decidedly favorable.

Onion is a more difficult crop to deal with. The trade experienced in the past season an unprecedented demand for onion seeds and at the same time there was a scarcity. One result has been that onion bulbs realized two and three times more than their normal value. No stocks of seeds have been held over, the acreage of bulbs planted out for seed is very small, and in view of a scarcity prices are expected to rule high. Year by year we become more and more dependent upon the foreigner for a supply of onion seeds.

The supply of salad radishes is very limited this season. Growers had the advantage of an ideal time in which to prepare the beds; indeed, they have been scarcely so well favored in this respect for years past. But generally the crops have been practically ruined by insects. Cases have been mentioned in which whole beds have been denuded of plants. The insect attack set in just before Easter, and the mischief was done during a spell of strong northwesterly winds.

So far the pea crops look promising, but a drenching rain is highly desirable, and if it does not come soon the early varieties are likely to suffer. It can be noticed as one of the developments of the pea trade that the dwarf dark green wrinkled varieties have attained to great popularity. One advantage of this type of dark pod is that the pods do not take on the old appearance that the pale podded types so quickly do, and they retain their cooking quality longer. Glory of Devon is a pea which has come with a great reputation; it has been described as "Veitch's Perfection 100 times improved." It grows to a height of four feet. The trade done in this type of pea is bounded by the supply; the trade can never get enough to supply orders in full.

So far the promise of flower seeds is good, but those seeds on early dry soils need rain. We seem to be depending more and more upon the foreigner for the popular supply of flower seeds. The novelty of the year is Nicotiana Sanderae, which is in great demand. Gladys Unwin will become popular among sweet peas.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Meeting of State Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Indiana State Society of Florists was held at Cedar Springs, O., on June 6. There was a good attendance, fifteen members going over from this city and being joined by eight others at Richmond. The party was met at Grave's greenhouses by V. D. Grave, Fred Lemon, Geo. R. Gause, John Evans and Geo. Fulle, who conducted the visitors over the establishment, where everything was in fine order. The carnation houses were a great surprise to all, as no one expected to see such fine stock so late in the season. From the Grave place the party went over to Geo. R. Gause's, opposite the beautiful Earlham cemetery, which showed the effects of a good spring trade. Mr. Gause says it was a hard job to hold onto enough plants for stock. From there the party boarded a street car for the city, and, on invitation of The E. G. Hill Co. continued the trip to Cedar Springs, some five miles out of the city, and took dinner. While waiting for the car, Mr. Evans showed with pride Richmond's new federal building, which is a beauty. The parade which John got on short notice was a great success, but next time he promises the band will be in line. On the way to the Springs the party was joined by Joe Hill, Edward Ruch and J. M. Gift and on arrival were taken at once to dinner, which was duly appreciated by the crowd of hungry florists.

After dinner the monthly meeting was called to order and adjourned till July. Bowling was then indulged in for two hours, John Evans and Fred Huckriede choosing sides. The Richmond Challengers defeated the Indianapolis Champions after three very exciting games. No doubt both teams will be heard from in the future as judging by the scores it seems a good many "will be" stars are still in the woods.

On the return trip the party stopped off at the Hill place and from what could be seen, or rather not seen, they are suffering from the same complaint as Mr. Gause, too much spring trade. It is a mighty good complaint to have. Mr. Evans escorted the party to where the Challenge is made, and we were shown just how it is done. By that time it was getting late and the Richmond florists invited the party to supper at the Arlington and here again the boys proceeded to make things vanish as only a lot of hard working florists can do. At 7:30 a car was taken for the return trip to Indianapolis, after a most pleasant day. The thanks of the entire party were given the Richmond boys for the royal treatment received. When at Cedar Springs drink Navajo water. When at the E. G. Hill place drink Glen Miller water. If you don't see it, ask for it, it's fine. When in Richmond drink anything you like; there's plenty of it.

The city florists who made the trip were F. Huckriede, E. A. Nelson, I. Bertermann, F. Harritt, F. Sydney Smith, John Hartje, John Grande, Carl Glaubke, H. Shilling, Ernest Huckriede, M. Nelson, Wm. Hack, J. B. Hatfield, Carl Sonnenschmidt and Alvin Schreiber. Since their return many more have been wishing they had gone, too.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business with the local florists the past week was fairly good, with weddings, school commencements and funerals. The school board again announced that no flowers should be sent to commencement exercises and this, of course, had a disastrous effect on the trade, still quite a lot of work was made up and sent to the homes of the graduates. In the last few days of the week the hot weather completely demoralized the cut flower trade and stock became quite plentiful again at the wholesale houses, especially in roses and carnations, but quality of both of these is not very good, roses being somewhat off in color and carnations are small. Prices have also dropped a few cents again on all stock.

Sweet peas have been a glut the past week. These are selling very cheap in thousand lots. Tracy and Blanche Ferry have the best call. White and lavender, too, are very much used in funeral work.

Lily of the valley had a big call last week, owing to so many weddings taking place. A. Berdan, of Kirkwood, Mo., sends in a fine lot each day. Candidum lilies are arriving in large lots, and bring from $6 to $8 per hundred stalks. Cornflowers and Jacqueminot roses are expected in this week. Everything in the "green" line is plentiful.

Club Meeting.

One of those pleasant outdoor gatherings of the local club took place June 8 at John Steidle's place in Central, Mo. This meeting was attended by thirty-three members and most of them were accompanied by their ladies, as per the request of Mrs. Steidle. The members took the one o'clock car, which took us to where Brother Steidle was in waiting with conveyances and we were taken to his home, which was two miles away.

After an inspection tour through this well kept place, where nothing but fancy stock grows, the meeting was called to order under two large shade trees in the rear of the greenhouses. Five new members were elected, as follows: George Angermueller, wholesaler; Henry Lohrenz, retailer; Ed. Hicks, Jr., and Henry Aue, growers, all of St. Louis, and H. F. Foreman, grower, of Louisiana, Mo. The trustees were instructed to arrange for a picnic the latter part of July. J. J. Beneke was appointed to act as a committee of one on transportation to the S. A. F. convention.

The question of incorporating the club came up and brought out a great discussion. It was finally left to a committee of two, J. F. Ammann and J. W. Dunford, to report at the next meeting. Otto Koenig, chairman of the show committee, made a report, after which the club adjourned to meet on July 13, when the nomination of officers takes place.

After adjournment a fine lunch was spread on the lawn near the residence, at which nearly sixty were seated. After drinking the health of Mr. and Mrs. Steidle, and also to the speedy return of our brothers, F. C. Weber and Theo. Miller, who are now in foreign lands, the president called on a few members to make short talks.

After lunch the members were invited by A. Jablonsky to visit his place, only a hundred feet away, where he is just finishing the houses, which contain 25,000 feet of glass for roses and carnations. They are being built by Mr. Thompson and contain the Wolf improved cable ventilating apparatus. Returning to Mr. Steidle's place, the gathering started for home and all express themselves as never having spent a more enjoyable time. The ladies, too, are loud in their praise of the hospitality of Mrs. Steidle. The ladies present were Mesdames Meinhardt, Bentzen, Schray, Berning, Beneke, Scott, Weber, Jablonsky, Guy, Fehr, Juengel, Koenig, Klockenkemper, Fillmore, Steidle and Misses M. and L. Meinhardt and Clara Felwanch.

Various Notes.

Wm. Meyer, of Kirkwood, bought the entire outfit of Max Herzog, at Gratiot, and has started to remove the houses, boiler and plants to his place.

Max Herzog has bought a fine residence on Arsenal street, in South St. Louis, where he will make his home.

Arthur Ellison and his father have returned from their trip south. Arthur says they had a good time, but he found no bowling alleys to practice on while away. He will start Monday night to get in trim for Washington.

Charles Schoenele says the report of his leaving bachelorhood was a little premature. He took the joke good naturedly and his many friends in the trade had a good deal of sport at his expense.

The florists on Grand avenue and Olive street had quite a busy week with school work. Among them are Geo. Waldbart, Ellison Floral Co., Mrs. M. Ayers, Mary Ostertag and Miss Newman.

The picnic committee, Messrs. Guy, Ammann and Fillmore, will be pleased for any suggestions from any of the members which will make the outing one of the best ever given by the club. Suggestions must be in before the next meeting of the club, July 13, as the outing will take place a week later.

The bowling club is contemplating a big bowling night on Monday, September 4, at the Palace alleys in honor of two of their members, Messrs. Weber and Miller, on their return home, to which the entire membersip of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be invited for a general good time.

Bowling.

The bowlers met again on Monday night and made the following scores:—

PACIFIC COAST.

BUDDING ROSES.

We are now at the season for budding roses and as this has been a favorable spring for the growth of the various varieties of wild stock used, the stems should be large enough to bud easily. With some of the varieties, however, there may be difficulty in procuring buds for the same reason, and it may be a couple of weeks before well ripened scions can be depended upon. This is particularly noticeable with some of the fast-growing climbers, as well as with a few varieties like Niphetos and Marechal Niel, which seem to have no dormant season during the summer months.

On the Pacific coast the larger rose growers have discarded almost all the wild stocks that succeed well in both the east and Europe, except Manetti, and even this stock is not used as extensively as formerly. None of the briar roses are planted at all for this purpose, as it has been thoroughly demonstrated that our long periods of summer dryness are not suited to the requirements of any of the foreign rose stocks.

We have the native Castilian rose in California, which was also formerly used to a considerable extent, but owing to the fact that it is difficult to root and does not make a large stem, we were compelled to discard it. This rose had many points in its favor. It is very long-lived, makes a perfect union with the scion and was suited to the majority of roses.

Manetti, of which I spoke, is used only for some hybrids and Niphetos, a variety that does not succeed as well on anything else. It is inclined to sucker, but is very tenacious of life, although unsuited to the majority of our most popular varieties.

Baltimore Belle has been in great favor for a number of years, especially as a stock on which to grow teas or climbers, but is not suitable for but a few hybrid varieties. It is only used, however, for the bush form of roses and it has proven itself entirely unfitted as a stock for standard or tree roses, the objection to it being that it scalds badly in the sun and has a tremendous tendency to sucker, both from the collar and the roots.

Prairie Queen suits a few varieties, but it cannot be relied on to prove long-lived and roses budded on it seem to do well for a season or two, but eventually they die out. Gloire de Rosamond is still used for a few varieties of standards and makes a good stock.

The best all-round wild stock, however, is De la Grifferie. This has been actively used here for about fifteen years, and has proven satisfactory. It makes plenty of roots, a heavy stem, but few thorns and does not sucker much from the roots. The only objection to it is that its growing season is shorter than the other sorts I have mentioned, and it must be taken just at the proper time to have the bark lift right. From 10,000 to 12,000 bush roses are grown on an acre of ground here and about half that quantity of standard or tree roses, and this branch of the nursery business has proven among the best paying in California in recent years. SEATTLE, WASH.

Jottings of Interest.

The volume of business of the Seattle Florists' Association has increased so much that at the regular monthly meeting held on Tuesday, June 6, it was decided to meet twice a month, on the first and third Tuesdays. J. J. Bonnell was to have read a paper, "The Growing of Outdoor Roses for Market," but on account of so much time being taken up with the preliminary schedule for the chrysanthemum show it was held over for two weeks. Mr. Bonnell supplies the Seattle market with fine, long-stemmed Ulrich Brunners all summer and fall and they are sold in the stores for American Beauties. There is an opening here for some one to grow Beauties. A few come from California, but none of the local growers have them in quantity.

I think the honor of being the farthest greenhouse north belongs to the small one in Nome, Alaska, on the edge of the Arctic circle, where in winter there are only two hours of grey daylight. It is about 20x50 feet and is heated from the exhaust steam from the electric light plant. Part of it is used as a chicken house. The prices obtained are startling. Eggs, $4 per dozen; lettuce, 25 cents per leaf; radishes, 10 cents each.

A good business is done by the flower stores in steamer trade for Alaska, and the call is for Dorothy carnations, which seem to last the best and arrive in good shape at Nome after a twelve days' voyage.

Ed. Marriott and wife accompanied Al Peterson and family on their European trip.

E. Donaghue, lately employed in McCoy's flower store, has gone to Nome, Alaska, to get a glimpse of the midnight sun.

Mr. Klehm of Olympia, Wash., was a visitor Monday, looking up material for a house 20x150 feet.

Chris. Jackomson is building two houses 20x100 at South Seattle.

W. A. Brown, our fruit inspector, has bought two greenhouses from the city dads and is rebuilding them at Green Lake. They will be about 16x100 feet each, with concrete walls.

The Puget Sound Nursery & Seed Co. has taken a novel way of starting greenhouse work. They recently bought a tract of twenty-six acres at Renton Junction, with considerable timber on it. A sawmill has been put up and they are hard at work sawing out the lumber needed for a large range of glass. They will also move the eight houses they have on Taylor avenue to their new location. A. PORTLAND, ORE.

The Lewis and Clark Exposition became a reality when, on June 1, it was opened with pomp and all due ceremony and an attendance of 40,000. It was a memorable day in the history of the city, business being practically suspended to allow all citizens to participate in the great event.

On June 3 the annual flower show of the Portland Rose Society took place in Festival Hall on the fair grounds. Heretofore amateurs only have interested themselves in these annual shows, but this year the society and exposition officials induced the florists to make displays by offering Lewis and Clark medals. The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion, under the supervision of George Otten, who deserves all the credit given him by the local press. The decorative material consisted of huckleberry and briar rose branches studded lavishly with garden roses. Cool, damp weather prevailed and, while favorable for the flowers, affected the attendance somewhat. Nevertheless, society people were out in force and showed great appreciation. The professional displays were staged on a large scale, consisting of both cut flowers and plants and were the center of attraction.

The prizes were awarded as follows: First, gold medal, to Clarke Bros.; second, silver medal, Martin & Forbes; third, bronze medal, Geo. Otten; fourth, honorable mention, F. H. Lind. In the amateur class F. V. Holman received first prize, Fred Mathews second, Mrs. Herbert Holman third, Mrs. G. D. Greene fourth. The rivalry among the amateurs was keen, there being a number of fine exhibits in that class. The gold medal display of Clarke Bros. is shown in the illustration on page 187 of this issue. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The last of our big days are over for a while, and we can make a recapitulation with safety. Speaking from the standpoint of the retailer, business this season has been rather peculiar. About the same amount of stock has been handled, but, owing to the continued spells of freaky weather, it has been handed to us in fits and starts. The prices realized for the most part have been up to those of former seasons, and the profits made by the retailers will average as good as usual. With many of the larger growers poor crops have been the rule and this has been especially noticeable since the end of March. Even at this time carnations are scarce, and really good roses are hard to procure. I think this is principally due to the extraordinary hot weather we had during March, when all the flowers that usually mature in April and May flowered weeks ahead of time. With other classes of stock there has been better success. Lilies were plentiful at Easter, and have been so ever since. Bulbous stock of all kinds was in good supply and sold well. Hardy outside stock is now being received in good quantities and helps in the windows.

There are many more growers this year than last, but the demand seems to keep pace with the supply, and good stock can easily be disposed of. We are now up to our summer dullness and save for a few wedding and funeral orders there is absolutely nothing doing. We have had considerable work for the various school commencements but that is all over for six months to come.

Various Notes.

The marriage of Miss Esther Macdonald and Fred Seulberger, horticultural commissioner of Alameda county, was solemnized in Oakland on Tuesday of last week.

The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, is putting glass on two new carnation houses. Their stock throughout looks remarkably well.

Luther Burbank has promised something startling in the line of quick-growing walnut trees.

The California glass manufacturers are offering a good quality of greenhouse glass this season which is being used by many of the coast growers in preference to the imported or eastern article. Heretofore the local glass has been of poor color and did not sell well, but that trouble has been overcome and the glass that is now made here seems to suit the growers in quality and price.

The California State Floral Society has appointed the various committees and made arrangements for the fall exhibits to be held in the Ferry building next October.

Mrs. E. A. Kersey, of Haywards, has offered her stock of narcissus and daffodil bulbs for sale. She has one of the most extensive fields on the coast.

Miss Wallenberg, of Sutter street, had a decoration on Wednesday last in which she used 200 dozens of Estelle carnations.

The extensive business of the late M. Lynch, of Menlo Park, will be carried on in future under the direction of his widow and sons. G.

DES MOINES, IA.

The unsecured creditors of W. L. Morris are dissatisfied with the course affairs are taking in his bankruptcy affairs and propose to contest the validity of a chattel mortgage representing the claim of a Chicago creditor, which it is asserted was given for the purpose of preferring that creditor as against the others. It is asserted by some of the unsecured creditors that if things take the course now in prospect the assets will be bid in for the amount of the secured claims, which will result in a total loss for all others, but this is wholly dependent upon there being no other bidder at the approaching public sale. Any creditor is at liberty to drum up a buyer. There should be a good profit in the purchase at a figure considerably above the total of secured claims.

NEW ORLEANS.

At the Metairie Ridge Nurseries, Harry Papworth has the material on the ground for the largest range of cut flower houses in this vicinity. New Orleans has looked to the north for its cut flower supplies, but Mr. Papworth will see what can be done toward producing stock here at home. While at Chicago early in the spring he placed an order with the Moninger Company for material for six houses, 27x264 feet, which will be hastened to completion and planted with roses, carnations, etc. If this range of houses proves profitable it will be followed by others under Mr. Papworth's management, and his example will no doubt be followed by other local growers.

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—In the grounds of the Idlewild Floral Co. is a Crimson Rambler that will take first prize in any contest. The bush covers a space perhaps ten feet square; is from one stem; spreads and falls gracefully over a wooden arbor placed for its support and again reaches the ground. The blossoms cluster together like grapes and it is estimated that the one bush contains more than 5,000 trusses of flowers. It can be seen for blocks.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E W Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14-17, 1905.

THE European nurserymen say that trade conditions are more active in America than in any other country in which they have connections.

A LOCAL Massachusetts nurseryman says that this spring pear trees could scarcely be given away, apple trees were in good demand and of peach trees he could not get enough.

THIS spring a number of nurseries made their first plantings of hardy herbaceous stock. Growers who understand handling this class of material are reported in demand.

GEO. T. POWELL contributed a half-page illustrated article on tree-planting to the New York Sun of Sunday, June 4, in which he discoursed interestingly on our best native sorts.

FOR lawn planting the imported cut-leaved, purple-leaved and weeping beeches make beautiful trees. They should be planted as single specimens and where they have an abundance of room.

IN spite of recent reports of damage by frost, the Georgia peach growers are preparing to harvest a crop many trainloads heavier than that of last year. And still the call for peach trees is unabated.

WEST BADEN, IND., June 14.—The annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen opened here this morning and long before the call to order it was demonstrated that the activity of the program committee had borne fruit in an attendance which exceeds previous records. Every section of the country is represented. It has been a successful season for everyone and there is a general feeling of satisfaction and confidence which is reflected in the interchange of orders for stock as well as on the convention floor. The program will be carried out with few changes but it will take a rigid adherence to the time schedule.

TO GROW ROSES.

The following is from the Fulton, Ky., Leader of June 10:

A vast flower garden of 3,000 acres is what Ohio horticulturists propose to establish in the delta section of Mississippi. They propose to have a very large rose farm and ship roses and cuttings to every part of the United States. During the last week 3,000 acres of land in Tallahatchie county, Mississippi, near Tutwiler, on the Lake Cormorant branch of the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad, have been purchased. The promoters of the scheme are John M. Good, L. Verney, C. T. Ridgely, Edwin S. Houck, C. W. Welsh and L. P. Jop, all of them being from Springfield, O.

Memphis has been decided upon as the distributing center. Arrangements will soon be made for early planting in the spring. The first season's cuttings will be planted for the following season's marketing.

H. R. COTTA, the Rockford, Ill., nurseryman, recently fell down an areaway while doing some planting and tore the muscles of one leg.

THE Pacific coast nurserymen hold their annual convention in June, the Texas men in July, and the southeastern growers meet at Asheville in August.

E. Y. TEAS is said to be the oldest nurseryman in Indiana, and he is certainly one of the oldest in the country, for he began in 1847. At present he confines himself to perennials and bulbous plants.

IT is feared that the poor results with the southern strawberry crop will have effect on next season's business in strawberry plants, though the growers lay much of the blame for lost shipments upon the refrigerator car lines.

THE European horticultural publications have let up on the "ornamental horticulturists" appendage to the S. A. F. to take a few cracks at the American characteristic as they see it shown in the time allowances for the nurserymen's convention this week. This is from the Gardeners' Magazine: "The American Association of Nurserymen appreciates the value of time, and the proceedings at its thirtieth annual convention are arranged to the minute. Reports of various committees are to occupy not more than five minutes, papers vary from fifteen minutes to an hour, and discussion is limited to ten or fifteen minutes. Even the election of state vice-presidents is to be concluded in five minutes. No less than eighteen papers are to be read and discussed. If our own Tuesday meetings could be scheduled and timed on some such lines, some folks we know would possibly find time for lunch."

Death of W. S. Davis.

The following account of the life and death of Mr. Davis is taken from the local newspaper and serves to show the esteem in which he was held in his community:

On the morning of May 25 the friends and relatives of W. S. Davis were shocked by the news of his sudden death. Mr. Davis had not been well a few days before, but retired on Wednesday night in apparently his usual health. Between 3 and 4 o'clock the little daughter, who is only twelve years of age, was awakened by moanings coming from her father's room. She fearlessly arose and hastened to his bedside. With a child's tenderness she tried to arouse him. Failing to do so, she performed a most remarkable act for a child, she ran to the telephone and summoned the cook to her assistance and also Dr. Hackley, who resides in the town. The cook being unable to bring to sense the spirit that was then struggling with death, this brave and devoted little daughter ran for her grandfather, A. B. Davis, whose residence is about twenty yards distant. When she returned with him death had closed his icy fingers about the struggling form and all was still. God had claimed his own.

On Wednesday morning, being assured by her husband that he had entirely recovered from the slight disability of a few days before, Mrs. Davis went with some friends to Washington. She returned on the first train Thursday in response to a telegram to find the sad news of her husband's death awaiting her.

W. S. Davis, son of A. Boone and Susanna S. Davis, was born Sptember 3, 1867, at the home where he spent his short life of nearly thirty-eight years. While yet a boy he showed a great love for flowers and the work in his father's greenhouse. This love, accompanied by a rare talent, characterized his life and brought him almost unparalleled success as a florist and specialist in carnations.

In October, 1891, he was married to Miss Lillian Simpson, of North Fork, and after fourteen years of happy, prosperous married life, she, with one daughter of twelve years, is left to mourn her great loss amid the deep sympathy of many friends.

The first dream of his boyhood was pretty flowers—the last act of his life, so far as is known, was to prepare two large bonquets, as a personal donation, to be strewn upon the graves of the Confederate dead in the cemetery at Leesburg.

From a small beginning he developed one of the largest retail trades in flowers in the United States, extending into every state and territory, and even into foreign countries. Each year he added new greenhouses, but finally the trade became burdensome to him, on account of the difficulty of securing suitable labor, and he disposed of the foreign retail business and in recent years had devoted all of his energies to the growing of carnations for the wholesale markets, and was known to floral circles as a leader in producing these sweetly-scented flowers. For many months past every carnation that entered the White House was grown by W. S. Davis. He had not only improved many of the old varieties, but had produced many new ones.

As a citizen he was honored and respected by all who knew him. He was one of those quiet, unobtrusive, temperate-in-all-things gentlemen whom you seldom meet. The county, as a whole, will regret his death.

On Friday afternoon the funeral services were held at Friends' Meeting House, Lincoln, the deceased having been a member of the Society of Friends. Among the flowers, so appropriately laid upon the grave, was a beautiful wreath of red carnations, the Red Sport of Macee, which variety was this season distributed to the trade by Mr. Davis.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business for the past week has been practically at the summer level. With the exception of a few commencements and funeral work, everything is quiet. Stock of all kinds seems very poor and scarce. The weather has been very cool for this season of the year, which causes quite a lot of outdoor spring stock to still hang on.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held on June 6 with over half the members present, quite a showing. The various committees all report progress. Superintendent Cooke reports that the exhibition spaces are being rapidly taken up but from present indications some may be left. The entertainment committee offered quite a few suggestions for various trips for the future action of the club.

Capt. Ernest, of the bowling club, is getting his team in shape for weekly practice. Capt. Kramer, of the ladies' team, is getting his team in shape, having practice games twice a week. He has also added several prizes to the ladies' list.

Various Notes.

F. H. Kramer is breaking ground for a new carnation house 35x300 feet, even span, to be devoted mostly to his new seedling, the F. H. Kramer, and Lawson.

Outdoor carnations in general are doing nicely. The season has been very good. Quite a few are getting ready for planting young rose stock.

A. Gude & Bro. were worked hard for the funeral of Mr. Wilkins, editor of the Washington Post. The most notable design, which did the firm credit, was the front page of the Post, representing the full page of a newspaper.

ROSES for Immediate Effect

Haven't you in your trade a call for large, strong Rose plants, such as will give immediate results? We have prepared for June planting a stock of strong two-year-old plants, all on own roots, except where noted and while they last will close them out at the extremely low price of $15.00 per 100; 25 or more at 100 rate; no charge for packing. These Roses can be placed in the open ground during this month and will give a profusion of flowers throughout the entire growing season. They are worth just twice as much as we are asking for them, and they can be depended upon to produce the goods. They are well foliaged, have strong working roots and are now in 4 and 5-inch pots.

The Collection Includes a Wide Range of Varieties and Colors, Teas and Hybrid Teas

Various Jottings.

There are many social events on the program, but few of much magnitude, yet flowers of good quality are very well cleaned up. W. J. Palmer & Son are cutting large quantities of most excellent roses and carnations and Charles Guenther, of Hamburg, is sending in his usual fine roses. Wise Bros., of East Aurora, are better than ever on high class carnations. William Ehmann, of Corfu, has both quantity and quality to boast of in carnations. The fact is the weather has been so cool and with so little sun that the two leading flowers are just about as fine in quality as they were in February. It has been so cool and so many dull, wet days that outdoor flowers are later than we ever remember. About the Fourth of July our peonies will be in bloom, we hope. For the same reason the flower gardening business will be prolonged for another week or two. We have often gloried in the fact that we live where an occasional rain tempers the heat of summer. After the past four years we are quite willing to try a season of Arizona summer.

With all this grumbling, never did our city look more beautiful. The elm and maple, tulip, magnolia and salisburia never unfurled their leaves with greater beauty. The flowering shrubs, the honeysuckle and salisburia on the verandas and, above all, the simple beauty of the well kept lawns make the greater part of our city a vast garden where the buildings are only incidental. Our citizens have decorated their homes with veranda boxes, vases of flowering plants and flower beds about as usual, so altogether it is a fair city in which to dwell and when Rojestvensky is well enough I would advise him to convalesce on upper Delaware avenue.

We are very sorry to report that our active friend, Louis H. Neubeck, was stricken down with sciatic rheumatism just at the beginning of the busy season. This was hard on Louis, but fortunately he has good help. We hope for his speedy recovery.

It would have pleased Phil Hauswirth and George Asmus to have seen a beautiful horse shoe of Liberty roses thrown over the neck of Oxford, the winner of the Buffalo Derby on Saturday last. We are to be cursed, with the exception of two days in July, with this seductive sport away into September. How fortunate that the Buffalo florists are a steady going, conservative lot and horticulturally inclined in their recreations.

W. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The regular meeting of the Hartford Florists' Club took place on Friday evening, June 9, and there was a large attendance.

Mr. Wirth, chairman of the committee on window boxes, recently appointed by President Huss, submitted a report which appears in this issue. It shows how thoroughly the committee performed its task and they were awarded a unanimous vote of thanks. It was the sense of the meeting that if a matter so important were thoroughly taken up by the florists' clubs and horticultural societies of the country as a whole, a permanent impetus would be given to this most important subject, window, porch and veranda gardening would become an established fact all over our broad land, and, incidentally, the commercial man would annually add many shekels to his bank account. "'Tis a great and good subject, gentlemen; push it along."

Our club "poet," who has the happy faculty of adding a dash of color to every important club event, with a flash of his own peculiar genius, was particularly in evidence at this meeting. The following effusion is his contribution to the window box question and he hopes it will have the effect of fixing a great subject firmly in the public eye:

O golden years, advance, advance!
O years of regal work and thought,
Until the all-pervading window box
To every Hartford home be brought.

The "poet" carefully explained that he did not wish to infer that Hartford should go it alone in this matter but, as the acknowledged gem of eastern cities, she should be content to be the leader in this great movement and simply show them the way.

Secretary Ruedlinger read an interesting paper on "Insect Enemies and their Antidotes which Interested our Forefathers." The secretary is a recognized authority on all fungi and insect pests and he easily added to his reputation when he described in detail the various brands of bug and their preventives, which have been in vogue from 250 years ago down to the present time. He received a hearty vote of thanks and the assurance of the meeting that his own bug destructors were vastly superior to the old formulæ.

Arrangements were made for the reception of the executive committee of the American Rose Society which meets in Hartford on June 19.

On account of the impending vacation season, the club adjourned as a body until the first Friday in September.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Trade during Memorial week was, from all reports, away above the average, every one being sold out and turning down orders early in the week. The demand from out-of-town customers showed that this condition was not local. There were good cuts of both roses and carnations, but the demand was far in excess of the supply; in fact, the cut was usually sold before it was taken.

The trade in bedding stock, baskets and window boxes was enormous and kept the plantsmen hustling.

The United States Cut Flower Co. did a big business and during the last few days had to turn all orders away, having their book full. They report the demand for American Beauties and other roses as being on the increase and prices steady. Planting is now being proceeded with and will be practically over as far as roses are concerned by July 4. The Richmond rose will be planted here in large quantity. Killarney will also get a trial. R.

CADILLAC, MICH.

Decoration day comes about two weeks too early for this part of the state. Outdoor flowers were not in evidence and a heavy call was made upon greenhouses, which were unable to supply the demand. Lilacs were only commencing to bloom, while the spiræas were a week later in showing color, and snowballs had not the least resemblance to snow. Plants sold freely, and a number of fine beds were planted in the cemetery, which is fast becoming a pretty spot. Maple Hill cemetery is situated on a hill overlooking the lake, and things planted there are quite free from our late spring frosts, as well as our early fall frosts. Copious spring rains have been welcomed by some, but have been pronounced excessive by many. As a result everything is fresh and active in vegetation. Our soil is light and will stand much wetting.

There is good fishing in close proximity, and when the busy season is past there are plenty of opportunities for recreation hereabouts. A. W. T.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower business had its ups and downs the past week; some days were fair, but most of the week was badly off. Saturday the Greeks had carnations on the street stands, two dozen for 25 cents. Good roses were not plentiful, as some of the growers are throwing out stock for getting ready for replanting.

Various Notes.

Rumor has it that the syndicate formed to buy the Sidney Gibbs property is composed of undertakers mostly.

Casper Limbach, the glass man, who supplies most of the growers in this section, will sail for Europe with his family June 20.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met last Tuesday evening and had one of the most pleasant and interesting meetings of the year. Hardy plants and roses were discussed and there was a grand display. Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, sent a lot of hardy pinks, foxgloves, gaillardias, canterbury bells and other things which were very fine. S. J. Wolf, Emsworth, Pa., sent peonies and clematis which were especially fine. Fred Wissenbach, gardener for D. G. Stewart, showed a very large variety, including delphiniums, Iris Sibirica, poppies, funkia, heuchera, centaurea, pentstemon and roses. Fred Burki had peonies in variety. Schenley park greenhouses had specimens of almost everything in bloom at this season, Magnolia glauca, sweet williams, daisies, spiræa and a good collection of roses, including Paul's Carmine Pillar, which was very striking. The club certainly owes much to Supt. Geo. Burke and Foreman John Jones and his park boys for the interest they take in making good exhibits at these meetings.

Thos. Fitzgerald, of Beaver, Pa., sent in a bunch of very fine, large white carnations, a cross between Prosperity and America. This is a fine flower and good stem. If it holds up to what it now is, I believe there will be a future for it.

A transportation committee for the S. A. F. convention at Washington was appointed: F. Burki, chairman; E. C. Reinemann and John Bader.

Jarvis Smith was a visitor and helped bring out a good many interesting points about the various exhibits.

Instead of meeting in July, the club will hold a picnic. The committee appointed to act is H. L. Blind, chairman; F. Burki, and John Bader. Hoo-Hoo.

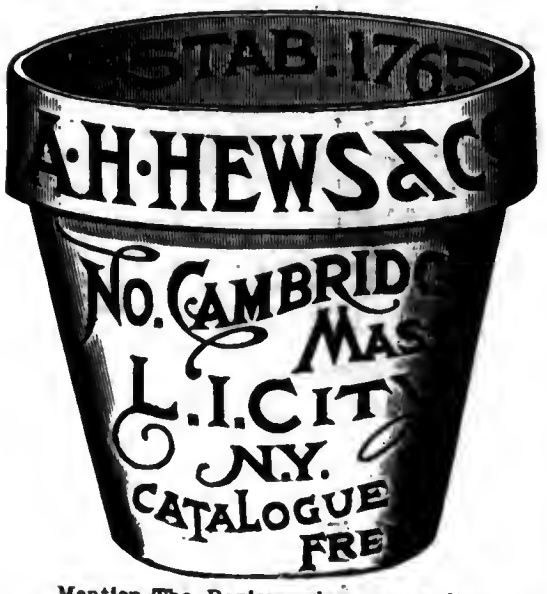
—THE—
WOLF DUMP SIEVE SOIL MACHINE

Pulverizes sods, manure, all kinds of soil, cuts and forces the fibres through the sieve. Dumps the stones out separately. Pays for itself in ten days' use.



THE WOLF IMPROVED PIPE Ventilating Apparatus

is equipped with adjustable roller hangers, circular steel ratchet arms, automatic safety locks which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of adjustable roller hangers and steel ratchet arm, the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive double strength or special fitted pipe is required. Houses 165 ft. long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines, which are furnished with or without pipe shafting. Send for catalogue and references. HUNT'S
Cypress Plant and Tree Tub

Our plant and tree tub is made from the everlasting cypress with which all up-to-date florists are familiar. The merits of this tub are wholly commensurate with the demand for an article which is light, neat and durable. They are made in various sizes. Painted green, or natural wood finish, as preferred. Castings japanned. The feet and bolts for same are packed inside tub to facilitate nesting.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

THE CHICAGO MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the American Peony Society, June 16 and 17, brought together what was undoubtedly the largest showing of cut peonies ever seen at either a European or an American exhibition. The large banquet hall of the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, was chosen for the exhibition and was completely filled. There were a smaller number of exhibitors than had been anticipated, because of the great heat of the few preceding days which had put the flowers of growers in certain sections beyond the exhibition stage, while the western New York growers had nothing yet ready to cut. Notable among those whose absence was felt for the latter reason was Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, who had entered in almost every class, but who did not have anything open enough to show by the day of the exhibition. Nearly all of the stock shown had been in cold storage for a number of days and in some cases quality was not up to the standard of fresh cut stock, but it, nevertheless, made a magnificent showing and served to emphasize one of the valuable cut flower characteristics of the peony.

As compared with the first exhibition of the society, held in New York last year, this show was many times larger and did much to straighten out nomenclature. Two of the smaller exhibits combined were as large as the entire show of last year, while the display of the largest exhibitor was fully twice what was seen at New York. The same method of staging was employed as that at the last convention of the American Carnation Society, the tables being covered with a green cloth which made a much better setting for the flowers than the white covering ordinarily used. The staging was delayed on Friday morning by the non-arrival of the vases which had been arranged for, so that the work was hardly more than begun at the time the show was supposed to have opened. Then, too, the exhibitors were new to the task of staging peonies and it took them longer than it will again to accomplish the same results. Furthermore, the stored stock was dropping more or less and had to be carefully picked over, all of which consumed much time, and it was well into the evening before the show was wholly ready. For this reason the judging was delayed until the morning of the second day.

The general effect of the exhibition was excellent, although the individual exhibits left something to be desired in the matter of arrangement. The absence of the touch of the skilled hands of the retail florist was felt. The peony is too stiff-stemmed a flower to lend itself readily to decorative effects, particularly when a number of flowers are placed in a perfectly straight stone jar. The demonstration of the individual beauty of the flowers was often lacking, but to most of the visitors this was of minor consideration. It was a noteworthy feature that nearly every visitor was traveling up and down the aisles note book in hand. One would have thought that it was an attendance of newspaper reporters from the assiduity with which the visitors were taking notes of the varieties. In this respect the influence of the exhibition will be apparent for many months. The attendance would have been larger and the influence of the show greater had the daily papers been interested.

The Peterson Display.

The largest exhibit, and one of the finest showings of peonies ever staged, was that of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago. Much of their stock had been in storage for a week or more, but other portions were fresh cut the morning of the opening of the exhibition. They were entered in nearly all competitive classes and had one long table of stock for exhibition only. Their vases of white blooms attracted as much attention as anything in the hall. The gentlemen who framed the schedule of premiums had no thought but that Festiva maxima was the pre-eminent white peony and they made a class for 100 blooms limited to that variety. But in the view of many visitors there were two other varieties in the Peterson exhibit which, at least from an exhibition standpoint, outranked Festiva maxima. These were Couronne d'Or and Marie Lemoine. These are not of purest white, and the former has a touch of lemon yellow deep in the center of the flower from which it takes its name, the Crown of Gold. But the color is good nevertheless in both flowers and each is of excellent rounded form. If they possess the attributes required for commercial cut flowers they will be heard from in the wholesale markets in future seasons. Each seems to be a better keeper than Festiva maxima.

There were three notable exhibits staged by Peterson in the class for 100 light pink and in this connection it might be noted that some of the exhibitors adopted the method of putting all the blooms called for by a given class in the schedule into one vase, while others divided the number into two vases, and even three vases in some cases. It all seemed to be according to Hoyle. The Peterson pinks were fifty to a vase. One variety was Livingstone, judged the best pink in the show. Next was Delicatissima, which is just now occupying a conspicuous position in the trade eye. It is, to say the least, very similar to Richardson's Floral Treasure. Then there was Modele de Perfection, which is a large ground flower, with extended guard petals. This is the variety M. Jules Elie in some other exhibits. Another good light pink in the Peterson showing was Pottsii alba, which is almost white but with pink shading. James Kelway and

C. W. Ward, President American Peony Society.

Mme. Calot are also good pinks and Modeste Guerin is another, but several shades deeper in color. Among their reds were Purpurea superba, Felix Crousse and Souv. de Bordeaux. These showed no stamens. They also had a fine lot of Japanese varieties and reds showing yellow stamens.

The Cottage Gardens' Showing.

C. W. Ward, of Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., said that he was by no means pleased with the showing he was able to make, but it was remarkable, nevertheless. When a man travels more than 1,000 miles in the heat of an exceptionally hot week in June and stages more varieties of peonies than any other exhibitor he is accomplishing a considerable task. Mr. Ward has a collection said to be the largest in America and he cut some blooms of most of them and shipped them to Chicago. They came by express in the hot weather ten days before the show and were put into cold storage. Naturally the petals were falling from many sorts when they were unpacked. Could they have been shipped in a refrigerator car they would no doubt have come out much better. Under the circumstances it may be said that they were in excellent shape. However, Mr. Ward found himself confronted with no small task when it came to picking out the good blooms and staging them. By actual count he had 180 varieties and 2,096 blooms to pick over, and they had been cut, tagged and shipped by twos and threes in all stages of development.

His variety M. Jules Elie was one of the finest pinks in the hall and the flowers were in remarkable shape considering what they had undergone. The same might be said of his white, Mont Blanc. In some catalogues this is Alba sulphurea. It is a flower of lemon yellow center with large white guard petals and his vase for exhibition only was in exceptionally good shape. Another of his vases for exhibition contained fifty blooms of Festiva maxima, which went a long way to refute the opinion which some hold that this variety is not a good keeper. Duc de Wellington attracted attention. Mr. Ward says it does not show the yellow center petals when the plants are well established.

There were a number of very excellent light pinks in the Cottage Gardens collection. One of the best of these is Triumphe de Exposition de Lille. Another is Mme. Ducel, which in many respects resembles M. Jules Elie. Another sort of this form in lilac pink is Mons. Boucharlat aine. Octavie Demay is another good light pink. Rosea magna is a fine white tinged with pink. Mme. Forel, glossy pink, was a good one. Carnea elegans and Mme. Calot are well known varieties in the pink class and Sulphurea, white, is in many collections. In reds the collection is strong. One of the best is Admiral Craighton. Dr. Cailott, Victor Hugo, Meissoniere, Pierre Dessert were also good, and included in the list are flowers of every desired form.

Reeves' Red.

The one exhibit which likely attracted more attention than any other was that of E. A. Reeves, of Cleveland, Ohio. He had but two entries, each in the class for best 100 red. The notable exhibit was Grandiflora rubra. He used three pots to contain the 100 blooms and they were a sight. The blooms were not less than six to eight inches in diameter and the stems three to four feet long. The color is not quite as bright a crimson as Richardson's Rubra superba, which constituted his other exhibit. The Grandiflora rubra was not the same as shown under that name by some of the other exhibitors. This variety originated with a Mr. Lee, of Madison, Ohio, who retired from business some years since because of advancing age. He sold his peony collection to Mr. Reeves and this variety was in the lot. It is a splendid thing and nothing else was considered for first premium. They were like a lot of big chrysanthemums and set Elmer Smith wishing he could get the same color in that flower.

Vaughan's Table.

Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., had a table of fresh cut blooms conspicuous in the center of which was the big first premium vase of 100 Festiva maxima. But what was closer scanned was a vase of a half dozen blooms labeled Mme. Bollet but which did not correspond to that variety in other collections. Mr. Wilson said that in his field notes he put an interrogation point after the name and described it as the pink Festiva maxima. It corresponded to Louise de Estrees in Mr. Ward's exhibit except that it was much larger. It is an odd light shade between pink and lilac, not far from the color of an excellent neighboring bloom of Souv. de Exposition de Lille. Marie Lemoine and Golden Harvest were other especially good flowers shown. Vaughan also had a table of Baby Rambler rose and another of cut flowers of perennials, including blooms of some of the newer sweet peas.

Rosenfield's Seedlings.

J. F. Rosenfield, Westpoint, Neb., was not present but sent a whole table of fine flowers, including an entry of 100 pink, Floral Treasure, which took second premium, and 100 red, No. 206, which was second in its class. Mr. Rosenfield has raised many seedlings and many good ones. There were practically nothing but his own varieties in his exhibit. His Floral Treasure is very like Delicatissima and the old L L L Pink of the Chicago market. In the view of some these three would need to be grown under the same conditions for more than one season to determine their differences. There was another fine light pink in the lot, a large flower with lighter edge on the petals, which had no label. Mr. Rosenfield is especially strong on red seedlings. No. 206 is fine and there were several others under number. His Grandiflora rubra was not the same as Reeves' or Ward's.

Klehm's Nursery, Arlington Heights, Ill., decorated the big iron fountain in the center of the hall, filling it with peonies and adding much to the excellence of the general view.

The Jewell Nursery, Lake City, Minn., sent a table of blooms but they arrived in poor shape. Delicatissima kept best of all. A good one was No. 12, dark red, showing stamens.

The Ionia Pottery Co., Ionia, Mich., made a display of pots.

torium, Chicago, at 11 a. m. Saturday, June 17. President Ward complimented Chicago on the exhibition then in progress and read an address, which appears elsewhere in this issue. Secretary A. H. Fewkes read the minutes of the 1904 meeting and then his annual report, as follows:

"The present membership of the society is thirty-six, not including two honorary members.

"Since the last meeting the president has appointed two European representatives of the nomenclature committee, A. Dessert, Chenonceaux, France, to represent that country, and August Koenemann, of Neides-Walluf, Germany, to represent the latter.

"During the past year I have had considerable correspondence in regard to peony lists with the object of completing our preliminary list, but there are some which are still to be received before it can be published. The publishing of the report of 1903-1904 has also been delayed for unavoidable reasons.

"In the matter of the incorporation papers, Mr. Lown, the attorney, reported to me that the certificate of incorporation was filed in Albany, N. Y., July 2, 1904, and a certified copy of the same was deposited at the New York county clerk's office on July 11, thereby completing the legal incorporation of the society.

"The exhibition held during the meeting at New York was a fairly good show, there being about seven exhibitors who staged many fine flowers, but there was a great lack of names thereby reducing the value of the show. C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y., showed about 200 varieties, all unnamed but under number. Frank Gould, with John J. Morris, Esq., Compton, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., showed about sixty-three varieties, all named. Andorra Nurseries, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., twenty varieties, all named. Siebrecht & Son, a large display of unnamed flowers, including about thirty-two varieties. C. Betscher, Canal Dover, O., forty varieties, all named. C. & M. Wild, Sarcoxie, Mo., about ten varieties, and F. S. Rosenberg, Walden, N. Y., about eighteen vases unnamed."

The secretary then read the report of Treasurer J. H. Humphreys. The balance June, 1904, was $175.50; receipts, $57.55; expenditures, $23.98; present balance, $209.07.

The judges of the exhibition were Ed. Kanst, P. J. Hauswirth and Charles Klehm. They reported as follows:

Judges' Report.

Largest and best collection, one flower of each variety, Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., first; Vaughan's Greenhouses, second.

Best twelve varieties, six flowers each, Peterson Nursery, first; Vaughan's Greenhouses, second. One entry disqualified for wrong count.

Collection rose pink varieties, Peterson Nursery, first.

Collection salmon and flesh varieties, Peterson Nursery, first.

Collection white varieties, Peterson Nursery, first.

Collection cream and light yellow varieties, J. F. Rosenfield, Westpoint, Neb., first; Peterson Nursery, second.

Collection crimson without stamens, Peterson Nursery, first. One exhibit disqualified because of too many stamens showing.

Collection crimson with stamens, Peterson Nursery, first.

Collection tricolor varieties, Peterson Nursery, first.

Twelve best varieties, twelve blooms of each, first, Peterson Nursery, silver cup.

Festiva maxima, 100 blooms, Vaughan's Greenhouses, first. One entry disqualified for short count.

Best 100 blooms pink, first, Peterson Nursery, on Livingstone; second, same exhibitor, on Delicatissima.

Best 100 blooms crimson, first, E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O., on Grandiflora rubra; second, same exhibitor on Richardson's Rubra superba.

Cottage Gardens were given honorable mention for extensive display and so were Vaughan's Greenhouses for perennials, etc.

Mr. Ward called the judges' attention to the rule prohibiting more than one award to one exhibitor in the same class and the report was amended to give second for 100 pink to J. F. Rosenfield for Floral Treasure and second for 100 crimson to Mr. Rosenfield, for No. 206.

On motion of W. A. Peterson honorable mention was given the decorative display of Klehm's Nursery, mention of which had been omitted, due to the modesty of one of the judges.

J. B. Deamud, exhibitor manager, was given a vote of thanks for his services.

Elections.

Elmer D. Smith, H. J. Mullin and J. M. Hood were elected to membership. One other application was referred to the board of directors because not accompanied by the membership fee.

Boston was selected for next year's meeting place.

It was early apparent that office seeks the man in the Peony Society. Mr. Peterson declined the presidency and Mr. Ward only accepted re-election under pressure. He said he doesn't like references to Mr. Ward's Peony Society and thought it wise to put in some one else, but the members didn't concur. The officers elected are: President, C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; vice-president, Wm. A. Peterson, Chicago; secretary, A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.; treasurer, J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa.

Visitors.

Among the visitors noted were Fred Lemon and Miss Sarah A. Hill, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O.; C. W. Ward and his secretary, Queens, N. Y.; C. S. Harrison, York, Neb.; A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.; Robert George, of Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.; G. C. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.; Wm. C. Barry and C.

J. Malloy, of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester; Mr. Wallace, of D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Ia.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; Irving Gingrich, South Bend, Ind.

Jottings.

The sorts with which Peterson Nursery won the silver cup for the best twelve varieties were: Marie Lemoine, white; Festiva maxima, white; Marie Calot, blush and white; Golden Harvest, light pink; Pottsii alba, baby pink; Delicatissima, light pink; Princess Beatrice, rose pink guard; Livingstone, rose pink; Modele de Perfection, rose; Modeste Guerin, deep rose; Marechal MacMahon, red bomb; Purpurea Delachei, deep red with stamens.

Elmer D. Smith says that picking out the right peonies is a tougher proposition than picking the right mums. If the mums don't suit you, you try others the next season but you are tied up to a peony several years because the plant is so intolerant of division.

Secretary A. H. Fewkes says that the Peony Society's records now include descriptions of close to 1,300 varieties.

Amza Kennicott, of A. Kennicott & Son, who cut over 100,000 peonies for the Chicago wholesale cut flower market this season, looked over the show and when asked what he liked best of the varieties said that he thought Marie Lemoine, white, the best of the lot.

Wm. A. Peterson said that if he could have only one peony he thought he should take Golden Harvest.

MR. WARD'S ADDRESS.

[The following is the address of President C. W. Ward delivered before the American Peony Society at Chicago, June 16.]

It has now been two years since the organization of the American Peony Society and to those who thought that there was no need of such a special society to care for the interests of the peony, the success of the present magnificent exhibit should be ample proof that the society was not only needed, but really wanted, for it is by such exhibitions as these that we who are devoted to the interests of any special class of floriculture really learn the possibilities that exist when concentrated effort is made to develop all that there may be contained in any special subject.

This is practically the first exhibition of peony flowers given under the management of our society and what has been done here today can be much improved upon in future efforts, for by experience we learn and the experience leading up to the staging of the present show has already taught us many things that will redound to our benefit in the future and will enable us to stage increasingly interesting exhibits as the years roll by.

No doubt the officers of the society will be somewhat sharply criticized for not providing essays to be read before this meeting and, while not attempting to offer excuses for such lack, I wish in connection with an apology which we offer to members of the society, to say that unfortunately prior to the season at which the peony show is possible almost all of the members of our society are driven to exert their utmost energies in order to properly care for the year's business which must be done practically in the two or three months of spring.

Chaotic Nomenclature.

One of the crying needs of such an association as ours is the surprisingly chaotic state into which the nomenclature of the peony has been allowed to degenerate and if this association should do nothing else than straighten out in a passable manner the nomenclature of the peony, striking from the list duplicate or nearly duplicate and worthless varieties and render it possible for the trade to list fifty or sixty of the best sorts under names and descriptions that would render their identification certain and make possible extensive deals between different peony growers, insuring the buyer of getting exactly what he wants whenever he places an order, and then should disband, it will have accomplished one of the greatest benefits to floriculture in general and amply repay for all the effort put forth and expense incurred in its organization and maintenance.

The Cornell Test.

Realizing the importance of this question of nomenclature, a competent nomenclature committee was appointed and has already accomplished a long step toward straightening out the tangle which has been the source of annoyance and a bane to us all who have attempted to purchase peonies. I now refer to the extensive test plot at Cornell University which has been planted with upwards of a thousand varieties of peonies, all of which have been contributed by its members without one cent of expense being incurred by the society. It is a foregone conclusion that this attempt to straighten out the peony nomenclature, undertaken under the auspices of Prof. John Craig, of Cornell University, whose careful and efficient work performed in other lines is ample guarantee for the thoroughness with which this work will be done, will be productive of great results and will place the entire fraternity under obligations, not only to Prof. Craig, but to Cornell University and lastly, but not least, to the American Peony Society itself.

Peonies for Cut Flowers.

Fourteen years ago, when I first began growing carnations, they were usually sold upon the market under the designation of red, pink and white pinks. So far as I know very few varieties had at that period produced a sufficient impression upon the buyers to be asked for under distinctive names. However, soon after the formation of the American Carnation Society they began to be designated by special names and at the present time retail buyers generally ask for The President, Enchantress, Ethel Ward or any other variety they wish to purchase, because thereby they identify those blooms which best satisfy their tastes and purposes and it will not be long before this will be the case with the peony. At present Festiva maxima is known upon the New York market as "the big white" peony and all other white varieties are simply designated as white peonies, but within a comparatively short period buyers will begin to call for Mont Blanc, Festiva maxima, Mons. Dupont, Marie Lemoine and other named varieties because they will want to secure just the effect produced by those sorts and will be able to identify them under their proper titles.

For some years past the value of the peony for cut flower purposes has been recognized in the larger markets, such as Chicago, New York, Boston and other large cities, but up to the present time there seems to have been no organized effort made to place the most suitable varieties on sale, and a large proportion of the blooms offered seem to have been of the more common kinds, composed largely of undesirable shades of color, the result being that the color value of the peony has suffered somewhat in popular estimation. In a few years all this should be changed and a sufficient quantity of the most attractive sorts that are best suited for cut flower purposes should be grown to supply the needs of the market, and when this occurs the demand for peonies for cut flower purposes will be largely increased.

A Frequent Experience.

The difficulties of accumulating a large stock of the better varieties that shall prove true to name are great indeed because owing to the chaotic state of peony nomenclature at the present time, no one is sure of getting what he orders unless he is able to visit the peony fields in blooming time and identify and mark the plants he desires.

A somewhat extensive experience in purchasing peonies during the past ten years has developed some curious results. For instance, in one case a grower sent two absolutely different colors under the same name. This occurred with the peony Henri Murger. The true Henri Murger is described as an immense bloom of the form and color of the Paul Neyron rose. The first year that the firm in question sent us Henri Murger we got a tall growing, deep purplish crimson which as yet we have been unable to identify. The following year they sent us a very double creamy white sort which bore no resemblance either in habit, form or color to the one sent before. Neither of them resembled in any respect, either in habit, form, color or time of blooming, the true Henri Murger. In another case a totally different peony in point of habit, form and date of blooming was sent but of the same shade of color as the genuine variety ordered. The second year from the same firm came under the same name another lot which again did not resemble the true variety either in form, habit or date of blooming but still of the same shade of color and neither of these varieties resembled in any respect the true variety, whether in form, habit or date of blooming, with the exception that the shades of color were very close to the true variety.

Working Up Stock.

After an extensive experience in attempting to accumulate considerable stock of the specially desirable varieties, I have come to the conclusion that the only practical way to work up a true stock is to purchase a moderate quantity of the sorts from some source where you are able to identify them as true and then, after blooming the plants three years, cut out all rogues which may develop and look after the propagating and division of the stock yourself, for I have found where you leave it to employes, they not having the same interest in keeping the stock clean that you have, will allow errors to slip in. A rogue once introduced in a stock frequently multiplies twice as rapidly as the true variety, the result being a large proportion of rogues when the stock has been considerably augmented. In Holland the custom is to take up peonies and divide them every year or two, consequently the plants are never seen in bloom and this mode of forcing the propagation is probably the reason why so many rogues are found in the general run of Holland peonies imported to this country.

Peonies in Landscape Work.

Undoubtedly our favorite flower is one of the most effective of all early flowering herbaceous plants for use in extensive landscape plantings. It not only can be used in masses producing grand color results, effectively lighting up dark nooks and corners, but they can also be interspersed among shrubbery, lending additional effective color to such groups. The plants when out of bloom are not unsightly, as is the case with many other herbaceous flowers, but the deep, fresh greens and bronzy greens of the peony foliage are maintained in general good condition throughout the greater portion of the season.

The range of peony colors is unexcelled, comprising almost all the shades of pink, from the most delicate flesh tints to the deepest shades. The same may be said of white, crimson, purple and amaranth. It is weak however, in yellow, as we have comparatively few sorts that might be termed yellow and these are generally light in color, the guard petals being almost invariably white, and it cannot be said that there is as yet any true solid yellow peony.

Landscape architects should learn to know the peony better and should become acquainted with the finer and more desirable sorts and should use them more extensively hereafter than they have in the past. I am quite certain that the peony often suffers in reputation by the use of common undesirable colors in classes of work where good, clean complementary colors are needed and should be used and the peony will never take its proper place in landscape work until landscapers in general become better acquainted with the more desirable sorts and learn to know them as well as to use them.

A Regrettable Controversy.

It is to be regretted that an unfortunate controversy arose over the formation of the American Peony Society resulting in forming within the ranks of the Society of American Florists the S. A. F. Peony Society or Peony Committee as it has more recently been called, giving color to the idea that the Society of American Florists was opposed to and endeavoring to kill off our association. I have been led to believe that it has been asserted by certain elements in the Society of American Florists that the formation of the Carnation Society, the Chrysanthemum Society, the Peony Society and other special associations would in the end destroy the Society of American Florists. This I do not believe to be true and I cannot see any other result from the organization of such special societies than an increased general distribution of flower and plant knowledge among the general public, which in the end will result in increased accession to the ranks of the Society of American Florists.

It may be asserted with truth that the Peony Society has not now, nor will it have in the future, any conflict with any other horticultural body, but it has been formed for the purpose of accomplishing certain special work that can be done only by and with the hearty co-operation of all of those most vitally interested in the peony.

Personally, I am well satisfied that our association will gladly contribute to the archives of the Society of American Florists, or to any other horticultural body that makes for the good of the florist craft in general, the results which it may accomplish in the way of straightening out peony nomenclature, or any other results which may be considered generally beneficial to the craft.

Results Due to Growers.

Neither the Peony Society nor the S. A. F. Peony Committee has had as yet any great measurable effect upon the increase in the demand for peonies for the reason that neither has up to the present time accomplished any definite advancement, either in the improvement of the peony or the methods of its culture or its commercial handling. Aside from a few articles and cultural notes appearing in the press, nothing tangible has gone forth to the general public and these articles have not as a rule emanated either from the Society of American Florists or from the American Peony Society. Whatever results have been accomplished up to the present time have been largely through the work done by the peony specialists, who are giving their time to the culture of and investing their capital in peonies.

The experimental peony plantation of Cornell University has been made possible only by the voluntary contributions of the principal peony specialists in America and Europe who are members of the American Peony Society.

Controversy Should Cease.

Reverting again to the unpleasant things which have been said and done in connection with the formation of our society, it may well be said that all opposition and controversy should now cease. The work of the Peony Society has been so definitely cut out and clearly defined that the few doubting and misguided spirits within the ranks of the Society of American Florists who have heretofore frowned upon our organization, should now cease their antagonism and bend their efforts toward forwarding a work that will in the end redound to the general welfare and benefit of the entire florist craft as well as the nursery fraternity.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Irrigation.

Although it may appear unseasonable to write of watering after the frequent and heavy rains that have recently prevailed in most parts of the country, we may now reasonably expect our three months of hot weather and spells of drought.

The Atlantic, and even what is called the middle western, states can get along fairly well with many outside crops without artificial irrigation, but I am told, and it is doubtless true, that farther west, in Kansas and Colorado for instance, it would be impossible to grow even carnations in the field unless they were frequently and thoroughly watered. They would dry up and blow away. I was glad to notice that Mr. Baur, in his recent notes, disapproves of watering carnations in the field that are intended to be lifted and benched. What I now say, or have said, in the past, was for conditions we have in the eastern states, where we occasionally have had eight and nine weeks of hot spells and drought, but for many years I have preached no water but plenty of hoeing for carnations and have had the pleasure of being told in personal interviews that I was talking pure nonsense. But I am not going to dip into carnations. There are other important plants that must be artificially watered in every locality during two or three weeks of dry weather.

First a word about the principle of watering and hoeing. If we plunged, say, a carnation or geranium in a 4-inch pot in the ground and gave it one watering at the time, but no more attention for a week of hot dry weather, the plant would be past redemption, shriveled up, because the pot would prevent any moisture ascending from the depths of the soil to nourish the roots. If you planted similar plants in the ground and gave them one watering at planting time, how would you find these plants after a week of drought? If properly planted and sensibly watered at planting time, you would find them fresh, plump and healthy. If not perceptibly grown they would be robust and vigorous. Now is this not positive proof that in these dry times it is the moisture arising from the depths of the ground?

Why is subsoiling so wonderfully beneficial? Simply because the breaking up or disturbing the soil fifteen or eighteen inches deep facilitates the quicker and freer rise of this moisture. I believe the principle of the moisture rising to evaporate at the surface is known as capillary attraction. Whatever scientific term is attached to it does not add to its value, and let us say that it is a thoughtful arrangement of an all wise providence that when the clouds do not bless us from above, nature's reservoir sends up her blessings from below. This was not ordained alone for little man's benefit, but to keep the face of the earth green, to nourish the mighty sequoia, the sturdy oak and the modest daisy and useful "tater."

Now, we plow up the land six or eight inches deep, plant, and in too many cases as soon as the surface looks dry, get out the hose and sprinkle the surface, wetting through an inch deep, and possibly not that. We have refreshed the foliage, it is true, but we have only wet the soil enough to run the particles together and the next day's sun puts it into the shape of a dry paste, or crust, and prevents evaporation, and without moisture escaping from the surface none will rise from below. So this little dribble only cements the surface and is a real detriment to the plants you intended to benefit. When the foliage of a flower bed covers and shades the ground less water is needed and less harm would be done by one of these superficial waterings.

The way to do it is to give a thorough watering, one that will go down five or six inches, and then, when the soil is friable, which even a clay is if taken at the right time, between the wet and the dry, give a good hoeing.

Asters.

Asters suffer very much in a dry time. Especially if the ground has been plowed shallow they should be watered copiously at least once a week and as late as you can get between them. When so large and branched that the ground is covered, a good soaking without the hoeing won't hurt, but their success is assured by that time.

Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas delight us for the first two weeks of their flowering and would continue to do so if kept watered, but if the ground is tramped down, as it soon becomes with the daily picking, and little rain falls, they soon play out.

It is worth mentioning here, incidentally, that often the cause of our sweet peas giving us few if any blooms, after a short period of flowering, is because we do not pick them clean. What flowers you leave go quickly to seed, the plant has performed its principal function, and that is the end of growth. Keep every flower picked off. If you can not sell them, throw them away, and, when picking, if you notice any seed pods, off with them.

Now here, with sweet peas, is where mulching comes in with much benefit. Hoe the ground deeply between the rows and on all sides of them and then cover the whole surface with at least two inches of mulch. There is nothing finer for a mulch than decayed refuse hops, but John D. Rockefeller, John Westcott and those who vote the prohibition ticket might have scruples about using this material from its associations with a certain unspeakable industry. Long stable litter does finely.

Mulching Roses.

Rose and carnation growers mulch, particularly in fall and winter, not to keep their beds moist but for a fertilizer or stimulant. We mulch outdoors in summer to keep the soil moist and to be able to water without baking or crusting over the surface. Mulching is of the greatest benefit to all plants in summer but neither convenient nor necessary with all. Nowhere is it of more benefit than with our summer roses. Not only with the tea and hybrid tea and Bourbon classes, but with the strong growing hybrid perpetual roses is mulching a necessity, for you cannot get the best results without copious waterings, and then you must either hoe or mulch, and mulching will save labor. Some dozen or more beds of H. P. roses under my care, which I shall always think of with a slight temporary enlargement of the cranium, were kept clean, vigorous and a mass of bloom for two months by three inches of a rich mulch and copious applications of Lake Erie. "How do ye keep the bugs off?" was asked a thousand times. "With cold water at thirty-five pounds pressure, madam," was the short but truthful answer. And who would expect a fine bed of Maman Cochet, or Carnot, or other summer tea roses, without a mulch and frequent watering?

Gladioli.

These splendid flowers are lovers of water and growers of ten or thirty acres have ample hose facility to flood them and later run the cultivators through them. If not possible to water yours, then cultivate or hoe frequently.

Don't Water.

While I have tried to mention a few of the important florists' flowers that must be watered in dry weather, and all experienced gardeners know all this, there is with the average owner of some flower beds, and especially with the person known as "hired man," eight parts hoss and cow man and two parts gardener, there is more harm than good done with the indiscriminate use of the hose. Beds of plants such as cannas and caladiums, the more they are watered the more luxuriant they grow. Then again there is the universally popular geranium, and the coleus, and the carpet beds. After once covering the ground, so that you can no longer hoe, they seldom need any artificial watering. We never saw geranium beds that equaled in brilliancy those that were never watered after the first sensible watering, when they were put in the ground. Geraniums with the abuse of the hose will grow long, spindling, all leaf and poor flower and coleus will run up to straggling shape and lose the bright rich colors.

Mulching Transplanted Trees.

I meant further up to speak of the great benefit of mulching young trees recently transplanted. Under the most favorable conditions, good roots and pruned back and properly planted, mulching is not a necessity but how often these conditions do not exist! I have seen many a young tree planted in April come out in leaf and appear to be doing well up to this date; then give up the ghost. The same, and perhaps oftener, occurs with evergreens planted in May. They exist and attempt to make their young, tender growths; then the warm, dry weather sets in and they give up the struggle. Many a young tree, Norway spruce and Austrian pine, we have seen saved for future life and beauty by forking up the ground for a space round them, putting on a heavy mulch and then a soaking. Now is the time to save them.

"In conclusion," as our pastors say, if you water, then hoe; if you can't water, then hoe often. And if you can water and mulch afterwards you are doing well.

In the last issue my pencil must have slipped, for I was made to say that salisburia grows on the verandas in Buffalo. I meant to say aristolochia.

GROWING GARDEN ROSES.

[A paper by M. H. Walsh, Wooda Hole, Mass., read before the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston, June 20, 1905.]

I thank you most heartily for the honor you confer by inviting me to speak a few words to you this evening on "Rose Growing." The subject is one you are all familiar with, being either professional gardeners or florists, or both. The subject will, of course, be old and somewhat dry; so much has been said and written I feel there is nothing new I can speak of, and at most my remarks this evening on rose growing can only recall to your memory what many of you learned in your apprenticeship in other lands.

History of Rose Culture.

There is no secret in the growing of garden roses. The fundamental principles of growing roses as taught and practiced forty-five years ago in England, and that is as far as my memory serves me, hold good today. While we have to modify to some extent, owing to climatic conditions, the salient and most important essentials apply to rose growing in the open ground here.

The question of soils, pruning and all relating to roses at that time was discussed through the Gardeners' Chronicle and Shirley Hibbard's Floral World. This book I perused with a great deal of pleasure. It was comparatively a new subject. Some new varieties had been originated since 1845, when the old rose, La Reine, was first discovered, and this rose was the first break of the new class of roses called hybrid perpetuals or hybrid remontants. This class multiplied very rapidly after 1860. While at that date the varieties numbered only about twenty-five or thirty, today they run into the hundreds. Many which were grown at that time are displaced by superior kinds. It is a most encouraging sign to see an increased interest throughout the country. While I cannot expect to tell you anything but what you already know, I may interest you by recalling pleasant recollections relating to roses.

The Essentials.

There are several phases and aspects in the successful growing of roses. In order to grow fine roses each one must be closely observed. Neglect or failure to carefully attend to the requirements of this flower will manifest itself in the appearance of the plants. They will speak for themselves, as it were, and will make evident to the familiar and keen observer whether they have received the proper treatment, and so forth, for their best growth and development.

The important essentials are soil, location, quality of stock, pruning, watering, guarding against insects, fungus and mildew; hoeing, etc. All these contribute to the health and vigor of the rose plants. Neglect or failure to attend to them will show to a greater or less degree as they all combine to make the perfect rose.

Soils.

That hardy roses will grow in ordinary garden soil cannot be questioned, providing drainage, location and so forth are right. The quality of the flowers, however, will be just in proportion to the culture they receive.

Hybrid perpetual roses delight to grow and thrive best in a stiff loam. A little clay mixed in the soil is beneficial; this retains moisture and keeps the soil cool. Good drainage is an important factor, as roses will not thrive satisfactorily in cold, stagnant soil; therefore drainage should be provided if the subsoil is not porous to leach away surplus water. It is not during the growing season, however, with our usually hot, dry summers that improper drainage affects the health of the plants, but in the early spring, when growth should take place; the plants will show the effects, having winter-killed badly and are loath to start. This is caused by cold, wet ground. Probably the roots were encased in ice during the past two months. Therefore, while this seems a small matter, it is one of the essentials which should not be overlooked, as this contributes largely to the health of the plants. Roses do not like cold toes.

Location is another important essential to the proper growth of roses, an exposure from southeast to southwest being the ideal spot. The early morning sun is most beneficial, as the plants make more growth from sunrise to 8 a. m. in the open than during the rest of the day. A spot sheltered from the strong winds and fully exposed to the sun should be chosen to get the most satisfactory results.

Food and Water.

It is needless for me to remark that roses are gross feeders, and that means good, rich soil. The plants will tell you the condition of the soil. If in good soil well cultivated, and by that is meant watered when necessary, keeping from insects, fungus and mildew, the foliage will be luxuriant and strong and a pleasure to look at. If, on the other hand, the growth is weak and the foliage more yellow than green, it would denote poor soil, poor drainage, or both, or lack of sufficient plant food. The keen observer quickly detects this condition and, of course, takes steps to apply the remedy.

A good rose bloom carries with it good foliage; you cannot well get one without the other; they are inseparable, as the flower is only the foliage developed. This means good food, frequent syringing and applications of water when necessary. The leaves of the plant are termed the lungs of the plant and they absorb a great deal of nitrogen from the soil; therefore the necessity of rich soil, as you cannot get nitrogen if there is none in the soil. You cannot take from the soil what it does not contain. It is from the soil the plants sustain life and exist. The soil should receive careful consideration.

Stir or hoe the ground frequently, weeds or no weeds. The proper time to hoe is when there are no weeds; this is beneficial to roses. Hoe a piece for proof of this and leave a piece alongside not hoed. Look at the two pieces or rows of plants; the following morning compare and observe which has the heavier dewdrops on the leaves and consider whence it came on one row of plants and not on the other.

Pruning.

The pruning of hybrid perpetuals should be carefully done, having in mind the character of the varieties. The weak growing varieties, such as Gustave Pigneau, Marie Baumann, Marie Finger, and others of like character, should be pruned to three eyes from the ground. The more vigorous growing kinds should be pruned six to eight eyes from the ground. That is to say, for the weak growing kinds prune close as above, and for the more vigorous, not so close. This may be termed pruning for quality.

The method pursued generally in this country appears to be based on quantity rather than quality, sparing the knife and exhausting the plants by over-cropping and producing quantity instead of quality. Far better sixteen or twenty good, first-class blooms than forty or more inferior ones. By pursuing this system of pruning it promotes and encourages strong, vigorous shoots for the following year's blooms. The number of shoots for the plants may be determined by the size and vigor of the plants. This applies to the hybrid perpetuals or remontants.

M. H. Walsh's New Everblooming Rose, Urania.

Close or severe pruning, as it may be termed, practically produces strong, young, vigorous wood, even on very old plants, and they may be grown for many years, providing, however, the plants are taken up and roots pruned once in six or seven years.

Best Hybrid Perpetuals.

The following list contains the names of what the writer considers twenty-four of the best varieties: Alfred Colomb, Baroness Rothschild, Abéle Carriere, Chas. Lefebvre, Clio, Dr. Audry, Duke of Edinburgh, Earl of Dufferin, Etienne Levet, Frau Karl Druschki, General Jacqueminot, Heinrich Schultheis, Horace Vernet, Jubilee, Louis Van Houtte, Madam Gabriel Luizet, Marie Baumann, Marquise de Castellane, Maurice Bernadine, Mrs. John Laing, Mrs. R. G. Sharman-Crawford, Margaret Dickson, Prospier Laugier, Ulrich Brunner.

Winter Protection.

I find drawing the soil around the base of the hybrid perpetuals as you would hill up potatoes sheds off the rain, keeping the soil dry around the base of the plants. Hill up eight or nine inches and fill in and over the surface four or five inches of manure. This protects the roots and is in good condition to dig in the spring. This may be done early in November, it having a tendency to harden and ripen up the wood before severe cold weather sets in. The object of hilling up is to protect eight or nine inches of the wood; it matters little if the tops do winter-kill. Sometimes I think it is a blessing in disguise, especially where close pruning is not practiced.

Remedies.

Hellebore dusted on the leaves early in May, when the second leaf appears on the young shoot, will destroy the leaf roller or slug. Usually two applications are sufficient, unless washed off by the rains. When the white thrip or hopper appears, it indicates lack of moisture in the soil, as this thrip will not attack the plants except in the hot, dry weather, when the ground is deficient in moisture. Call into requisition the force pump or hydrant hose, syringing the bushes on the under side of the leaves. Do not wait for the elements to supply water; delays are dangerous.

For exterminating aphis frequent syringings with the force pump or hose will prove effective and beneficial. For mildew, sulphur dusted over the affected plants will allay this disease. For rose or Hessian bugs, hand picking is the only effectual remedy. A good preventive is to plant nearby some small white shrubs, viburnum or white wigelias. These will draw the rose bugs away. A white flower has a peculiar attraction for them. You have noticed how they select the white or lighter colored roses rather than the darker colored. This bug is the most detestable and destructive pest to contend with.

Hybrid Tea Roses.

These may be properly called the true perpetual roses. While the number of varieties which have proved hardy enough to withstand our climate is not large, there are at least fifteen varieties which prove most satisfactory with careful cultivation and protection.

This class of roses requires a light, sandy soil for best growth and development. The hybrid teas are growing in favor each year. This is the coming rose and in the course of ten years I predict these will displace or supersede the hybrid perpetuals. The large number of new varieties which will be introduced within the next two years, together with the varieties proving hardy and already being grown here, will make a list of everblooming roses.

This rose appears to withstand our severe winters as it becomes acclimated. To my surprise, I found Madame Abel Chatenay to have stood the winter by simply drawing the earth up around the base of the plants, no other protection being provided.

Moisture or wet heavy soil is not suited for the hybrid tea; therefore a light, sandy soil, well enriched, is desirable; the lighter the soil, the drier and warmer. To carry these through the winter the soil should be drawn up around the base of the plants not later than November 15. This tends to ripen up and harden the wood to better withstand the winter. A layer of coarse beach hay placed over the surface of the ground and around the plants answers well and it does not hold the water. Over this place some evergreen branches to protect the plants from the sun and cold winds. The cold March winds and strong, bright sun cause much injury to all roses as well as to trees and shrubs.

The Best Varieties.

The following list of hybrid teas is most desirable: Augustine Guinnoseau, Caroline Testout, La France, Bessie Brown, Gruss an Teplitz, Maman Cochet (white), Maman Cochet (pink), Mme. Abel Chatenay, Madam Joseph Combet, Ferdinand Jamain, Flush O'Dawn, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Papa Gontier and President Carnot.

Hybrid tea roses require little pruning, cutting out the weak shoots and dead wood being sufficient.

Hybridists' Best Field.

The long season of blooming of this beautiful class of roses beginning in mid-June and continuing until November, together with their beautiful colors and fragrance, makes them much in demand. A rose which will bloom all summer and prove hardy with careful protection will be the popular garden rose. This class is being increased in this country, as well as in England, Ireland and Germany, the constitution of these new varieties being strong, to withstand our severe climate. The rose hybridizers in the United States are at work to improve and perfect this new class of roses, a process which is naturally slow; but there is much work being done and in due course results will be known. This cannot be accomplished in one year or two, as with carnations; it requires at least five years before the character and quality of these new roses become permanently fixed. The writer has one plant seven years old flowering this season for the first time. Patience is a virtue the rose hybridist should possess. Oftentimes it requires two years for rose seeds to germinate, while in some instances the seeds will germinate in about four to six weeks.

Nature is not lavish in giving us improved varieties; therefore they cannot be produced at will. Thousands are raised and tested but only a few chosen. The quality and standard of roses are improved and it becomes more difficult to produce new and meritorious varieties than was the case ten years ago. All gardeners and florists should interest themselves in this most fascinating work, possess themselves with patience and experiment on the lines along which in their good judgment they would get the best results.

Climbing Roses.

Within the past ten years there has been introduced what may be called a new race of climbing decorative roses for the garden. These are being grown by many at the present time in various forms, giving much pleasure and satisfaction as hardy climbing or trailing roses. These hybrids are the result of hybridizing, using the Japanese varieties as parents. These are valuable acquisitions to the already long list of varieties being grown at the present time. These new varieties produce a most artistic effect. When in bloom the contrast with foliage and flower, together with the delicious fragrance, place them easily in the front rank. These flower about the first week in July, prolonging the rose season in the garden fully four to five weeks. Some varieties flower a second time from September to frost. These may be used to great advantage grown as ground roses for covering banks, rockeries, etc. They grow most rapidly in ordinary garden soil well enriched. These require light pruning, merely cutting the tips of the shoots.

The following named are considered among the best in this class: Carissima, Debutante, Farquhar, Gaiety, Hiawatha, Lady Gay, La Fiamma, Philadelphia Rambler, Manda's Triumph, Dorothy Perkins and Wedding Bells. These roses may be used for edging for beds by pegging down and they are very effective with their mass of blooms.

Increasing Popularity.

Never in the history of this country has the rose been in such demand as at the present time. The popular interest and awakening in the garden rose is the best proof of the high esteem it commands as the queen of the garden. A most hopeful and encouraging sign of the times is the increased interest for garden roses, the work being done in making and planting new beds; the inquiries for the best garden roses and the new varieties and the increased demand for the Rambler class, and the increased intelligence by the amateur class in matters relating to rose growing.

It is evident the rose takes first and the prominent place in the garden and will maintain its title and position while flowers are grown. There is no flower that appeals to one so strongly as the fragrant rose.

May the developing and perfecting of the rose continue and may each year bring forth new types of American roses which will adorn the rose gardens of all who grow this beautiful flower.

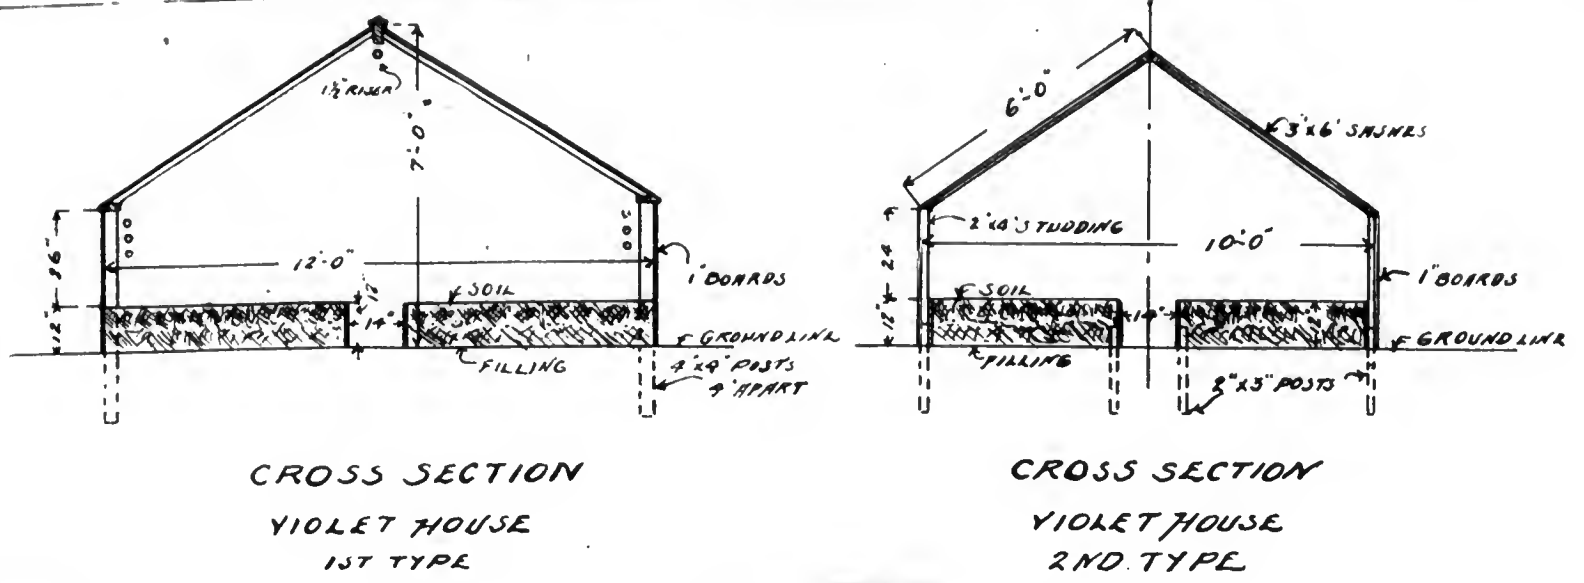
STOCK TOO LATE.

I have about 1,000 carnation plants in 2½-inch pots, taken from the propagating bench June 1. They are too small to plant out and too late. Can I grow them inside? Have a very big, light house and plenty of room. Please give me the culture. C. E. S.

I would not advise you to plant such late struck cuttings with any hope for a paying crop next winter. It would be a waste of room, as they would give you at best a very light crop of blooms during the winter and in the spring you always have plenty anyway. It does not pay to plant anything but good, strong plants, either in the field or in the house for blooming.

Sometimes we propagate as late as we can of a very scarce and valuable variety (usually seedlings), but merely with a view to getting cuttings the next winter, but even then it is doubtful if it really pays, as the plants are seldom as strong as they should be and more liable to fall a prey to disease.

I would advise you not to use those plants, but if you are short of plants, visit the nearest wholesale place and buy what you need for planting when it is time. It will be dollars in your pocket. A. F. J. Baur.



CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Topping.

Upon the attention given to topping will depend the future shape of the plant and it goes without saying that those evenly-branched or symmetrical in shape give the best returns. Varieties differ somewhat in natural habit of growth, some making finely shaped specimens with comparatively little attention, while others, unless closely watched, become sprawly and hard to manage. No hard and fast rule can be laid down when and how often to top, so much depends on weather conditions, so the plan of setting apart a certain day each week to go over the plants is not to be recommended.

The careful grower will have his eye on practically every plant, at least every other day. Not that he will examine each plant minutely, but a rapid glance along the rows will show where attention is needed today and likely to be wanted tomorrow.

"Breaking back" was the term once used to define this operation, and the name went well with the manner in which the work was performed, but we have learned by experience that plant tissue, like human flesh, will heal more readily when cut than when broken or torn; therefore a sharp knife is indispensable, for it is obvious that the sooner the wound made in cutting off a shoot heals, the sooner active growth is resumed, to say nothing of reducing the chances of floating disease germs gaining entrance.

CROSS SECTION VIOLET HOUSE 1ST TYPE

CROSS SECTION VIOLET HOUSE 2ND TYPE

Under no circumstances should the center leaves of a shoot be pulled out. Ill shaped, stunted and otherwise objectionable plants are frequently the result of this practice. Allow the shoot to grow until distance between joints allows the form of the stem to be clearly seen at the point desired to cut.

The disposition with beginners seems to be toward topping too high, the result being a top-heavy plant. Nothing is more desirable at housing time than sturdy stock. This can be handled much more rapidly and gives better satisfaction than the tall, unwieldy kind. More importance should be attached to shape and healthiness than to size. The medium grades are preferable to extra large. GEO. S. OSBORN.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The Western Passenger Association, which controls the territory westward from Chicago and St. Louis to Cheyenne, Wyo., and including all points in Colorado, has authorized a rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan, in co-operation with rate announced by the other passenger associations, for persons attending the S. A. F. convention at Washington, D. C., August 15-18, 1905. This extends the concession to the whole territory from which members are likely to travel, with the exception of the Pacific coast, which is not under the jurisdiction of any passenger association.

Full instructions as to how to purchase tickets and secure certificates entitling the passenger to reduced rates will be published in the prospectus in July.

Department of Plant Registration.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., submits for registration Rose American Pillar, described as plant of climbing habit; growth most vigorous; foliage very large and glossy; flower, clear, rosy pink, single, three inches in diameter, produced in enormous clusters and great abundance; very durable and fragrant.

Also, Rose Birdie Blye, Helene x Bon Silene, described as an ever-blooming climber, producing clusters of blooms during the whole growing season; flowers, large, very double; color, beautiful rosy carmine and of delightful fragrance. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

GERANIUM TROUBLES.

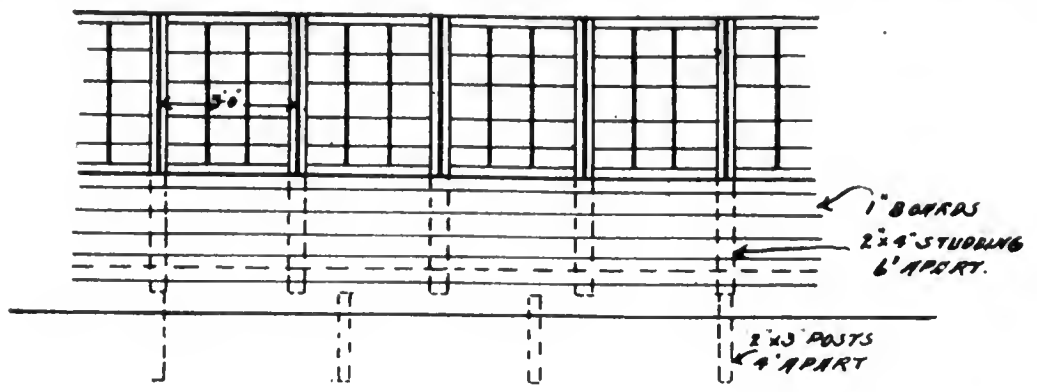
I have received a geranium in a 4-inch pot, growing in the black, rich looking prairie soil of Illinois. The one who sends it says this is how his geraniums act: "When repotted they will grow very well for a short while; then the leaves turn yellow at the edges and finally fall off." The speciment sent would be a good plant if it had healthy leaves. The stems are stout and healthy but what leaves are left are very small, such as would first appear if you had pulled off the large leaves. It looks as if this plant were injured by some obnoxious gas. We have seen geraniums have the same appearance when affected by the fumes of natural gas and also by coal tar foolishly put on the pipes. We shall grow this plant in the same soil and pot and if it does not make a healthy start and growth we will wash off the soil and repot in our clay loam. From that experience we ought to find out where the trouble lies and will be very pleased to report results later. It is not likely that the water is the trouble, or it would show on other plants more quickly even than on geraniums. W. S.

VIOLET GROWING.

By B. T. GALLOWAY.

Violet Houses.

Violets may be grown in almost any kind of a house. Our preference, however, is for a narrow, even-spanned structure, running north and south. The house should be twelve feet wide and seven feet high from bottom of the walk to the ridge; should have one walk fourteen inches in width and twelve inches deep; side walls twenty-six inches high; two beds, each five feet five inches wide and twelve inches deep. Such a house 100 feet long will hold 2,000 plants, and may be built complete, with hot water heat, for from $500 to $700. The cost will depend in large measure on the ability of the man himself to do the main part of the work. In the present day nearly all greenhouse material can be bought already run out, and it does not require any special skill to fit the parts together. Ridge, sash bars, plates, gutters, posts—in fact, everything—can now be bought ready for cutting and fitting. Almost any man who can handle a hatchet and saw can do this. The matter of heating is furthermore very much simplified. Boilers can be had ready for the fitting of the pipes, and the running of the pipes is not a difficult operation.



It is, of course, not practicable in such a paper as this to give a full list of materials required for a house such as has been described. Such a list will, however, be forwarded by the REVIEW to any one who desires it, provided 2 cents in stamps are sent to cover the necessary postage.

The accompanying illustration will give a fair conception of the general structure of such a house.

A cheaper and simpler type of house may be constructed of 3x6-foot sash. These sash are to be found on the market ready glazed and painted. The price varies from $2 to $2.25 each, complete. The sash house may be ten feet wide, including the center path, which should be fourteen inches in width. The beds may be twelve inches in depth, each four feet wide. The construction of such a house is very simple. Ordinarily the beds are made first, using 12-inch rough pine or hemlock boards for the purpose. The boards for the beds are nailed to 2x3-inch hemlock posts, set four feet apart and placed twelve to fourteen inches in the ground. For the purpose of giving solidity to the beds and in order to keep the house from spreading, the posts for the walks and those for the outside of the beds are wired together. In order to support the sash, upright posts of 2x4-inch hemlock studding are nailed to the sides of the beds. These posts are placed about six feet apart and project above the beds two feet. Upon them is nailed a plate of 2x4-inch hemlock or pine, upon which the sash are allowed to rest. The upper end of the sash is then beveled and is brought together at the top without a ridgepole. A couple of screws at the bottom and the same number at the top hold the sash in position. About every fourth sash should be hinged at the bottom for ventilation. A house 100 feet long made of sash can be built for $300 to $350.

The Market.

Midsummer dullness is now upon us. The week just passed about wound up the school commencements and weddings. Still, there will be a few more on the smaller scale. The away up society folks have packed up and left the city for the summer, so the demand for flowers from this source is over for this season.

The weather here is very hot and rain is badly needed for the stock in the fields. There are still plenty of flowers of fairly good quality for this time of the year. Brides and Maids are still in good shape, also Kaiserin and Meteor. Some extra good Jacqs are in, but somewhat short in stem. There are plenty of short-stemmed Beauties; fancy long are limited.

Carnations, that is, good ones, are scarce, but there is plenty of small and poor stock in the market. Sweet peas are a big glut in all varieties. The best stock brings only $1.50 per thousand. Lily of the valley still has some call, with enough good stock from local growers for the demand. Outdoor stock, such as cornflowers, daisies, yellow lilies and candytuft is plentiful. The "green goods" are, as usual, equal to all demands.

Various Notes.

Frank Weber, one of our local nurserymen, entertained some thirty nurserymen at Delmar garden on June 12, the whole party leaving that night for West Baden Springs, Ind., where the nurserymen held their annual convention. Mr. Weber has returned and reports a large meeting and a good time.

Robert Meinhardt, until recently bookkeeper for C. A. Kuehn, has opened a retail store at the corner of Sarah and Suburban streets, which seems to be a good location, as he reports a good trade.

Max Rotter, who was recently bitten by his dog, is on the road to recovery. He had the dog shot.

Carl Beyer is about again. His hand, into which he ran a rusty nail, is in good shape again. Luckily it was not his bowling hand.

A. G. Bentzen had the bouquets for the high school graduates, seventy-five in number, and Mrs. Ayers had the hall decorations at the Odean.

Alex Siegel has returned from his trip to Chicago. He is contemplating a fishing trip in the near future.

The transportation committee reports that indications are favorable for securing very satisfactory rates to Washington. The present plans are to go by way of Cincinnati over the B. & O. and from there travel with the Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis delegations to Washington. This should make a pleasant trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, spent Monday in St. Louis on their way home from the west. Mr. Vaughan during the day entertained a few of the local florists at a dinner to talk over S. A. F. matters. It was a very enjoyable affair. Among those present were Fred Meinhardt, Charles Juengel, Otto Koenig, Henry Berning, R. F. Tesson, Dr. A. S. Halstead, F. J. Fillmore and J. J. Beneke.

Bowling.

Five St. Louis florists journeyed down to DeSoto, Mo., last Saturday night as guests of the Hibbert Floral Co., and the Business Men's League. The bowling took place at the Y. M. C. A. alleys. We all had a good time. The DeSoto boys beat us fifty pins in the three games bowled and not until the last game did the boys get the hang of the alleys, which were fairly good. The only drawback was the light. The DeSoto boys will be entertained by us on the big bowling night, September 4, at the Palace alleys. The scores of the match were as follows:

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—While in Chicago this week Joe Tosini bought the material for two new greenhouses 16x80.

RITTERSVILLE, PA.—On June 15 fire did $500 damage to the home of John Horn. The greenhouses, a few feet away, were not injured.

BALDWINS, N. Y.—George T. Schuneman sails for Europe June 27 on the Kronprinz Wilhelm. He will spend a month in the vicinity of London, Paris and Berlin.

CARTHAGE, MO.—B. W. Specce reports trade very good this season. He has sold out of stock very cleanly and will have to stock up on many things. He lost about 100 panes of 10x12 glass in the recent hail storm but did not think the claim worth presenting to the Hail Association.

ONE cannot be anything but pleased with the REVIEW; the Special Number was a "beaut." Anything I can do to push a good thing along I will do with pleasure. H. P. LODING.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions have changed but little in the past week. Very large quantities of stock have been moved, for the June weddings and school affairs have made a great deal of extra business. Good stock has brought satisfactory prices, but so large a proportion of the receipts in most lines are below the standard that it is impossible to dispose of all of this class of material and averages are made very low.

The supplies of Beauties are no heavier than in the past two weeks and the call has been better, so this item is making a fair showing, considering the small buds and poor color of most of the cut. There are some very fine Liberties which are bringing good money. High grade Chatenay is seen but does not do as well. Kaiserin in the better grades brings a fair price because preferred to Bride. Both Bride and Maid are small and soft, typical summer stock, and the many rains and sudden changes in temperature have brought mildew upon the stock of all but the most careful growers. The short and mildewed stock can hardly be disposed of even by the boxful to the Greeks.

An unusual apathy has come over the carnation market. Receipts are not excessively large and quality is good for so late in the season, but there seems to be no demand for the flower. Accumulations are seen in most of the wholesale houses and very low averages are made. Sweet peas continue very abundant, but have sold fairly well. Valley is not so plentiful and brings fair money. Callas are frequently unobtainable but there are moderate supplies of Easter lilies and auratums are coming in.

The end of last week about cleaned up the peony crop, except for the cold storage stock, which will bloom in quantity these many days. There are so many peonies in storage that some dealers fear it will be impossible to clean up and they are sacrificing the lower grades of stock. Good peonies will, however, command the usual prices from now on. Sales at $1 per dozen for extra fancy stock were noted this week, but 50 cents is a good price generally. It appears that thus far in spite of the very low prices which peonies have brought for the past ten days, still the crop has brought better money than it did last year.

There are large quantities of outdoor flowers which meet with a very slow sale. Receipts of "green goods" are much larger and the stock in most instances is very good. Prices are weaker in this department.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the wholesalers last week accomplished nothing more than winding up the affairs of the teaming association. During the strike the wholesalers' teams handled nearly 8,000 boxes of "funeral flowers" at a total expense of $841.60. Is there another industry in Chicago which got off as cheaply? The expense was paid by the wholesalers in proportion to the number of boxes they shipped. The cost was between 11 and 12 cents per box.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. reports a very good run of wedding work this week.

A. Londenberg, of Hobart, Ind., was in town last week, purchasing building material for a new range of greenhouses to be erected at Valparaiso. The business there will be known as the Valparaiso Floral Exchange, A. Londenberg & Son, proprietors.

N. J. Wietor went north Saturday night for one of his periodical fishing expeditions. Other piscatorial enthusiasts in the market are Mrs. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn, and E. C. Amling.

A drug company from Detroit has made a lease on the old Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. store, which has been occupied for several months by Lubliner & Trinz.

E. C. Amling is handling some very good clematis and finds it a fair seller for wedding work.

Flint Kennicott has been laid up with the rheumatism, but is able to be about aided by a cane.

The John C. Moninger Co. says that the May business was the largest of any month in the history of the concern.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving some very fine auratums. Mr. Pieser says he has every confidence that peonies will sell out clean.

M. F. Freres, who was formerly manager of the Winandy wholesale store, is now doing a successful retail business at 816 Thome avenue.

A. C. Spencer, at Peter Reinberg's, says shipping trade is exceptionally good but that city trade is very light. He says it will be the best June Mr. Reinberg has ever had, beating the exceptionally heavy month of two years ago and running nearly fifty per cent to date ahead of last year.

During the strike Poehlmann Bros. Co. brought their stock to town in their own wagons. They liked the way it traveled but it took a good deal of time, so they tried an automobile. The auto made time but one day it got a hot box and stock was delayed until a wagon could be procured. Then, on a hot afternoon, a horse gave out. And now the stuff comes by train again.

Henry Koropp has sold his interest in the Sheridan Park Floral Co. to his cousin and partner, Leopold Koropp, who will continue the business. It is the old E. Asmus & Co. place. Henry Koropp has negotiations under way, and likely to be closed this week, for the purchase of the Albert Fuchs' place.

Percy Jones says that at the Growers' Market peonies are far and away the best selling item.

Leonard Kill is at Memphis for a few days on business.

Robert Northam is now with Joseph Foerster at George Reinberg's. They are handling a fine cut of Liberty. The way this rose has bloomed all season for Mr. Reinberg has been a great pleasure.

O. W. Frese has both hands tied up as the result of poisoning with rose thorns.

Club meeting tonight.

There have been a large number of visitors in town this week, due to a rate war between the western railroads, which were competing for the patronage of the Modern Woodmen, who have been in convention at Milwaukee. Among the many trade visitors were F. J. Olsan, Ames, Ia.; Jos. Tosini, Sioux Falls, S. D.; J. G. Crozier, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; J. R. Elder and daughter, Sioux City, Ia.; John Christiany, Sheldon, Ia.; A. F. Beyer, South Bend, Ind.; Peter Freeman, Aurora, Ill.; W. H. Culp, Wichita, Kan.; Mr. Emmons, of the Cedar Rapids Floral Co., Cedar Rapids, Ia.; C. S. Meek, Mt. Vernon, Ia.; W. M. Bomberger, Harlan, Ia., who was accompanied by his son from Lake Forest, Ill.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Much of the locally grown stock now coming into the market is of poor quality, necessitating our wholesalers drawing on more favored sections for certain varieties of flowers. The hot wave has hastened the downfall of tired-out plants and house after house is being thrown out to make room for young stock. Some good Kaiserins, valley and a few carnations are coming in. John Burton has some nice Chatenay, while W. & Harry F. Evans continue to send extra fine centaurea from the old Cox place to the Leo Niessen Co.

Newport and Westerly add their quota of good roses. There are still a few good gardenias, but orchids are about over. The quantity of poor carnations, Brides and Maids that are practically valueless is large. Sweet peas are so plentiful that the question of whether it pays to pick them is a problem at this busy time. Business has been good up to Tuesday, but the general feeling appears to be that it is over for the season.

A Parisian Episode.

A young Philadelphian went abroad recently. He met a very lovely lady on the steamer, with whom he chatted, or read, or promenaded the deck much of the time during the voyage. The girl's home was in Paris. When our townsman arrived there he went to the florist's shop and sent her some flowers. Fancy his amazement when her brother immediately challenged him to fight a duel on the ground that his sister had been insulted by having flowers sent to her. The young lady prevented the duel, explaining that the Philadelphians did not understand that it was not customary in France to send flowers to unmarried ladies. Many of the frequenters of the "Cafe," on hearing this story, wished fervently that such custom should prevail here. So do not I.

New Home of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

Their New Home.

A beautifully designed building with brown stone front, the air of quiet dignity of which attracts the passerby, is the new home of M. Rice & Co., at 1220 Race street. The moving is finished, all the supplies are unpacked and in their places, new importations are arriving and the force in various departments is working as industriously as though the firm had been there a year instead of one short week.

Through the courtesy of B. Eschner I am able to give the Review readers an impression of the building and its contents. Mr. Eschner proposed that we start at the top and come down, reversing our business axiom in this instance for sake of convenience. The fifth floor is 20x100 feet, with large windows at each end, high ceiling, good ventilation, is reached by a stairway, a freight elevator and is connected at the rear with the stairway in a fire-proof tower built entirely independent of the rest of the building. This general description applies to every floor. To it may be added self-closing doors, a neat toilet room and an elaborate protective system arranged to prevent accident as well as burglary. This floor is used as a storeroom, the goods being unloaded from Quarry street in the rear and run up on the freight elevator. The entire floor was full of supplies when I saw it. The fourth is also used as a storeroom and is identical with the fifth excepting in the variety of stock.

The third floor is used a workshop. Here a force of men were busily employed making wheat sheaves. The wheat, previously moistened, was laid on a long table, each worker having a pile before him from which he made up the sheaves with great dexterity. Racks nearby are used for drying the wheat. Here also the immortelle and metallic wreaths are made, as well as a variety of other work at which the employes in this department have become exceedingly expert, the foreman having been with M. Rice for sixteen years and several of the other men for periods nearly as long. Screens are another specialty. Some that were complete were being moved to the lower floor for display.

The second floor is used as a show room. Baskets in a profusion of styles are a feature. Great rows of beautiful fancy baskets were flanked, as the war correspondents say, by staple baskets, just one of each style, as a sample only, orders being filled from the stores above. The first floor is devoted to the ribbons, tastefully arranged in display cases on the left as you enter, the offices on the right and a great variety of supplies as a main army further back. Both this floor and the one above are fitted with roomy lockers under the cases or shelves. The offices are very convenient. A force of young women were hard at work in the front part, with the cashier at one end and the firm's private offices at the other. Adjoining are Bell and Keystone telephones with double doors so that each may be reached from the office as well as from the main part of the store. In the basement was a Mercer steam boiler, absestos covered, facing the coal bin right off the sidewalk and further back lots of space for packing cases. An electrician was at work putting the finishing touches on the electric lighting system. The whole building is admirably adapted to its purpose and is twice as large as its predecessor. I cannot close without telling you that both Stephen B. Greene and William Zirkmann were hard at work on the first floor.

Various Notes.

The Leo Niessen Co. will start the summer season July 1, when they will close at 6 p. m.

The statement made in this column last week concerning Robert Craig & Son was an error. Part but not all the creditors were paid off June 15 on the fifty per cent basis. The assignee, John Burton, is still in charge.

at Strawbridge & Clothier's. He supplied 20,000 roses, placing his order with Fred Ehret. The roses, all indoor grown, were given to the children. It is unusual for a grower to receive such an order, the purchaser's idea probably being to buy direct from the producer.

Hugh Graham had a very large wedding order on Tuesday.

The creditors of the late Mark Reeves met on Tuesday. The liabilities amount to $4,000. The assets are small. Mr. Reeves' son hopes to continue the business which has been carried on at 2032 N. Broad street.

The roof garden of the Bellevue-Stratford was opened this week. Habermehl's Sons placed a number of decorative plants and prettily filled vases.

Edward Reid's gladioli were a feature of the rolling chair parade at Atlantic City. He is strong on Kaiserins and carnations.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling some nice fancy ferns.

William J. Baker is receiving some nice valley. Truth will out.

John Westcott entertained a large party of friends at Watertown last Saturday and Sunday.

Two prosperous looking men were noticed in roller chairs on the Atlantic City board walk last Sunday. It was at first thought they were Pittsburg millionaires, possibly members of the glass trust, but closer investigation proved that one was our well known commission man, William J. Moore.

Augustus P. Dumont, father of H. T. Dumont, died last Sunday. He will be missed from his post in his son's store.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

40—I have paid two assessments of twenty-five per cent each on my Flower Market stock. I am now obliged to pay a third assessment of twenty-five per cent or have my stock sold under the hammer. Do you advise me to pay it?

Decidedly. I believe the stock has a future. If liquidated today you would receive practically what you have paid.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Something like midsummer dullness now reigns in the market and prices average the lowest of the year. In roses some very nice new crop Beauties are coming in. Top price for select stock is $20 per hundred. Brides and Maids are very poor. Many are sold at $1 per hundred, some less. There is a fair demand for stock selling at $4 to $5. Kaiserins and Carnots are selling quite well and are the best indoor roses on the market. Good stock brings $4 to $6, some extra select $8. Liberties are poor. Outdoor hybrids are unusually short-stemmed, owing to the dry season. Jacqs bring all the way from $1 to $4, the latter price for these with stems fifteen to eighteen inches long, of which there are only a limited number. Luizet, Brunner and other kinds sell at similar prices.

Carnations are in heavy oversupply. A good grade brings 75 cents, a few very select $1.50 to $2. Many go at 50 cents and large quantities as low as $2.50 per thousand. Sweet peas deteriorate in quality. Prices range from 25 to 50 cents, good whites selling best. Peonies are not in as good demand as last year and prices run quite low, $2 to $5 per hundred. Festiva maxima and delicate pink shades take best. The hot weather has sent these in with a rush and few will come in after the present week. Shirley and Iceland poppies and a promiscuous assortment of other flowers bring 25 cents a bunch, but are in uncertain demand.

Graduation bouquets will help the market somewhat this week and relieve the congestion.

June 17 being a legal holiday, known as Bunker Hill day, business was suspended in Boston. The market slumped badly in consequence.

Peony Exhibition.

The hot weather, which started in on June 14, brought peonies in with a rush and a very large exhibit was forthcoming at Horticultural Hall on June 17, the main exhibition hall being nearly filled, fully twice as many being staged as at the corresponding show in 1904. The Kelway silver gilt medal for eighteen varieties single or double went to H. A. Stevens Co. for a good assortment, very well staged. Miss A. M. Means won the bronze medal. There were several other entries. For thirty or more named double varieties T. C. Thurlow won with a fine table, H. A. Stevens Co. second, George Hollis third, and Dr. C. S. Minot fourth. For twelve named double varieties O. B. Hadwen took first with a fine lot, George Hollis being second. For specimen bloom double T. C. Thurlow was first and second with Mme. Bailanger and Lady Alexandra Duff.

T. C. Thurlow took first for collection of single varieties, George Hollis being second. The latter was first for twelve single Japanese varieties. The big china vase class for blooms on long stems was very attractive. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, won with a fine mixed assortment, Blue Hill Nurseries second, with Festiva maxima, and E. L. Lewis third.

There were numerous displays not for competition. E. J. Shaylor had a grand lot, including many new and choice sorts. He received certificates of merit for Germain Bigot and Mme. Treyeran and honorable mention for M. Martin Cahuzac. Other choice sorts included were Mme. Geissler, Mme. Emile Lemoine, Octavie Demay, a grand shell pink variety with thread-like petals; Lady Alexandra Duff, La Rosiere and Mme. de Vatry. T. C. Thurlow received a certificate of merit for White Lady, a fine single white Japanese. He showed a splendid collection of named double and single sorts. George Hollis had a fine lot of seedlings and many good standard sorts. Whitleyi plena and Mme. Bouchalet were especially good. Dr. C. S. Minot among other good things had Charles Sedgwick Minot, Langport Queen, A. Hyatt, Jules Elie, Summer Day and Claire Dubois. Farquhar & Co. had a display of Festiva maxima. W. A. Riggs showed a table of double varieties, as did Mrs. E. M. Gill. The latter also showed hybrid roses. Julius Heurlin, from Blue Hill Nurseries, had peonies and a splendid collection of seventy-five varieties of herbaceous perennials. E. A. Wood had peonies and oriental poppies. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener, staged 100 vases of rhododendrons. W. Heustis & Son had a collection of branches of flowering shrubs, including a pretty pink form of Rosa multiflora.

The interest taken in peonies seems to be steadily on the increase. They are already more popular than hardy roses and their future prospects are bright. A good deal of increased interest in this beautiful and showy hardy plant must be credited to the American Peony Society which we are glad to know will meet here next year.

Various Notes.

A delegation from the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of Dr. C. S. Minot, of Readville, on June 15 to inspect his peony garden. The garden is arranged for color effect. The beds have grass paths between them. About 290 varieties are grown, including many choice sorts. The visitors were greatly pleased with the garden, which is probably one of the most unique of its kind in America. Rosa grandiflora was especially fine, forming a bush ten feet high. Many other interesting native plants were noted.

Wm. R. Nicholson has been quite ill for the past two weeks, but is now convalescing nicely.

At the estate of Walter Hunnewell, in Wellesley, T. D. Hatfield has at present a magnificent display of Miltonia vexillaria, probably the finest plants of this orchid to be seen in America.

A field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held at the establishment of William Sim, in Cliftondale, on July 1. All members of the two flower markets, whether club members or not, are cordially invited to be present.

The garden committee of the Horticultural Society visited West Newbury to inspect the system of evergreen hedges for shelters and windbreaks in the nursery of T. C. Thurlow. They also examined the extensive collection of peonies. The fine estate of F. S. Moseley, in Newburyport, was also visited.

W. J. Stewart is away on a fishing excursion.

Members of the executive committee of the Rose Society who visited Hartford on June 19, report a splendid time and state that they were royally entertained in the Connecticut city.

Since June 14 we have had a number of days 90 degrees in the shade. Indications are that the rose show on June 24 and 25 will hardly be up to last year's average. Many flowers are short-stemmed and pests are unusually rife among them.

John Barr, of South Natick, and Wm. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, are busy at work on new residences for themselves.

Galvin has had a large number of wedding decorations this month.

Doyle had a nice window decoration of gloxinias, pink hydrangeas and large vases of Spanish iris the past week.

There was a big attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on June 20. M. H. Walsh's paper on roses was most interesting and led to an animated discussion. A number of new members were elected. Refreshments consisting of strawberries, cream, etc., were served and excellent music was enjoyed. The next meeting occurs in September. W. N. Craig.

A Visitor's View.

We made a trip last week to the City of Monuments, and we must say that the Boston park system is really grand. The Public Garden is kept more like a private place and we saw there a bed of rhododendrons second to none.

We went through Welch Bros.' wholesale establishment and we were shown some beautiful Carnot roses. Golden Gate and Ivory are sold as substitutes of Carnot. Carnations are plentiful. There were at the time about 20,000 in the refrigerators. Their average receipt of carnations is 30,000 per day. We saw very few Lawsons, since light colors are preferred. We were told that Queen is the best white for Boston. Prosperity is the best seller, but the demand cannot be supplied. We were shown some Adiantum Croweanum and Adiantum cuneatum. Where cuneatum sells at 75 cents to $1, Croweanum sells from $1 to $1.50. Mr. Welch had some valley with 18-inch stems, the best we ever saw. A great deal of stock from this establishment is shipped to Vermont and New Hampshire.

At Thos. F. Galvin's store we saw the yellow calla lily and we believe it will be very popular before long, as it is a beautiful flower. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Sunday and Monday New York and vicinity were enduring about the hottest June days on record. In fact in many places on Monday up to noon it was 100 degrees in the shade and 110 degrees in the new subway, the breath of which was like a blast from, well, one of Andrew Carnegie's furnaces in Pittsburg, the memory of which still lingers with those who attended the S. A. F. convention there. Imagine the condition of the stock arriving. Most of the roses open and, with the exception of special Brides, offered at almost any price and even then impossible to move. The market has stolidly settled down to its summer dullness and there is nothing left with which to lift it before September. The street has been simply flooded with peonies. I saw fine ones offered at 75 cents a hundred Monday evening, with no takers.

And southern gladioli, the North Carolina brand, case after case of it, with even 50 cents a hundred an insufficient inducement to clear the market of this early intrusion on the regular order of things. The solid south is no inconsequential factor in current horticulture nowadays and it is knocking at the doors of its northern brethren of bulbous proclivities with no uncertain sound. The gladiolus stock is from the bulbs of the growers of the north, who have a national reputation, and we can find no fault with it. Moreover, it is likely to last, they say, until our own growers begin their tremendous shipments. So endeth for 1905 the possibility of raising values beyond 50 cents per hundred, and evidently there will be enough gladioli to daily supply every man, woman and child of our 4,000,000 population.

Roses are not only open, but lots of them are mildewed. Carnations maintain their quality and our abundant commencements will make the end of the month lively and a few weddings have

SPRAYING

If all growers could realize that by this method and the use of

they can absolutely destroy and prevent Thrips, don't you think they would always have some on hand ?

To-Bak-Ine Liquid, a 45 Per Cent Solution of Pure Nicotine

WILL POSITIVELY DO THE WORK.

Mr. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, says: "In three applications of spraying we destroyed all the Thrips in a 300 foot Bride house."

Mr. Baur says: "Send for a can of To-Bak-Ine Liquid and apply it according to directions every evening for a week and then three times weekly until your plants are clean."—Carnation Notes in the Florists' Review, May 25, 1905.

"I feel I cannot recommend this nicotine extract (To-bak-Ine Liquid) too strongly. It fills a want that was felt for years, for something that would keep down Thrips effectively and in fact all insect pests."—Carnation Notes in the Florists' Review, May 18, 1905.

been left over that help out wonderfully with the surplus. The steamers, as usual, pass out laden with floral love tokens and between the heat and the increased mortality caused by the heart breaking air of the subway, those who make funeral pieces are kept busy.

Various Notes.

Croweanum is finding a new outlet at J. K. Allen's, who handles a lot of this splendid fern daily.

William Duncan, treasurer of the Cut Flower Exchange, is now manager and Thos. Jackson, a florist of Lexington avenue, has been appointed janitor.

The auctions are on their last legs for this season. A week or two more and the melodious voices of the criers will be silent. Both Cleary's and Elliott's have had an excellent season and the general public has been constantly and largely in evidence. Elliott will have a big sale of palms, etc., on June 27.

N. Lecakes, the "green goods" and water lily expert, is back from Athens with his bride. He thinks Mars Hill cannot touch West Twenty-eighth street and New York is good enough to stay in now. There are very few old bachelors left in the wholesale district and if rumor is correct there will be two or three less before snow flies again.

A comfortable pick-up was that made by John Weir last week, $14,500 for an unexpired lease, showing again that it is the early bird that catches the sucker and the worm. But lower Fulton street, Brooklyn, will not lose its old standby. Mr. Weir will open further down in larger form and style than ever and from present outlook "Johnny" will be, as usual, on deck from 3 a. m. to midnight, as he has been during the past thirty years or more.

C. W. Ward has been in Chicago for a week and will be in the west until the end of June.

Geo. Stumpp and family are spending the summer in Germany, having left a week ago for their usual stopping place there.

The trade manifests its sympathy with S. S. Butterfield in the severe illness of his wife and learns with pleasure of the hope of her ultimate recovery.

John Scott, of Flatbush, has settled down to suburban life in his new home, close to his new greenhouses, and is a busy man these days with his building and shipping.

On June 28 Miss Bella A. Young and W. L. Jones, the florist of Nutley, N. J., will be married.

The Frank Bros., florists of Third avenue, are away on their annual fishing cruise.

Siebrecht & Son had a big wedding at Princeton last week and among the cut flowers used were 1,500 of their own growing of the popular Killarney rose. Judging by the demand for the young plants in the east there will be plenty of this beautiful variety to go around another year. This season the supply has not been sufficient.

All the retailers report a splendid season to date and those with branches at Newport are already busy there. The window displays of late have been brilliant with peonies.

Another retailer has hung out his shingle on Broadway, close to the big Hippodrome. He is Charles Grant, a graduate of J. H. Small & Sons. There is always room in New York.

Treasurer Schenck reports very encouraging responses for the New York Club's outing next week Wednesday. Those who have not already written him of their intention to go should telegraph him immediately on reading this, that perfect arrangements may be made for the comfort of all, both on the boat and at beautiful Glenwood, one of the prettiest resorts on the sound. The sail will be a long one, the facilities for all kinds of enjoyment perfect, and with a fine day the attendance should be far in excess of any holiday in the club's history. The program provides for about thirty athletic contests, some of them unique and one mysterious.

Interest is growing in the S. A. F. convention. The attendance from New York will be large. The bowling team at Washington will be shy if more interest is not taken in the Friday night practice. Very few were present last week. Guttman and Manda make fine averages and will surely be among the official team members. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

GRANDVILLE, MICH.—In the recent flood the Stover Floral Co. lost all its carnations in the field, some 5,000 plants, in the back water from the Grand river.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

J. C. VAUGHAN and Mrs. Vaughan have returned to Chicago after an absence of several months.

THE Nebraska vine seed growers report average acreages and weather conditions thus far not unfavorable.

NOT within the memory of the oldest gardeners has market gardening in the Chicago district been so continuously retarded by rains as in the present season.

Late accounts from Germany mention some unseasonably cold weather and a deficiency of moisture; but crops are said to look promising on the whole, in spite of being a little backward. Some rain had fallen, but more was needed.

THE Holloway Seed & Floral Co., of Dallas, Tex., has been incorporated with capital stock $25,000. Purpose, growing and selling of seeds, plants, etc. Incorporated by R. C. Bryant, W. M. Robinson and C. W. Robinson.

THE Joosten Plant, Bulb & Seed Co., New York, has been incorporated to grow and deal in plants, bulbs, seeds, etc.; capital, $10,000. Incorporators: George A. Joosten and Ernest Schoepke, both of No. 202 West street, New York; William H. Thompson, No. 171 Broadway, New York.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., June 21.—The report here is that while considerable injury has without doubt resulted from the floods in the Wisconsin pea district, yet the damage is not so great as might have been expected and does not warrant sensational reports. Beans in Michigan are getting a fair start.

CALIFORNIA SEED NOTES.

Some of the bean growers along the lower portion of the Sacramento river are inclined to believe that the season will be after all a prosperous one, notwithstanding reports to the contrary that have been published recently. It is stated that less than half a crop has been planted to date and that the output will exceed that of former years, with a prospect of good prices to be paid. On Grand, Tyler and Andrus islands the growers are busily engaged in planting beans, and a few of the farmers are preparing to plant beans as soon as the standing barley is cut. G.

SEEDSMEN'S CONVENTION.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., June 21.—There was a goodly gathering at the Crossman House yesterday for the twenty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association. The attendance is quite satisfactory to those in charge, although for one reason or another a number of well known faces are absent. The spot is an ideal one for a gathering of this kind, the weather cool and the breeze refreshing, so that coming at the end of a successful season for all departments of the trade, it has put vim and enthusiasm into everyone.

On Tuesday President Page's address was followed by routine business, including the reports of secretary, treasurer and standing committees, the election of new members and the reading of several of the papers on what is generally conceded to be an exceptionally interesting program. Albert McCullough, chairman of the membership committee, introduced a discussion on increasing or restricting membership which brought out some lively expressions of opinion.

The election of officers does not take place until Thursday and on Wednesday morning no other name than that of L. L. May, of St. Paul, had been mentioned for the presidency.

The Wholesale Seedsmen's League will hold its annual meeting on Friday morning.

FREE SEED DISTRIBUTION.

Secretary Wilson, in his eighth annual report to the president, just published in the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, says of the congressional seed distribution:

As pointed out in my previous reports, constant efforts are being made toward the improvement of methods of securing and handling the general seeds for congressional distribution. Improved appliances have been perfected for the mechanical work, and improved methods have been adopted for securing the seed. The work is now all under the direct supervision of efficient officers of the Bureau of Plant Industry. Every effort is being made to improve the quality of the seed by securing pure stocks. Extensive work is being conducted in the matter of a critical study of varieties under different conditions of soil and climate. Testing gardens for this purpose have been established in a number of localities, and the work is under the supervision of a thoroughly competent horticulturist. Every effort is being made to encourage home seed growing. Practically all of the vegetable seed now distributed by the Department is grown in the United States. A few years ago nearly all of the flower seed, except sweet peas, was imported. Now fully seventy-five per cent is grown here, through the encouragement offered by the Department in this work.

In the handling of this enormous work the necessity for strict business methods has been fully observed. The work of handling one branch only of this problem involves the securing of more than twenty-five car-loads of special seed, and the testing, packeting and mailing of this large quantity to all parts of the United States. The systematizing of all the operations has been so perfected that there is little or no friction at the present time.

THE LONDON LETTER.

At last rain. English seed growers have been longing for a change from cold easterly drying days, with warm sunshine or southeasterly breezes and burning sun. Stocks, asters, marigold, lobelias, mimulus, etc., have existed, but made little headway. It is a cold rain from the northeast, but, being in the form of a steady downpour, is yet most invigorating. Spare growing annuals on dry lands were giving out through the drought.

Nicotiana Sanderæ was in superb form at our recent Temple flower show. A large batch of plants, conspicuous for the great size of their blossoms and the varied brilliancy of their colors was shown by Sander & Co. This is "the" new annual of the present year. Schizanthus Wisetonensis was in excellent form, the markings on some of the flowers quite orchid-like. But to do the latter justice it must be grown under glass in this country.

The grand new Meconopsis integrifolia which Veitch & Sons are distributing, is the great novelty of the season among hardy plants, and it must be proving a veritable gold mine for the distributors, for plants and seeds both are in great demand. Its excellent habit of growth and stout stems, supporting large yellow tulip-like flowers, allied to its hardy character, make it a general favorite. A later form more recently introduced has crimson flowers but they droop at the points of the flower stems, which makes it less effective.

A new break in shrubby calceolarias put in appearance at the Temple show. They come from J. Jefferies, a seedsman at Oxford. They were of tall growth but of distinctly perennial habit. A good deal has to be done in the way of improving the strain before it can hope to achieve popularity. It is a coincidence that just fifty years ago a distinct strain of dwarf growing shrubby calceolarias was produced in this country, and put into commerce, but the plants did not capture the horticultural fancy. But good use was made of the pollen of some of them for cross fertilizing the soft-wooded herbaceous section, and a great improvement in constitutional vigor resulted. The new strain just introduced may probably be made to serve a similar useful purpose.

Onion seeds proved a very tantalizing aspect of the wholesale seed trade during the past season, for there was an unprecedented demand for seeds, and the stocks in hand showed a very great shortage, while the dry bulbs realized two and three times their usual value. The fact is that many who have made a point of growing for a seed supply found that they could get a good price for bulbs and instead of holding them over for planting, sold them. Bedfordshire was at one time the great seed grounds for seeds, of the White Spanish onion in particular, but since the new and improved varieties, such as Ailsa Craig, Cranston's Excelsior, etc., have become so much cultivated, the demand for the more common sorts fell away materially and but comparatively small quantities are now grown in Bedfordshire. The seedsmen all say they are carrying over very small stocks of seed; so the home supply will depend in a great measure upon what the foreigner is able to send us. He is now growing the finest English strains for seeds and he has the advantage of living in a more equable climate.

By means of hybridization and careful cross fertilization, Primula obconica has undergone great development in late years, and especially in increased size of the flowers, and in the evolution of new and rich colors. The latest development is from a cross between P. obconica and P. megasæfolia: the result a very fine and brilliant form to be known as Primula x arendi. V. M. H.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Weddings and commencements have kept most of the retailers very busy the past week and have given them no end of trouble, as most of the buyers are not regular flower buyers and therefore do not know what to expect at this time of the year and seem to think they should be able to get fine stock as long as they are willing to pay for it. But the hot weather put the fine stock out of business. In the wholesale houses they have had no trouble in disposing of all the good stock they could get, but the amount of "crap" which was unsalable would disgust anyone who had to handle it. However, considering the season, there is not much cause for complaint.

The plantsmen have now finished for this year and most of them admit having had a very fair season. All report that good stock sold at good prices.

Various Notes.

Mike Blaha is confined to his bed, suffering from a bad case of poison ivy contracted while gathering ferns the past week.

The committee who have charge of the florists' picnic has decided on a ride on the good steamer Francis Torrance. The boat will leave the foot of Wood street at 8:30 a. m., rain or shine, Wednesday, July 12, and run up to Moss' grove, where there will be athletic sports of all kinds. Many useful and beautiful prizes have already been subscribed. The committee are hustlers and there is no doubt about a good time and, even should it rain, the boat will go that much farther up the river and the dancing floor is the best in the country. Amusements of many kinds are being provided for. The committee especially wants the members to bring their wives and children, and those who have no wives should bring their sweethearts. There are to be some special features for the ladies and children.

Phil Langhans, of the Cut Flower Co., is a noted fisherman and will provide fishing tackle for all who care to fish, but you will have to do your own swearing, for he is a Lutheran.

L. I. Neff is consigning the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. some fine hardy phlox and Rambler sprays which seem to fill in nicely for June decorations.

The warm weather and numerous rains have made the various parks look cleaner and greener than usual, in fact they never looked better. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Business the past week has been fair for this time of the year and receipts have been very large. This was not unexpected, as the season is at hand when such conditions usually prevail. Outdoor roses are commencing to come in and will soon be plentiful. There are large cuts of carnations and the quality in general is right, although there is much of inferior quality. Some of them bring 75 cents per dozen, retail, while the common price is 35 and 50 cents. There is a big supply of sweet peas and good stock sells fairly well. Lavender, pink and white have first call. Peonies are very plentiful and many retailers are using them freely for window display. The hot weather affects the American Beauty and, while there is still some select stock, the most of them are poor.

Quite a number of social affairs took place last week, especially the University Club ball, there being quite a number of dinners given before the dance, which called for quite a lot of first-class stock, such as Beauties, peonies and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

The Park Floral Co. is erecting three connected houses, each 17x50, using the King steel gutter, with glass 18x18. The range is to be planted with carnations in solid beds.

E. J. Reynolds, of the Scott Floral Co., is spending his vacation at Grand Lake, Colo.

D. S. Grimes, of D. S. Grimes & Son, florists, and of Fairview Avenue Nursery, is very low with gangrene at the Homeopathic Hospital. They report there is no hope for his recovery.

One of the attractions along the Moffat railroad is the flowers that bloom by the acre along the tracks. The white and yellow primrose, Mariposa lily and other beautiful blooms are springing up from the sod in large numbers, some of them growing up through the snow. One of the most beautiful sights of the summer in the mountains is to see the flowers that dot the sunny slopes of the hills as far as the eye can reach. The beautiful blue columbine, the Colorado state flower, is more plentiful than ever before. This road runs a flower excursion every Sunday and many of the passengers are loaded with huge armfuls of these beautiful mountain flowers. E. S. K.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

This city has been visited by another storm, hail and rain, regular cloud bursts, carrying ruin and destruction in its path, damaging railroads, causing washouts and flooding the west side of Grand Rapids for ten days. Schools were closed, factories stopped running and on the main streets basement stores hastily moved out when the water rushed in. For a week, unless over the Detroit division of the Michigan Central, or the G. R. & I. south, no express could be moved, as the roads were all tied up with washouts, entailing heavy losses on the growers, who were unable to fill out-of-town orders. Henry Smith was probably the heaviest shipping loser, while Cross, Strong, Chadwick and others were also unable to fill shipping orders. Crabb & Hunter suffered the heaviest on this occasion. At the Lake plant, Silver Creek backed up and flooded about ten acres of their farm, taking in a portion of their carnation patch, about three acres, entailing a loss of about $700 on drowned-out stock and their loss on shipping orders about $300, making a net loss of $1,000. The weather has turned very hot and everything is suffering in consequence.

A large trade was done in bedding stock, which are now sold out, and the tearing down and rebuilding of benches preparatory to planting mums and roses is going merrily along. Mildew is in evidence on the roses, as firing has ceased and the changeable weather is favorable for mildew. Business continues good, particularly outside shipping, and roses are scarce, with carnations in large supply.

Max Goeble was held up by footpads at the lake, head smashed, gold watch and $15 in money taken. G. F. C.

New Castle, Pa.—Miss Elsie Beck, daughter of J. J. Beck, is quite seriously ill.

Davenport, Ia.—Charles Dannacher has sold his residence to George Hoehn, cashier of the First National Bank, for a reported consideration of $6,500. He contemplates removing to the west.

PACIFIC COAST.

Melrose, Cal.—Charles Germann and Emil Wagner have dissolved partnership. Mr. Wagner will carry on the business.

Loomis, Cal.—Johnson & Taylor resold the California Carnation Co., on June 11, to A. Mitting and H. McGowan, from whom they bought it a few months ago. The company, under the name of A. Mitting, is starting a branch establishment at Santa Cruz.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Victoria is the principal flower growing center in this district. We ship to Vancouver and to Seattle in large quantities. Vancouver is a town of only some 22,000 inhabitants, but there must be 300,000 square feet of glass in the vicinity devoted to cut flowers. We have more sun in the winter than the surrounding towns and this accounts in part for the great amount of shipping trade. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is quiet enough here to suit anyone. We are having cool weather and there is a noticeable improvement in the texture and color of both roses and carnations over those we generally get at this season. I saw some of the best Beauties I have noticed this summer in Pelicano's windows this week. They were from Burlingame and spoke well for the season. Brides and Maids are not of extra size, although the stems are good and the color perfect. Carnations are as good as it is possible to have them and outside of fancy stock they do not net the growers over 20 cents per dozen. Lilies are plentiful but Bride gladiolus is becoming scarcer. The garden varieties of gladioli are beginning to be seen more plentifully. Dahlias are also being sent in by the growers. But to return to business. It is very scarce and will be so for several months to come. A few of our dealers are putting signs in their windows such as "Special Prices Today," "Carnations, 25 cents per dozen," and other cheap looking placards, which in my estimation do not help matters and give the store a poor advertisement at the same time. The general run of the public seem to know just about what flowers are really worth and buy accordingly and for the most part it only attracts the trade to which the street fakirs cater and from whom the florists derive no paying business.

Various Notes.

Delegations will meet from the California State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society to arrange for a joint flower show next fall.

John Jack, gardener to Wm. Babcock, of San Rafael, is erecting three carnation houses.

F. Ludemann has a splendid stand of young rose stock to bud this season. Owing to the late spring rains they are much larger and stronger than usual.

Prof. Wickson, of the Botanical Department of the State University, has been invited to deliver an address in Santa Rosa in honor of Luther Burbank.

Several local dealers will plant heavily of freesias for the coming season. Rees & Compere, of Long Beach, are supplying the bulbs.

Sievers & Boland report the best June business ever done by their house.

Geo. Pape, of Berkeley, is very busy at present with greenhouse construction. He has several large contracts on hand for private conservatories.

The Avenue Florists, of 409 Montgomery avenue, have established a new branch of the trade here, by commencing the manufacture of wheat sheaves. They are turning out a very good article and expect in time to supply the local trade in that line.

Adolph Schmidt, gardener at the Santa Fe railroad's stations in Oakland and Berkeley, has made a wonderful improvement in their grounds during the past season. Mr. Schmidt was formerly gardener to Paul de Longpré, of Los Angeles.

D. H. Lenox, the Los Angeles nurseryman, has returned home after a short visit here. G.

NATURAL HOT WATER.

I would like to know how many 1-inch pipes are needed, and where to put them, in a propagating house eight feet wide, with a bench three feet wide on each side. The heat comes from a natural hot spring, the water of which is 196 degrees and which will flow continually through the pipes. The climate is that of southern California. A. L. H.

I judge that six 1-inch pipes arranged under each bench of the propagating house would provide the desired temperature. L. C. C.

TROUBLE WITH SEEDLINGS.

Growers of ornamental trees and plants have had poor success with raising young stock from seed this season. On all sides I have heard complaints that hardy trees and shrubs that usually germinate readily have failed to show themselves and several sowings have been made before a stand was secured. This is due to a great extent, I think, to our peculiar spring season. We had very warm weather in March and cold weather in April and May and I found that it was almost impossible to handle many of my seedlings without their damping off. Even when I watered very sparingly it was very difficult to keep them erect. Every week during the past two months we usually have about one warm day and the extremes made it harder than ever.

Another fact I noticed in examining seeds of various kinds was that last year was a poor season for the development of fertile seed. I have examined many varieties of conifers, acacia, eucalyptus and other hardy trees and found that the seeds in many cases were barren and a large percentage very poorly developed. This fact may have escaped the notice of many dealers and could also account in a great measure for their want of success.

Speaking of seed and seed-gathering from seed-bearing trees grown here, the people who gather much of it make the mistake in picking and shelling seeds from the first year pods instead of taking only those from the second year. It is possible in the case of conifers and eucalyptus to make such seeds grow if everything is favorable but the chances are decidedly against successful germination and hardy seedlings. Usually only a small proportion of the seeds amount to anything and the planter thinks the seed was too old instead of too young. This rule holds good with a great many varieties of shrubs and trees and is not usually taken advantage of by the ordinary collector of seeds. G.

TOMATOES.

The time is just about at hand when seed will have to be sown for the first crop of the season. If plants are to be had ready for planting early in September, seed sowing should not be delayed much later than the first of July. We make this sowing in cold frames in preference to flats. In frames a closer atmosphere more genial to the germination of the seed, can be kept, better than in a greenhouse, and a more equable moisture of the soil can be maintained without being so carefully or closely watched.

In the early stages of their growth tomatoes are not very particular regarding soil but it is just as well to prepare a soil for them from which they can be lifted with most of the roots intact and with enough soil adhering to insure against much check when they are lifted and transferred to the pots. Such a soil should neither be too stiff nor too heavy. We find, for almost any soil, a liberal addition of leaf-mold or thoroughly decomposed stable manure is as good as anything to give the desired texture.

The seeds should be sown in rows to facilitate lifting and they should not be sown too thickly. If, however, any doubts exist regarding the germinating power of the seed, all the more seed will have to be used. It is better to make sure of this and if the seed should come up thicker than desired, it is quite a simple matter to thin out the seedlings before they have attained much size. They should be thinned sufficiently to allow the individual plants plenty of room to grow, without drawing, until they are large enough to be transplanted into 3½-inch or 4-inch pots.

After the seedlings are well up the sash can be gradually removed until they are left fully exposed both night and day. This gives a nice, sturdy growth from the start, which we find proves of material advantage to the plants in their later stages of growth.

The soil used for potting should be much the same as that in which the seed was sown and it is of the utmost importance that the inside of the pots be clean. From clean pots the plants can be transferred without danger of injuring the roots when the time for repotting arrives, when if set in pots that are dirty inside the roots cling so to the sides of the pot, that a large number of the best roots are broken in attempting to get them out.

After potting the frame is still the best place for the plants to be left, the sash being put on and the plants shaded for a few days until they have taken a hold of the fresh soil, when the sash should be gradually removed as before. Here we leave the plants until they are large enough to be repotted into 6-inch pots, after which potting we find it best to take them into the greenhouse.

The Market.

Very brisk business has marked the past week. Commencement exercises at our schools have created a big demand and all the shops had their hands full of business. Prices in most instances have held up well. Stock is not as good as might be expected and really good stock is hard to get. A number of large weddings are on the cards for next week, which will about end the season's work. The market is being flooded with outdoor flowers. Sweet peas are so abundant that they sell for from 10 to 15 cents per hundred. Daisies fetch only 10 cents per hundred. White stuff has been hard to get, and it seems that is the color most called for now. The growers have disappeared from the market and will not be seen until next spring.

Various Notes.

Miss M. Dalley reports business as excellent the past week. She is carrying a large line of stock.

We understand that Geo. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, is adding 150,000 feet to his already extensive range. Mr. Kellogg is meeting with a deserved success in his numerous undertakings.

W. L. Rock is doing an immense business these days and we understand is contemplating some large improvements at his range.

A visit to the greenhouses of Samuel Murray shows that he has done an enormous business this spring, judging by the appearance of his place out on Prospect.

Miss J. Murray is doing very good work these days and has some very fine stock on display. NARCISSUS.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The tornado June 17 did considerable damage to stock at the Mayville nursery of L. L. May & Co.

THE American Association of Park Superintendents will hold its annual convention at Buffalo June 28 to 30. A trip to Rochester is planned for July 1.

THE southern nurseries find that their stock, particularly budded peach trees, was not injured so much by the late frosts as had been feared. There will be good quantities of year-old trees for fall.

THE Spencer Seedless Apple Co. of New England and New Jersey has been incorporated in the state of New York, the main office being at Plattsburgh, to grow and deal in Spencer seedless apple trees; capital, $300,000. Incorporators: Ervine D. York, Flushing, N. Y.; Horatio S. Byrne, Dyckman street; Francis M. Whitney, No. 71 Broadway, both of New York.

NURSERYMEN'S CONVENTION.

As briefly reported in the REVIEW of last week, the thirtieth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen was held at West Baden, Ind., June 14 to 16 and brought out the largest attendance in the history of the society. The total attendance, including members and non-members, was estimated to have been close to 400 and the only factor which detracted from the complete success of the meeting was the excessively hot weather. The meeting happened to fall upon the hottest days known in June for many years and the humidity was something frightful, with the result that the interest in the business sessions was detracted from to a very marked degree.

It was impossible to keep the members in their seats to listen to the long program of essays and discussions provided by the energetic and assiduous Mr. Kelsey. The result was that at the last moment the program was pruned according to the Stringfellow method. The distinguished gentlemen from the Department of Agriculture at Washington were well received and given fair audiences, particularly Dr. Moore, who discussed soil inoculation for leguminous crops. Assistant Secretary Willis M. Hays and Prof. Hedgecock were also most interesting speakers and their presence did much to establish more cordial relations between the great governmental department and the nursery interests. Dr. Hedgecock's address was closely listened to, as it related to diseases which every nurseryman must fight.

C. J. Malloy, of Ellwanger & Barry, was also given a good audience for his remarks on the prices of ornamental stock, which all agreed are too low. H. C. Bird discussed methods by which cost could be determined and it was the general view that an effort should be made toward the improvement of grades in order that better prices may be procured.

When it came to the selection of a place of meeting the question "Is it hot enough for you?" was answered in the negative, for a young man from Dallas made such an entertaining talk that the convention voted almost unanimously to go to Texas in June next year.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Emory Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; vice-president, Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; secretary, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; treasurer, Emory Albertson.

(President American Association of Nurserymen.)

C. L. Yates, Rochester. The two latter have held their offices for a number of years.

The election of Mr. Albertson as the head of the society was a well earned honor. He has for some years been the chairman of the transportation committee of the association and has done much good work in behalf of all nursery interests. He is the senior partner of the firm owning what is said to have been the development from the first nursery established in Indiana, by Oliver Albertson, in 1845. This was in Washington county, but the business was removed to Marion county in 1875. Three hundred acres are now included in the establishment and the force includes about eighty men during the busy season. The vice-president is the head of one of the largest wholesale nurseries in the country and the largest in Maryland. He has been mayor of Berlin in recent years.

There was a rather larger trade display than usual. The most interesting feature, however, was a grafting machine, which was closely inspected by every member.

The entertainment was unusually hospitable. Before and after the convention many of the visitors made trips to the nurseries in southern Indiana and on Saturday a considerable party went to Mammoth Cave, Ky., while others went to Chicago to see the peony exhibition.

During the convention the protective associations held their annual meetings, listened to eminently satisfactory reports by secretaries and treasurers, and re-elected officers.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Will you kindly tell us if the Bordeaux mixture made of sulphate of copper and ammonia, the same as used for carnation rust, etc., will be good for spraying fruit trees and what proportion should be used? Would there be any danger of burning the foliage if Paris green were added to the mixture? A. S.

The Bordeaux mixture is the principal fungicide used in treating fruit trees for scab, rot, mildew and other diseases. Its regular application insures better plants and more perfect fruit. The regular formula for making it is: Sulphate of copper, six pounds; fresh lime, four pounds; water to make fifty gallons. We make it as follows: Fill a barrel half full of water. Place copper sulphate in a coarse cheese-cloth bag and suspend near the top of the water. In another barrel place the unslaked lime. Add a small quantity of water and keep adding and stirring well until properly slaked. When the lime is cool, pour it through a fine sieve into the copper solution. It is then ready to use.

The first spraying for fruit trees should be given when the buds are swelling. The Bordeaux mixture at the above strength is usually sufficient for this application. A second spraying before the flowers open is essential. At this time it is well to add four ounces of Paris green to the Bordeaux for canker worms, bud moths or any other pests attacking apples, pears and plums. A similar spraying should be given after the flowers have fallen and still another a fortnight later. We think four sprayings are necessary to secure best results but many only give two or three.

There is no danger of burning foliage when Paris green at the strength recommended is used with the Bordeaux. For grapes, Bordeaux may be used by itself for all applications, also for cherries, kerosene emulsion being used in addition to keep aphis in check. The subscriber will find that it pays to spray with Bordeaux mixture and fruits thus treated are always more salable and net higher prices than those unsprayed. W. N. C.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

It is nothing if not hot in this city. The effect on stock can easily be imagined. Of roses there are scarcely any at all. A few Beauties and a few scrubs of other varieties are all that are seen. Carnations are in larger supply and those from the north are gone for the season. Home-grown stock is very poor for the most part. The demand is good and prices also. The call for roses is good but orders cannot be filled.

Other stock such as lilies of all kinds in season, sweet peas, candytuft, feverfew, balsams, etc., are plentiful and sell moderately well. Peonies are about over and sell very slowly. "Green goods" are plentiful enough. The new crop of eastern ferns is now in and is very good.

Various Notes.

Invitations to the ladies are out for the entertainment given by George & Allan and D. Rusconi on June 29. Everybody is talking about this event and there will be a great crowd present.

J. W. Rodgers is having a nice cut of carnations. He always makes a success of summer carnations.

"Billy" Gardner spent a few days in New Castle, Ind., last week.

J. B. Braidwood, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was a visitor. He is taking a trip through the country visiting the various greenhouse establishments.

C. J. Ohmer.

North Tonawanda, N. Y.—The Niagara Cement & Concrete Co. is preparing to turn over its patent greenhouse bench to a new corporation.

Rutherford, N. J.—Sander & Son, of Bruges, Belgium, have named an azalea for Julius Roehrs. It has large bright scarlet flowers and is well liked in the London market.

Hillside, Mich.—Carl Hirsch, who is the Lake Shore railroad florist, is planning the largest pansy bed in the state at Baw Beese park. It is eighty-five feet in circumference and is raised to a height of about four feet in the highest place.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Emil Schwenk was arrested recently for stealing wire frames from graves in Union cemetery and on his statement as to what he did with the designs two florists were arrested charged with receiving stolen property.

WINONA, MINN.

Fuhlbruegge Bros., who suffered heavy loss by fire on the morning of May 2, have now fully recovered from the effects of the fire and are better fixed than ever before. Soon after the fire a large crew of carpenters were set to work, and on May 20 they completed their work. The place was then turned over to the painters. The office, packing room and shipping room were entirely consumed by the fire, in addition to a large portion of the greenhouses. A new boiler room has been constructed under the shipping room and a room large enough to hold a car of coal has been constructed. Over 5000 square feet of glass had to be replaced as a result of the fire.

The shipping business of the firm has greatly increased and the shipping room had to be enlarged and this was done when the repairs were made after the fire. They say it is surprising how business is keeping up this year. The business Memorial day was far ahead of the business at Christmas and New Year's. Since Memorial day the business which is usually very slack, has kept up exceedingly well.

ORANGE, N. J.

The annual rose show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place on Wednesday, June 14. The staging provided was entirely filled with roses and exhibits of herbaceous flowers, which lent a pleasing variety to the array. The arrangement was tastefully done under the direction of D. Kindsgrab, gardener to Wm. Runkle, who won first prize in each rose class. Second prize went to Peter Duff, gardener to John Crosby Brown. Mr. Kindsgrab's best roses were Alfred Colomb, Margaret Dickson, Fisher Holmes, John Hopper, Jacqueminot, Ulrich Brunner and Mrs. John Laing.

Among those entered not for competition and rewarded with certificates were Roland Ruddock, gardener for Treadwell Cleveland, who had eleven varieties of roses and also delphiniums and sweet williams; John Hayes, gardener for O. D. Munn; Wm. Bennett, gardener for A. C. Van Gaasbeck; Wm. Reed, gardener at the Colgate estates; Arthur Caparn, gardener for Stewart Hartshorne, and others made very creditable displays. The judges were Malcolm Macrorie, Arthur T. Caparn and John Rolley, the latter superintendent at Prospect park, Brooklyn. The show was open to the public and was largely patronized.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

The following is from the Times of June 13 and tells the whole story:

There has been considerable rivalry between the florists of this city lately, which culminated last Sunday in roses and carnations being offered as low as 10 cents per dozen. The demoralized condition of the Chicago market the past week is partly responsible for the ridiculous prices. These conditions are spasmodic, however, and not at all to be depended upon. Ordinarily nothing but the cheapest grade of fakir stock, which cannot withstand shipment, is to be obtained at such prices. Good carnations cannot be sold at any time for less than 50 cents per dozen without a sacrifice. There is a class of people, however, who cannot afford even so small a price for flowers and these can be taken care of by having special sale days when the dealers can order flowers in lots of several thousand at greatly reduced prices, and by eliminating the expense of making up and delivering, the flowers can be sold at 25 cents per dozen with a small margin of profit. This applies only to the summer season. Fall and winter prices are regulated by the greater scarcity of stock due to the practice of starting new plants every summer, and also to the fact that the dull, cloudy weather and short days of early winter retards the growth of the plants.

The florists of the city were wise in burying their hatchets so soon, for the cessation of hostilities means a better quality of flowers for the public and living prices to the men who are obliged to work seven days in the week and from fourteen to twenty-four hours per day.

We, the undersigned, florists of the city of South Bend, do hereby agree to sell carnations and roses at 50 cents and $1.00 per dozen, respectively, until further notice.

The following discounts are agreed upon: 100, 10 per cent; 250, 15 per cent; 500, 20 per cent; 1,000, 25 per cent.

We further agree that on Wednesday of each week, until further notice, we shall sell the above named flowers at 25 cents and 50 cents per dozen, respectively, for the accommodation of people of limited means. At these prices, however, the flowers will be neither delivered nor made up into designs without extra charge, and no discount will be given.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its monthly meeting in its rooms in Madison on June 14. It was well attended. The exhibit of flowers, fruit and vegetables was of a high order. A. Herrington showed three vases of roses, two of sweet williams, two of sweet peas and a magnificent collection of digitalis, securing a certificate of merit. J. Heeremans, gardener to A. B. Whitney, showed a fine dish of Gradus peas and a dish of strawberries of the Sharpless type, but being more rounded, very large and thoroughly colored. A cultural certificate was worthily awarded. Robert McMullen, gardener to Mrs. G. F. Stone, staged a grand collection of hybrid roses and three vases of ramblers, crimson, white and yellow. A cultural certificate was awarded. Messrs. Duckham, Totty and Vince were judges.

President Heeremans, by request, read a paper on the culture of the herbaceous calceolaria. It was well received. Questions were freely asked and answered. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the author. Three new members were elected. The new schedule for our fall show was in evidence. Nearly $500 are stated in its prize list, which is considerably in advance of last year. There will be no meetings in July and August, which will give the boys a chance to grow the stuff to get the money. E. R.

SALIDA, COLO.

A novel method to escape detection was employed by a burglar who entered the residence of J. H. Freeman, proprietor of the Salida greenhouse, on the evening of June 15. While Mr. and Mrs. Freeman were in the city their two little boys, aged 10 and 4, were left in the house. The burglar entered the bedroom, seized the eldest by the throat and gave him a choking, threatening to kill him if he uttered a word. He then wrapped the boy in a heavy blanket and proceeded to search the house for valuables. Mrs. Freeman was first to return and when the burglar heard her he dashed down the street. He overlooked a pocketbook hanging on the wall containing a considerable sum of money. The boy was almost smothered to death when found by his mother, having been wrapped in the blanket for nearly an hour.

ROSES for Immediate Effect

Haven't you in your trade a call for large, strong Rose plants, such as will give immediate results? We have prepared for June planting a stock of strong two-year-old plants, all on own roots except where noted and while they last will close them out at the extremely low price of $15.00 per 100; 25 or more at 100 rate; no charge for packing. These Roses can be placed in the open ground during this month and will give a profusion of flowers throughout the entire growing season. They are worth just twice as much as we are asking for them and they can be depended upon to produce the goods. They are well foliaged, have strong working roots and are now in 4 and 5-inch pots.

The Collection Includes a Wide Range of Varieties and Colors, Teas and Hybrid Teas

I have a greenhouse 11x100 and seven and one-half feet to the ridge, with all the piping above the benches. It does not give entire satisfaction and I would like to put the piping underneath the benches on the north side and over the benches on the south side. What size of flows and return should be needed? Could a flow pipe be carried above the bench on one side and return under the bench on the other side? A temperature of 55 degrees is required in the coldest Rhode Island weather. N. W.

Since the writer does not specify the kind of heat he is to employ it is necessary, in order to avoid delay, to make a double statement. For hot water at 180 degrees a 2½-inch riser returning through eight 1½-inch pipes will be required. The returns may be arranged either above or beneath the benches, as convenience or the work in hand may dictate. To heat the same house with steam under five pounds pressure the piping should consist of a 2-inch riser under the ridge and eight 1¼-inch returns disposed either over or beneath the benches.

TARRYTOWN ROSE SHOW.

The sixth annual rose exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Lyceum building on June 13. In spite of the very dry season, the exhibits were quite up to the high standard of former years. The show was under the able management of David McFarlane and was very tastefully arranged. The attendance, always good, was even better than in former years, the hall being well filled in the afternoon and crowded in the evening.

Following were the principal prize-winners. In the rose classes: Mrs. Geo. Lewis, James Ballantyne, gardener, won out for the best vase, for the best twenty-five blooms and for the best display of climbing roses. Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Howard Nichols, gardener, was first for the best collection and for the best six varieties. For the best three varieties the first prize was won by the Misses Masters, Henry Kastberg, gardener; and for the best twelve blooms any one variety Mrs. Ogden Codman, Frank Luckenbacher, gardener, was first.

In hardy perennials Wm. Rockefeller, Geo. Middleton, gardener, was first and Mrs. O. Codman, second, for the best collection. In strawberries Mrs. Trevor was first for the best three quarts and the best quart, while Howard Willets, A. Weisenberger, gardener, was first for the best two quarts.

Samuel Untermyer, John Featherstone, gardener, won out with a splendid collection of hardy shrubs. Mrs. Geo. Lewis was first for collection of sweet peas and first for collection of antirrhinums. In vegetables Mrs. Trevor and Mrs. Codman were the principal prize-winners.

Samuel Untermyer exhibited a beautiful table of fancy leaved caladiums, also a very nice collection of greenhouse fruit, including grapes, peaches, nectarines, figs and melons.

The F. R. Pierson Company's exhibit, which added greatly to the beauty of the show, included shrubs and herbaceous plants, Marguerite Queen Alexandra, new rambler rose Leuchstern and their beautiful Tarrytown fern.

A fine vase of Spanish iris and a vase of sweet peas were exhibited by Mrs. John H. Hall, Francis Gibson, gardener, which were awarded a special prize.

HARRISON POTTERY, Harrison, Ohio.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The Tri-City Florists' Association will be represented at the national convention at Washington. John Temple, who is president of the local association, will likely be one of the delegation from Davenport, and Theodore Ewoldt, who is the Iowa state vice-president of the S. A. F., will also attend. At the meeting held June 13 at the Floral Hill gardens Mr. Temple was empowered to interview the railway officials in regard to rates and to make other arrangements for the trip.

The Tri-City Association will hold its annual outing during the first week of August. The exact time and place have not yet been appointed, but a committee composed of Emil Boehm, Henry Pauli, William Knees and Theodore Ewoldt has been named to make the necessary preliminary arrangements.

Auditor Emil Boehm reported last night that the books of the financial secretary and the treasurer had been inspected and found to be correct in every particular. One of the entertaining features of last night's session was an illustrative lecture by Theodore Ewoldt on "The Best Way to Raise Strawberries." As a practical illustration a strawberry supper was enjoyed at the conclusion of the meeting.

The next session will be held with John Staack, in Moline, on the second Thursday of July.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The annual rose show of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held June 16. The exhibition was a great success, the hall being filled to overflowing. It was a little too early for sweet peas, but there were, nevertheless, some fine exhibits. The display of fruits and vegetables was the finest ever seen in this section. It was suggested that the exhibits in this department be auctioned for the benefit of the society and the strawberries brought as high as $1.10 per plate and some of the lettuce as high as 88 cents per head. The principal prize-winners on roses were Messrs. Hale, Butterbach, Dowlen and Kettel. Hale, Kennedy and Kettel had the best sweet peas. Hale was first for strawberries. Certificates were awarded to Wm. Dowlen for poppies, to Jas. Kennedy for roses, Jas. Dowlen for cauliflower, A. Strohmenger for collection of vegetables, to Wm. Turner for hardy flowers and carnations, to Longstreet, Butterbach, Hale and Kettel for miscellaneous exhibits. B.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Cyclamens.

For the next three months cyclamens want careful management. They do not enjoy the hot weather of July and August. If you do not have a house where you can apply a portable shade during the bright, hot hours of the day and remove it entirely after 4 p. m. and on dull days, then they are much better off in a cold frame with the sash raised a few inches back and front. In a frame this shade is easily adjusted and the free circulation of air over them is very beneficial.

Whether on a bench or in a frame, plunge the pots to the rim in tobacco stems and renew them every three weeks. There is not much known about the minute creature called the "mite," and it does not appear generally until the month of September, but the constant use of these stems is an excellent preventive against this mite, as well as against the better known aphis, spider and thrips. When we fumigated a frame or a hotbed by burning stems in a tin or galvanized iron vessel it was an awkward job, but now with the pie dish and tobacco dust it is easily and pleasantly done. Remember that the cubic feet of atmosphere in a cold frame or hotbed are very few, so do not overdo it. The merit of the dust over burning stems is that there is not a dense volume of smoke for a few minutes, but the fumes from the smoldering dust will last two or three hours.

Now, if instead of a cold frame you put your frame on a foot of well trodden down stable litter you would have a genial heat for the roots and this would be about the ideal treatment for the cyclamens. Do not forget the spraying of the foliage every bright morning.

Poinsettias.

There is no doubt that this showy plant, the poinsettia, now has a permanent place as a Christmas decorative plant. If you started with old dormant plants the first of May you can propagate until the end of August and those now in the sand, or put in a week later, will make the finest of plants. There is no trouble in rooting them. Cut just below a joint, shade from bright sun and water the sand copiously daily and on warm days spray as well as water. Shade and spray frequently the first few days after potting, but once they begin rooting in the soil they want the brightest and lightest bench and shifting as soon as well rooted.

The object to attain in growing the poinsettia is to produce a dwarf plant with abundant foliage and the largest possible spread of bracts. In future shiftings use a similar soil to what you would use in your rose beds and pot firmly. At no time, except with the old dormant plants, do they like to have their roots disturbed, so when shifting from a 2½-inch to a 4-inch or from a 4-inch to a 6-inch pot do not disturb the young roots or you will lose some foliage, and a poinsettia unless well supplied with its leaves is by no means a thing of beauty. Plenty of ventilation, the fullest, brightest light and firm potting will be conducive to a short-jointed, firm growth and give plenty of watering and spraying throughout the summer.

Nephrolepis.

With us there has been a greater demand than ever for the useful nephrolepis fern. Veranda boxes have been entirely filled with them and, where the aspect is shady, what could be more handsome and graceful? And even in sunny locations a liberal mixture of these ferns is desirable, for if not neglected for water they do finely in the brightest sun. So do not waste any small pieces. Put them on a bench in four inches of rich soil and they will make good plants by November. If that is not convenient, put them in 2-inch or 3-inch pots.

Although Nephrolepis exaltata, from which the Boston variety was obtained, does very well at 50 degrees during winter, it enjoys a much warmer temperature. It is a native of Central America, therefore tropical, and every advantage of our warm summer months should be taken to increase your stock or increase the size of your plants. They also like a good, strong loam. Young ferns start best in a light soil, with plenty of leaf-mold and well decayed manure, but as they make strong roots they prefer a strong loam and many ferns are found growing in almost a clay.

Mignonette.

This reminds us we have completed the cycle of another year. The time to sow mignonette for a winter's cut is near at hand. About the middle of July is the right time. A week or two later will do, but if you wish to cut early, then the middle of the month is best. In a solid bed the growth will be very strong and the foliage keep a dark green, but five inches of good soil on a raised bench will give an abundance of spikes from November to April.

A light house, where you can keep 40 degrees at night, will grow good mignonette. It is well known that mignonette transplants badly and cannot be handled as you would asters and many of our annuals. We like to sow pinches of seed on the bed one foot apart each way. When up an inch thin out to two plants and when safe from the green worm and other enemies leave only one plant; when this is three inches high pinch the top out. With us the larva of the common yellow butterfly is very troublesome and is so identically the color of the mignonette that it is difficult to detect. Hellebore dusted over the little plants will soon fix the worm.

Some may think a foot apart a good deal of space. It is not too much if you want good spikes and three good crops.

Fire Heat.

If you have been investing in young palms, or raising them from seed, they will make very slow growth through much of the weather we have had and are having this summer. You have the house shaded to keep the sun from burning the foliage and on dull, chilly days and at night it is a little colder than outside; not only cool, but there is an unhealthy dampness and a little fire heat would be of the greatest benefit. Ever so little heat in the pipes will work a great change and start a healthy circulation.

With the great majority of greenhouse men the fires are let out the middle or end of May and remain so until October. This does well enough with most of our stock, but if you want your young palms to grow fast it is anything but right and a little fuel is money well spent.

Herbaceous Plants.

You do not have time in the busy spring months to do everything and among other things that can be done now is the sowing of hardy herbaceous and biennial plants. Many are useful for cut flowers and there is also a good demand for the plants. If sown now they can be planted in frames in early September and will be a good size before hard winter sets in and in good condition to set out next spring. Among the best and most useful are Anemone Japonica, aquilegia, the hardy asters, boltonia, campanula, centaurea, coreopsis, delphinium, Dianthus barbatus, the lighter shades of the old sweet william, doronicum, digitalis, dictamnus, gypsophila, heuchera, lobelia, lychnis, oriental poppy and pyrethrum.

Many could be added to the above. I have only chosen these because they are sure bloomers the following year and perfectly hardy. Usually a stock of hardy perennials is obtained by buying small plants in early spring, and with some kinds this is the most practical way, but most of them you can raise at much less expense by sowing a little seed. Sow in flats or in the cold frame. Shade until the seeds are well up through the ground and never let the surface of the ground become parched. That is what destroys so many small seedlings, just as they are pushing through the ground.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A LAWN DECORATION.

One of the most difficult decorations we were ever called upon to execute was that for the lawn fete at the home of J. D. Lippincott, of Philadelphia. The residence stands in grounds surrounded by tall office buildings and the season of the year was early May, in a backward season, when there was no growth in the garden, which is one of the finest in the country, Mr. Lippincott being a horticultural enthusiast and having brought together a very fine collection of trees and flowering shrubs.

It was the season for lilacs, hawthornes, magnolias, dogwood, etc., and so on the morning of the entertainment we used six wagon-loads of this kind of material, fastening the flowers to the shrubbery and trees so that only a few of the many guests realized that the bloom and foliage did not grow there. Large beds of roses were made to bloom over night by simply plunging a lot of Crimson Ramblers in beds on the lawn. The same was done with pots of hydrangeas and produced a very fine effect. One of the accompanying pictures gives the idea of the lavishness of the decoration at the scene of the May-pole dance. The other picture shows the flower booth where we arranged flowers for sale by twelve flower girls, who went among the audience with baskets of flowers supported by wide ribbons passing over their shoulders. They sold the flowers for whatever money the purchaser offered, no change being the rule, as the entertainment was for the benefit of the epileptic hospital. I saw one gentleman exchange a ten-dollar bill for a bunch of sweet peas. There were also a number of other booths similar to the flower booth, each one a rustic arbor embellished with flowers.

Since this garden party at the Lippincott mansion we have had many similar orders for work of this character and recently had an exceptionally large order for an affair of this kind at Lindhurst, John Wanamaker's country seat. Charles H. Fox.

A CEMENT BENCH.

In a recent issue of the Review a note was published with regard to the cement benches which are taking the place of the less permanent benches at the establishment of the George Wittbold Company, Chicago. The illustration on page 299 shows one of these benches in course of construction. The supports are vitrified tile set in cement foundations. For a bench of this width there are three rows of supports. In building the bench a temporary flooring of boards is laid on the top of the tiles. This is merely to hold the pipes, sides and cement in place until the cement has set, when the temporary boards are knocked away and the bench settles upon its permanent supports. The sides are made of galvanized iron and are held together by tie rods running through the half-inch iron pipe shown in the illustration. On the pipe the chicken wire is laid to strengthen the cement, which is one inch in thickness.

The pipe down the center of the bench, which is raised at one end to permit of working with the cement, is the mechanical sprinkler which has been installed in practically all the Wittbold houses. They are very well pleased with it and have made arrangements to supply a number of other growers. Another style of the sprinkler system is shown attached to the sash bars on the left side of the picture.

HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS.

[A paper by John Heeremans, read before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, at Madison, N. J., June 14.]

Herbaceous calceolarias when well grown take a foremost position among decorative flowering plants, during the months of April and May. The wonderful markings and vivid color to be seen in a collection of these flowers at once attract attention and there is no reason why they should not be much more generally grown, especially in private gardens, than is now the case.

I propose in the following few short lines to give a short outline of their cultivation that will be likely to lead to success.

First a packet of seed must be obtained from a reliable source and the latter end of July is a good time to sow it. Procure some pots or pans that are thoroughly clean, which must be well drained and filled with a light sandy soil, also seeing that the surface is quite level. Water well before sowing and, on account of the very minute size of the seeds, it is best not to cover it at all with soil, simply scattering it evenly over the surface.

When sown place the pans in a cool, shady place in the greenhouse and cover with a sheet of glass. The seed should not require watering until it is up, but if it should get anything like dry of course it must be watered and the best way to do this is to hold the pans in a pail of water and allow it to soak through from the bottom, rather than watering overhead at this stage.

As soon as possible to handle the seedlings, with a piece of pointed stick, they should be pricked off into 5-inch pots, a couple of dozen or so in a pot, using the same light sandy mixture as before and watering with a very fine rose. It is always advisable to prick off about double the number it is intended to grow, as these young plants are very liable to damp off.

This damping is, I consider, one of the greatest difficulties the cultivator has to contend with, and this is the reason I prefer to prick them off into small pots rather than boxes. You get more chances, for if a box once starts to damp it takes a lot of stopping and you are likely to lose the entire box. If the grower can keep the young seedlings just moving and healthy until the cooler nights of late September and October he will have made a good start.

When the plants are large enough and nicely rooted they should be transferred singly to the smallest size pots, still using the same light sandy soil. They must always be placed in a shady position on a moist bottom and have a fine syringing overhead several times a day in hot, bright weather. A mean temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees from now on through the winter will suit them admirably.

As soon as the small pots are well filled with roots shift to 3-inch and at this stage some well rotted cow manure in the proportion of one-fifth may be mixed with the soil to advantage. Later pottings in January and February may be to 6, 8 and 10-inch pots for the more vigorous specimens. For the final potting cow manure well rotted in the proportion of one-fourth and a good dusting of bone meal with the soil may be used.

The worst pest to which these plants are subject is green fly and they should be given no quarter. It is well to fumigate once a week or ten days, when no difficulty should be experienced in keeping them quite clean and healthy. Remember the plants should never be crowded together after potting, but always allow a good space between the pots for a circulation of air, or the lower leaves will quickly damp. When the flower spikes appear they must be neatly staked out and once commencing to flower the collection will probably last in bloom from six weeks to two months, delighting all who see them and proving a rich reward to the patient, painstaking cultivator.

THE YEARBOOK.

Of the conspicuous successes in the early flood of light reading for summer a leading place must annually be given to the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture. It is said to enjoy a circulation of 500,000 copies.

The Yearbook for 1904 is just to hand and is a really notable volume of 776 pages. It weighs nearly five pounds, but there is nothing "heavy" in its contents, for it most thoroughly complies with the act of congress which makes its publication possible. The law says that it "shall contain such reports from the different Bureaus and Divisions, and such papers prepared by their special agents, accompanied by suitable illustrations, as shall, in the opinion of the secretary, be specially suited to interest and instruct the farmers of the country, and to include a general report of the operations of the Department for their information." It's a big order. No wonder that it costs nearly half a million dollars a year to execute it.

The present volume includes a general report of the operations of the Department and also thirty-one miscellaneous articles, nearly all illustrated and several with beautiful color plates. These articles cover quite well every phase of agricultural industry and, with the more than 100 pages of tables of crop statisties, constitute the more valuable part of the book. The papers are designed to be practical rather than technical and to deal with problems of immediate rather than remote concern. They cannot but exert a wide influence upon the agriculture of the day. For instance, Prof. Galloway's statement of the possibilities in growing crops under glass, given a half million circulation among farmers, will not fail to turn the thoughts of many toward vegetable and flower growing and, while holding out no roseate prospects, yet will in the end doubtless result in quite a number erecting more or less glass.

For the nurseryman there is an important article on "Promising New Fruits," by William A. Taylor, with a number of fine color plates, showing the Bloomfield (Bentley) and the Doctor apples, the latter being thought worthy of a place in a list of new fruits although it was first described in 1804, since which time it has been practically unknown. There are also color plates of the Rossney pear, Millennial grape, Perfection currant, Delmas persimmon and ten varieties of pecan. There is also a valuable article on new citrus creations.

The seedsman will find an interest in the report on sugar beet seed breeding and other economic plant improvement work.

The Yearbook may be had for the asking if you address your congressman or your senator. It is worth a great deal more than the trouble it takes to get it and the time it takes to read it.

EXPANSION OF PIPES.

The past winter we had some trouble with the expansion in our heating pipes. Our houses are 200 feet long and we use 1-inch pipe for heating. The expansion is so great that it throws the pipe off the hooks. Would expansion joints help us? If so, where should we place them, at the end or the middle of the runs? We use steam. T. W. C.

I do not think it necessary to use expansion joints with 1-inch pipes, even in runs as long as those you employ. If the manifolds are made up with swing joints there should be no trouble. It would undoubtedly be more economical to cut the coils in two rather than to attempt to provide for the expansion by expansion joints in this size of pipe. If the pipes are in manifolds on the side of the house the expansion can be cared for by providing swing joints at both ends of the runs by turning the manifolds at each end of the house. Swing joints can be made by using two L's connected by a close nipple. One L should be on the main line of pipe and the other on a short length of pipe which connects the main line of pipe at right angles to a manifold built of T's and nipples of sufficient length to allow for the swing joints. The short lengths of pipe may vary in length from eighteen inches on a 100-foot run to three or four feet in length, according to convenience.

ROSES

GROWING GARDEN ROSES.

After the young stock has been in the benches for ten days the weeds should be pulled out and the surface given a good stirring up to the depth of at least an inch. This cultivation is of the utmost importance to young stock and is far too often neglected or performed in a very perfunctory manner, especially by young growers. This operation should be done at least once a week, whether there are weeds on the bench or not, as it is only by persisting in stirring the surface that we can keep it in condition to be benefited by sun and air.

During the summer we have to use water so liberally that, if we do not keep cultivating, the soil will become sour and caked, thus preventing proper evaporation and retarding growth.

Tying and Disbudding.

Just as soon as possible the young stock should be supported and trained, so that each shoot may be kept in an upright position, thus preventing the eyes from breaking weak, which will cause a crop of blind wood, and facilitating syringing, which can be more effectively done when the plants are upright and rigid.

Where Beauties are concerned this tying should never be neglected, as the quick, succulent growth is very easily broken where the syringe is applied with sufficient force to dislodge red spider.

This tying and training should be done in a neat and tasty manner, each shoot tied singly, taking care not to tie so tightly that there will be no room left for the stem to swell and causing the tying material to cut into the bark. This results in unsightly protuberances forming on the stems and prevents the free flow of sap.

The benches should be gone over frequently and all buds showing color removed, taking with each bud three or more of the topmost leaves, so that only the stronger and more mature buds may be left to break and form shoots for a future crop.

Feeding Young Stock.

From the many questions put to me by the younger class of growers, there seem still to be some hazy ideas regarding the time when feeding should be applied to young stock. As a rule the ordinary soil, if properly composted and used in the manner so frequently recommended in these columns, is sufficient for the wants of the young stock till after the plants have produced at least one crop, and frequently two. This of course depends upon the size and quality of the growth they have made, but, generally speaking, it is safer to leave feeding alone until we are convinced that the plants are in want of it and the condition right, when an application will be of benefit.

There is really more damage done to young stock by too early feeding and over-doing it than there is by underfeeding and we frequently see plants not over one foot high with over two inches of the richest kind of mulch on the surface. And there they remain until sickness commences and the crops are ruined. Do not feed young stock; it does not require it.

Ribes.

RED SPIDER.

I have a house of Beauties and a house of Maids and Gates which were planted the same time. They are as good stock as I ever saw for this time of the year. I syringe them in the morning and also about five o'clock so the foliage of the plants and surface of the bed will be damp over night to keep down spider. Do you approve of it?

L. F. W.

Keeping the surface of the soil, and especially the foliage, wet over night, while it may help to keep spider in check, is rather a dangerous experiment, especially where Beauties are concerned, as this causes a softness of growth and foliage peculiarly adapting it to the ravages of fungous growth. I should advise syringing in the morning and afternoon during bright weather, using sufficient force to dislodge the spiders and break up the webs. This afternoon syringing, however, should be done early enough to allow the foliage to dry before sundown, say about three o'clock, or just when the temperature begins to fall.

JUNE BUGS.

Can any reader inform me if June bug larvæ in the soil are really harmful to roses, also is there no way of killing the pest less drastic than using bisulphide of carbon? I have had my roses planted about a month and they are taking hold nicely, but on examination

(Hybrid Perpetuals in the foreground; in the background some of the entries for "100 bottles arranged for effect.")

I find a lot of the bugs just hatching out, about the size of maggots. H. T.

The name "June bug" is applied to so many rose pests that with no further description it is hard to give a remedy. The common May beetle (Lachnosterna Fusca) is in some localities called June bug and as it is very destructive to rose bushes this may be the pest which is present. This insect is the parent of the white grub that is so destructive to pasture lands. The beetle feeds upon rose foliage during the night and frequently destroys the bushes by gnawing the bark just below the ground line. Spraying the infested bushes with Paris green will prevent them from doing much damage. To prevent the arsenic from burning the foliage add a piece of hot lime the size of a hickory nut to every two gallons of water.

Another insect called June bug in some localities is Macrodactylus subspinosus, which appears early in summer in vast quantities and is very destructive. This is a hard, brown insect, about half an inch in length. A very effective remedy and safe is to spray the bushes with one pound of Paris green to fifty gallons of Bordeaux mixture. RIBES.

BOSTON ROSE EXHIBITION.

The annual June exhibition of roses and strawberries at Horticultural Hall, Boston, owing to unfavorable climatic conditions, was not up to last year's standard. A week of dull, rainy weather spoiled many blooms, the light colored varieties suffering the most. Nevertheless, the exhibition, taken all in all, was better than might have been expected under the circumstances.

Miss S. B. Fay, through M. H. Walsh, was as usual, the most extensive exhibitor, staging over 1,200 blooms in about 150 varieties. In the principal class calling for twenty-four distinct named hardy roses, three blooms of each, Mr. Walsh won both first and second, W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christensen, gardener, being third. Mr. Walsh captured first for twelve named varieties, three of each; six named varieties, three of each; twenty-four varieties, one of each; twenty-four Mme. Gabriel Luizet, six Gen. Jacqueminot, six Ulrich Brunner, six any other variety and three any variety disseminated since 1902, showing in the latter class that fine white variety, Frau Karl Druschki. Mr. Walsh also won in a strong competition for 100 bottles of hardy roses, followed by Mrs. E. M. Gill, W. J. Clemson, Estate of John C. Chaffin and E. L. Lewis.

Some of the other principal exhibitors and prize-winners were A. F. Estabrook, George Barker, gardener; C. C. Converse estate, D. F. Roy, gardener; W. J. Clemson and estate of J. C. Chaffin. Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust, gardener, and Mrs. E. A. Wilkie had fine tables not for competition. F. J. Rea showed a collection of very interesting seedlings. M. H. Walsh showed a group of his new rambler, Lady Gay. This variety recently secured a gold medal at the exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society in London. For pot culture or as a climber outdoors it is invaluable. Its delightful shade of pink appeals to everyone.

For collection of sweet williams W. Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, was first and second, and A. McLaren third. For forty varieties native plants Miss I. C. Shattuck and Mrs. Arthur E. Clark took first and second. E. J. Shaylor showed a fine collection of peonies, comprising many choice kinds, as did T. C. Thurlow, who would have staged a very large collection but for the persistent wet weather. George Hollis had some excellent seedlings. Three of these shown under number received honorable mention. A. F. Estabrook and Mrs. E. M. Gill also showed collections of peonies. Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine collection of hardy perennials. Displays of these came from H. A. Dreer, W. Whitman and F. J. Rea. Mrs. J. L. Gardner showed a group of beautifully bloomed Canterbury bells, showing the value of these as pot plants. A. F. Estabrook had splendid specimens of Spiraea astilboides. Tanks of aquatic flowers came from H. A. Dreer and Harvard Botanic Gardens, Robert Cameron, gardener.

One of the most interesting features of the exhibition was a stand of 100 varieties of tea and hybrid tea roses grown in the open by Mrs. H. E. Foote, of Marblehead. These seemed to attract more favorable notice than any thing else in the show. Many new and choice kinds were included and their extreme beauty and diversity of colorings were a revelation to many who thought greenhouse culture was necessary to produce such flowers. Had the exhibition taken place a few days later Mrs. Foote would have been able to stage fully 100 more varieties.

Farquhar & Co. contributed numerous palms for the decoration of the hall. The strawberry part of the show was less extensive than usual, but the berries were of fine quality. Marshall was once more easily the champion variety, Sample coming next in popularity. Among newer sorts, Golden Gate, Klondike, Victor and Cardinal were the best. Vegetables made a splendid showing. W. W. Rawson was the most successful exhibitor, his produce being unusually fine.

The next prize exhibition occurs on July 8 and 9. Hardy roses, sweet peas, herbaceous plants, Japanese iris and other flowers will have classes allotted.

CARNATIONS WITH ROSES.

We are short of room in our carnation houses but I can spare a bed in the rose houses. Do you know if Lawson and Stella will stand the temperature of a rose house, or do you know any other carnation that will? W. J. R.

I have seen several attempts at growing roses and carnations in the same house but never with any great degree of success. Mrs. Lawson, on account of its strong constitution and strong stems, would come nearer to standing the ordeal than any other carnation I know of. It was this variety that was tried in each case, but it would not do. As far as the temperature is concerned, there would be little trouble where it were housed with such cool growing roses as Golden Gate and Ivory. The culture required by roses to grow high grade blooms, and that required by carnations are so different in details, however, that the chances are that the one or the other would have to suffer.

A far better plan would be to divide your house with a cross section of glass and put an extra length of heating pipe in the section nearest the boiler. This would cost but little and it would enable you to give each its proper treatment.

A. F. J. Baur.

TROUBLE WITH STEM ROT.

I have a house of carnations which I planted in the middle of April and I notice from time to time quite a few dying off with stem rot. Can you tell me the reason? I was thinking of shading the house lightly, as there are so much board walks and cement walks in the house. There is plenty of head room and front and top ventilation, which I keep wide open day and night. Would you advise shading and could you please tell me a good fungicide to spray the carnations with, and how often, as a preventive to diseases? I keep the floors well dampened, syringing twice a day. The varieties of carnations I have are Enchantress, Roosevelt, Harry Fenn, Flamingo, Cardinal, Adonis, W. Lawson and Golden Beauty. All are in the same house.

L. F. W.

The first thing I would do would be to discontinue the frequent syringing. As long as there are no signs of red spider discontinue it altogether for a time. When you water, keep the water off the plants as much as possible. A good plan is to make a furrow in the center between the rows about one inch deep by two inches wide and when watering fill these furrows. Dust the surface of the soil with slaked lime and stir it into the soil. Dampen the walks about midday to moisten the atmosphere, but try to keep the atmosphere as dry at all times as the plants will stand. I would not advise you to put a speck of shading on your glass, as that would have a tendency to make it worse. The best fungicide I know of is a preparation called formaline. Dilute this to about one to 500 of water and apply with a sprayer every second day for ten days and then apply once each week. Give all the ventilation you can both day and night.

A. F. J. Baur.

PINE NEEDLES.

I note in the Review of June 8 that H. S. A. asks advice about pine needles in carnation soil. I live in a pine section, Florence, S. C., and know from experience that well decomposed pine needles make a good fertilizer. I go into the pine forests and scrape up the loose needles and get the decomposed ones, which are very fine, loose and about the color of the dead needles, mix it with heavy clay soil to open it, and also to fertilize it, and get good results with it, with palms, ferns and such plants as we set in rich soil. I also use it under strawberry and dewberry plants six and eight inches deep, to mulch them, and let it rot down and next year add more to it. I have fine plants and plenty of fruit and use no other fertilizer. I can get the decayed pine needles here as fine as meal, four inches thick, and believe it to be of great value. I also mix it in my soil in carnation benches and mulch with it and believe it to be good for that purpose.

Dewitt House.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

Out in Iowa there is "a modest, unassuming" man who made a stir in Hawkeye newspaper circles by sending some carnation blooms to the King of England, to be ten days on the road. He is John Poland, of Eldora, and, of course, he must be an expert or he wouldn't do a thing like that. According to one paper this is "how Poland works":

The survival of the fittest, a process of natural selection. This is the keynote of the Poland carnation farm. Each perfect flower that leaves the greenhouse has on its velvety petals the blood of hundreds of its sisters, ruthlessly destroyed that this one might reach the summit of exquisiteness.

This process is repeated over and over. Seed from the perfect blossom is preserved for planting the following season. This crop in turn is weeded out until as the years have gone by the unexcelled Poland variety has been produced.

Hundreds of experiments have been tried in the culture of these flowers. This array includes tests with lighting, heating, soils, fertilizers, time of planting, pruning, watering and grafting. Many of these innovations have proven valueless, others have borne fruit.

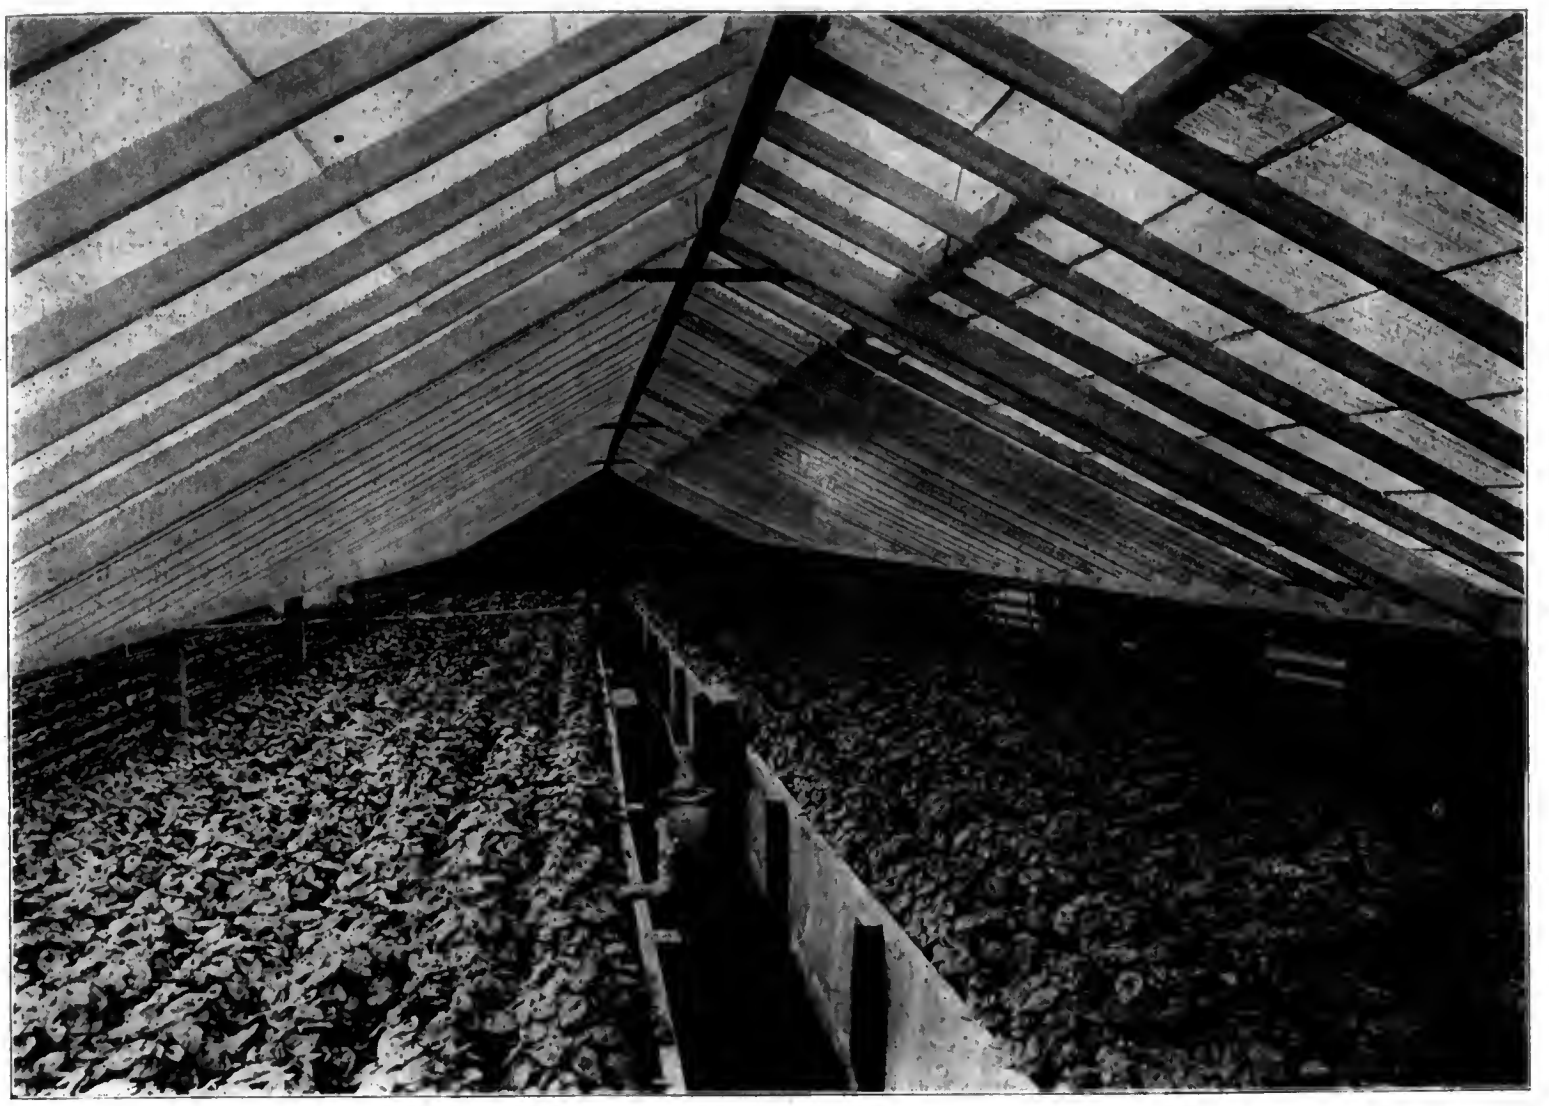
The most interesting has been in connection with grafting processes. A remarkable attempt was made to impart a rose perfume by grafting the carnation flower on a rose stem. The result has not yet been achieved, but seems to have every promise of success in the future. It is naturally a delicate operation. Blossoms have been sickly and poorly developed, but this is due to the fact that the method of joining the two stems together is yet in an experimental stage. When this is perfected, startling effects in the matter of aroma may be expected.

Interesting results have been obtained when varieties of seeds were mixed in the ground. What this natural process is no one has satisfactorily explained, but it is nevertheless a fact that white and red seeds planted together will produce a mottled variety. Sometimes the mixing is in peculiar form. A blossom may have a white center and a red rim, or vice versa. Seeds saved from these blossoms are planted a following season and often the peculiar effect is accentuated.

VIOLET GROWING.

By B. T. Galloway.

Soils.



A good, sandy loam makes the best type of soil for violets. There should be plenty of turf in it. Soil for the beds should be prepared early; that is, the preparation should begin, if practicable, the autumn previous to the spring planting. If this is not practicable, get up good sod as early in spring as the ground can be worked.

We prefer to cut the turf from two to three inches thick, stacking it in heaps, and mixing at the time of stacking one part of well-rotted stable manure to three parts of the soil. A sprinkling of lime added at the same time is always advantageous. The soil may be stacked in heaps three feet high and as wide as may be convenient. After standing for two or three weeks, the stacks should be cut down and shoveled over thoroughly. If this process can be repeated before taking the soil into the beds, it will be an advantage. We never add any bone or chemical fertilizer to the soil, preferring stable manure in all cases, as there is no risk in using this kind of material.

Soil well prepared in this way will be ready to be brought in to the beds by the middle to the last of April. It is not necessary to put in more than six inches of such soil. The rest of the soil in the beds may be the ordinary material surrounding the buildings, providing there is good drainage. The soil is put in the beds slightly above the top of the boards in order to allow for settling. After filling, the rougher portions are raked off into the walk and a board with a straight-edge is moved along the top of the bed completely leveling the same. The beds are now ready for planting.

Setting the Plants.

Lay off the beds with a straight-edge, setting the rows of plants nine inches apart and the plants eight inches apart in the row. As soon as the bed has been marked off, the young plants are cut out from the flats in squares, taking care not to shake off very much of the soil, and set in with the fingers, pressing the earth firmly about each plant after setting. After cutting out the plants from the flats they should be gone over very carefully and all dead leaves removed. In other words, the plants should be thoroughly cleaned up. Plants standing close together in flats or in small pots are apt to have yellow leaves form upon them. These should all be taken off. Great care must be exercised not to set the plants too deep; otherwise the crown will be covered and the plant will die.

Violet House of the First Type, Showing Arrangements of Beds, Pipes and Ventilators.
(Jars, Bags and Strings in place for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas.)

In transplanting from pots care must be taken in handling the violets. If the plants become pot-bound they are apt to remain stunted the rest of the season. If too many roots are formed it is well to crush slightly or break the ball. Our experience with potted plants has been such that they have been practically abandoned, preference being given always to the flat-grown ones, for the reason that the roots do not get compressed into such a small space and as a rule they take hold of the soil much more quickly than those grown in pots. As rapidly as the plants are put out they should be carefully watered.

Care of Plants.

After the planting there comes the necessary care of the young stock throughout the summer months. It will be noted that all of our directions apply to plants grown under glass through the entire summer. This has been found so much more satisfactory than growing them in the field that the field method is now conducted only in a very limited way. Practically in all the important sections the crop is grown entirely under glass from season to season. It sometimes occurs that it is not practicable to get the glass on new houses early in the spring. We have planted houses where the construction work has all been finished except the glazing and the piping. It is a disadvantage to work under such conditions, however, as the rains are apt to wash out the young plants. Furthermore, there is no easy method of controlling insect pests, as fumigation under such circumstances is impracticable. We therefore try to have the glass on prior to the time of setting out the plants.

During the growing season the ground must be constantly worked in order to prevent baking. Water is, of course, absolutely essential to the best growth. No specific directions can be given on this point. The main thing to be looked after is never to give the plants an opportunity to wilt. Keep the ground in good growing condition. This means about as it appears a day or two after a good rain in the open air. Judgment and experience are the only guides that can be depended on for this sort of work.

As the season advances and the plants become larger, repeated syringing with water should be made in order to keep down the red spider. This and the other insect pests and diseases will be mentioned more specfically under another heading.

It is necessary to go over the plants every week or ten days, cleaning off the dead foliage and keeping the ground thoroughly worked. The time required for this will become greater as the season advances. By the first of August, where early planting is followed, the plants will cover about half the ground and runners will be forming. All of these must be carefully cut off. The critical time in the growing of the plants comes in the long, hot days the latter part of August and the early part of September. Plants are then making a strong growth and unless carefully watched are likely to become too dry. Insect attacks and diseases are also likely to be more abundant at this season of the year.

HEATING AND TEMPERATURES.

I have a greenhouse 16x40 feet and am constructing a new one 24x70. I want to raise part roses in the small house and would like to know what other flowers I could raise to the best advantage in the same room with roses and what temperature I should keep in this room? What temperature should I keep in the new house for general stock? I have a hot water furnace. How should these rooms be piped? W. S. L.

There are many things that would do well in the rose house temperature. On the side bench bouvardia would thrive. Smilax would be all right if there is head room. Lilium longiflorum and the warmer blooded bedding plants, such as coleus and, later, caladiums and cannas would like the temperature. It is a great pity you cannot devote the entire space of this little house to roses. If you want any, you will need more than this house will produce under the best management and on account of ventilation, fumigation, syringing, etc., roses should be grown entirely by themselves.

The temperature of the larger house, which is to be devoted to general stock, which means presumably flowering plants for Christmas and Easter, to be followed by bedding plants, should be about 50 degrees at night. There is usually a warm and a cool end to every house, no matter how well heated the house may be. That is, there will be a difference of 3 or 4 degrees. No temperature will exactly suit a great variety of plants, but 50 degrees at night will grow, and flower, more of our popular plants than any temperature above or below.

Principles for Heating.

Without a plan of your houses, depth of stoke hole, etc., it would be impossible to give directions where the heating pipes should be, so we can only give some general principles.

First, keep your heater down as low as possible. If the top of the heater is four or five feet below the heating pipes in the houses, so much the better. Money spent in excavating and draining a deep stoke hole will save you tons of coal every winter.

Second, do not use any pipes, either flow or return, less than 2-inch.

Third, put in enough pipes so that you will have no need to fire hard except in the very coldest weather, and in moderately cold spells you will be comfortable and save coal. This means a heater of surplus capacity and sufficient radiation so that the pipes do not have to be at boiling heat.

Fourth, do not let the flow pipes be higher than the plate on the side wall. Pipes put above the plants and near the roof are pure waste.

Fifth, rise with the flow and fall with the return as nearly perpendicular as possible to the level of the heating pipes in the house. In the heating pipes rise at the rate of three inches in 100 feet to the end of the house and at the highest point tap in a pet cock to let out any air, which will always be found at the highest point. Or here is another plan which is just as good and does not need watching: In place of a pet cock tap in a ½-inch pipe and let it run up a foot or so higher than your feeding cistern in the boiler shed. If you feed your heater from a large tank overhead, or from your water system, and it is constantly on, then of course for air pipes you would use the pet cock. We have one small system where the city pressure (thirty-five pounds to the square inch) is continually on the heater, with pet cocks at the highest points, and it is the most satisfactory and economical of all systems, but cast-iron heaters won't generally stand that amount of pressure.

Sixth, do not let the returns be of more than double the capacity of the flows; that is, if you had two 2-inch flows on each side of the house, then four 2-inch pipes for returns on each side is enough. Of course, if they are equal, none the worse, but you can let the returns be double the flows.

Seventh, without knowing your houses more than ground measure, we would say for a house sixteen feet wide five 2-inch pipes on each side would be sufficient. For the house twenty-four feet wide there should be nine 2-inch pipes on each side, or the equal of this. Not that the pipes need be all on the sides; the more they are distributed through the house, the better the results. Two heating pipes, no matter what size, two or three feet apart, are equal to three of the same size bunched close together. This principle in heating, either with steam or hot water, is not recognized as much as it should be.

I notice that W. S. L. asks for temperature of roses. All rose specialists agree that 55 to 58 degrees is the correct night winter temperature. One authority says 55 degrees. Another produces grand roses and many of them at 56 degrees. If you are attentive enough to keep your house at 56 degrees you will be doing splendidly and must look somewhere else for your failure.

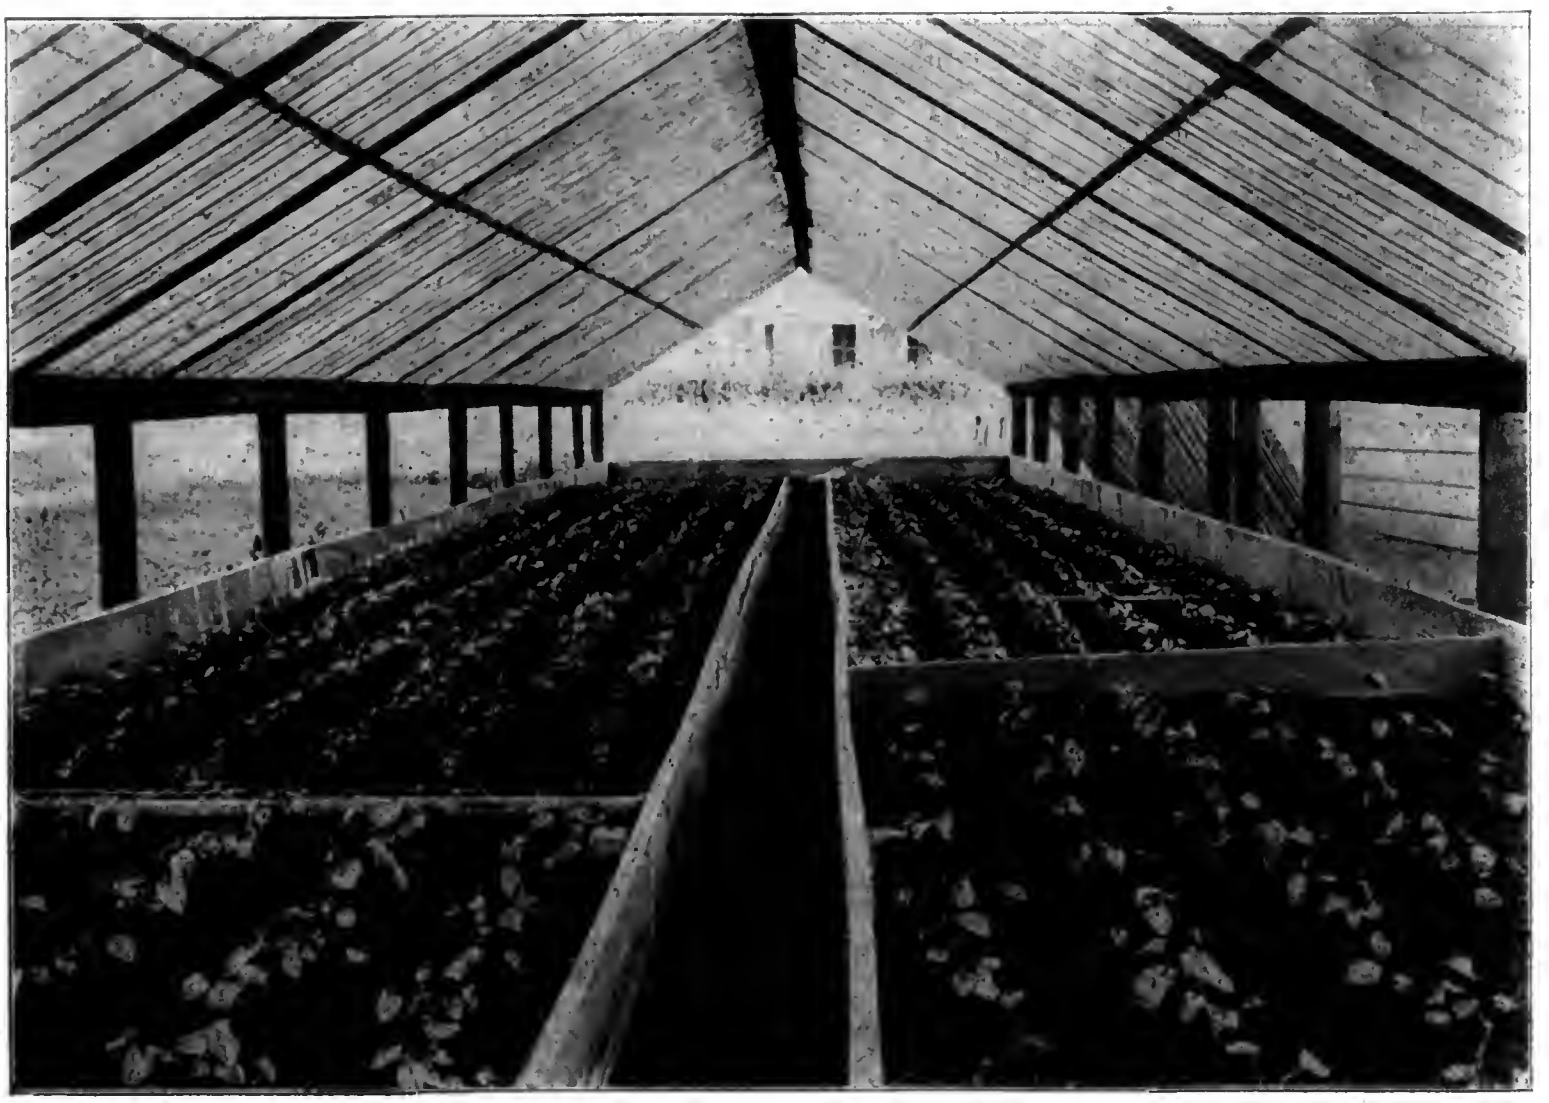
CANE CLIPS.



Several seasons ago Ribes in his rose notes in the Review commented on the fact that a certain wire cane clip which he described was a great improvement over twine for attaching rose stakes to the overhead wires. During the present season this clip is being put on the market by the manufacturers, B. S. Blake & Son, Rochester, and is being widely adopted by rose and chrysanthemum growers. The clips are very inexpensive, quickly attached and removed and hold the stake just where you want it.

CALLA BULBS.

Please allow me to reply to your correspondent, H. H., who writes as follows: I have a lot of calla lilies planted on benches and some in pots from last winter. Where do you think is the best place to keep the roots during summer and when is the proper time to plant them again in order to get a good crop of lilies for Christmas? Which variety do you advise as the best for big flowering lilies?

Having grown, cured and prepared calla bulbs for eastern florists I have often wondered why they do not cure their old bulbs and use them over again. I would like to have some one pursue the following instructions. I believe the old bulbs will multiply and be as good as fresh ones:

When the new bulbs arrive from California, about August 1, select one of the short, thick-crowned variety (not the long bulb with a narrow crown), with a new sprout about one and one-half inches long. Plant in a 10-inch pot, water profusely, sometimes adding ammonia. In six weeks it will bloom. Continue the forcing process until Easter; it may send forth several blooms from newly formed bulbs. When they have bloomed allow the plant to die down. When the leaves become yellow cut all the top off to one inch of the bulb. Set away in a perfectly dry place until about August, when you will notice new sprouts. Transplant the whole without breaking into a 12-inch pot, water as before, and by Christmas, 1906, you will have six or seven blooms and by Easter, 1907, a dozen.

I never hesitate to guarantee that every bulb I cure will bloom within six weeks if the above directions are carried out, as a number of my eastern friends can testify. H. L. MUSSER.

CANADIAN PROGRAM.

The eighth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association will be held at Montreal, August 8 to 10. The program has already been distributed. The opening session will take place at 2 p. m. on Tuesday in Natural History hall, on University street, the trade exhibit having been in place by 11 a. m. The mayor of Montreal will deliver an address of welcome, responded to by Wm. Gammage of London. President Robinson's address will be followed by routine business. In the evening essays will be read by Frederick G. Todd, Thos. McHugh and R. Burrows. On Wednesday morning J. H. Dunlop, H. Bennett and F. L. Girdwood will contribute essays. The afternoon will be spent in visiting local establishments. In the evening there will be essays by Wm. Downing and J. McKenna, followed by the election of officers. On Thursday and Friday the visitors will be shown the city, being banqueted on Thursday evening.

D. S. GRIMES.

D. S. Grimes, one of the pioneer florists and nurserymen of the west, is slowly passing away at his home, 3032 West Thirty-second avenue, Denver. He has been ill for many weeks and his family has no hopes of his recovery. He went to Colorado with the Greeley colony in 1871, from Indianola, Ia., remaining in Greeley until 1878, then removing to Denver and engaging in the nursery and florist business, which has been his occupation until he sold out to his son, W. H. Grimes, a few years ago, who still carries on the business.

From the time he came to the state until 1902 Mr. Grimes cultivated many rare plants, having made a specialty of the collection of seeds of the cone-bearing trees of the Rocky Mountains, having exported the seed of the Colorado conifers since 1878 to most of the European countries. He was president of the first horticultural society organized in Colorado and also planted the first orchard in Grand Junction, which is recognized as one of the best fruit growing counties in the entire west.

The Grimes greenhouses have been located for years across from Highland park, Denver, surrounded by great shade trees on commodious grounds, and inclosed in the glass buildings is a splendid collection of plant life cultivated under most favorable conditions. Mr. Grimes has three sons and two daughters. They are W. H., G. A. and E. Grimes and Mrs. J. L. Thompson and Mrs. Charles McKernon. Mr. Grimes is 77 years of age. E. S. K.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Dull, damp weather and a heavy demand for graduation bouquets braced up the market surprisingly during the past week. Roses, carnations, valley and sweet peas were in best request. Among roses some very good hybrids are coming in. Good Jacqs made $8 to $10 per hundred on June 24, but have dropped now to half these figures. Prices at present vary from $1 to $5. Liberty was in especially good request at $10 to $15 for the best. Beauties remain about the same and there is no special change in other roses. These, generally, are selling better. Some people are throwing out their stock for replanting and the worst glut should now be over on these. Carnations are selling somewhat better, 75 cents to $1 for ordinary, best stock fetching $2 to $3. Sweet peas are also going well at 35 to 75 cents per hundred. Valley remains about the same. Peonies bring from $2 to $5. The present week will see the end of these. The heavy rains the past week spoiled many outdoor flowers, peonies especially suffering badly. Asparagus and adiantum remain about the same.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

As briefly stated in the last issue of the REVIEW, the club meeting of June 20 was a highly successful one. Exhibits were quite numerous and included hybrid roses of grand quality from M. H. Walsh and W. J. Clemson, a fine collection of Multiflora and other roses from the Boston park department and F. J. Rea, peonies and hybrid aquilegias from Farquhar & Co., begonias from F. E. Palmer and Iris Hispanica Blanche Fleur, Chrysolora and Louise from W. N. Craig.

In the discussion following the reading of M. H. Walsh's paper, which appeared in the last issue of the REVIEW, Mr. Sander asked whether budded or own-root stock produces best flowers. The lecturer stated the former always on outdoor roses. Some sorts would do well on own roots for a few years. Hybrid teas do well worked on the dog rose or seedling briar stocks, but not on Manetti. In England teas and hybrid teas are never budded on Manetti and we may come to the same conclusion some day. He has several hundred seedlings possessing a greater proportion of American hardy blood and hopes to be able to report as to their hardiness ere long.

Asked why he left Crimson Rambler out of his list of climbers, Mr. Walsh said the Philadelphia Rambler is of a far better color. Crimson Rambler has reached the height of its popularity and is getting harder to sell. Its color is not good and it is getting too common. The new Baby Rambler, owing to its poor color, is not destined to remain popular long. Marchioness of Londonderry was left out of his list as he considered it a second rate sort, shy bloomer, not a good color and it won't stand feeding. He sees no reason why roses should die out in two or three years, with proper stock to start with and the right care. He has hybrid perpetuals which have been growing for twenty to twenty-eight years, as good as ever, and hybrid teas which have stood twelve to fifteen years. Hardy roses need a good root pruning once in seven or eight years. Hybridization is best carried out under glass, as the plants are more under control. He hopes he may have said something which will enable some to grow two roses where only one grew before.

W. J. Stewart spoke on the coming Washington convention and urged all who possibly can to attend. W. H. Elliott hopes the club will send a large delegation to what he believes will be the banner convention. Duncan Finlayson spoke enthusiastically of Washington and its beauties. He considers it one of the finest cities in the world.

The nine new members elected give the club the largest membership in its history, and already some treats are being planned for the early fall meetings. Frank B. Cannell's solos were well rendered and merit the plaudits given.

Indications are that a large number of members will join in the field day at William Sim's establishment on July 1. Arrangements for the annual picnic at Randolph Grove on July 25 are well under way. A committee consisting of J. W. Duncan, Duncan Finlayson, F. E. Palmer and W. A. Riggs has charge of the sports and other attractions which are being planned.

Various Notes.

J. W. Duncan is away on a well-earned vacation. W. K. Wood takes his place as Exchange correspondent during his absence.

President Montgomery, of the Rose Society, is enthusiastic over Theodore Wirth's rose garden at Elizabeth park, Hartford, Conn. It was a revelation to him of what can be done outdoors with roses, the quality of the blooms being superb. J. F. Huss's beautiful estate at Goodwin Castle also came in for great praise.

Mrs. H. E. Foote, of Marblehead, an enthusiastic amateur rose grower, whose exhibits of teas and hybrid teas at the Boston shows have attracted much attention the past two seasons, had a special exhibition of cut blooms at her home on June 26 to 28, which was largely attended. Mrs. Foote grows 500 varieties of roses, of which over one-half are teas or hybrid teas, including all the newest and best sorts from Paul, Cant, Dickson and other hybridists. Her success with this latter class is inducing many others to devote more attention to them.

The garden committee of the Horticultural Society visited the peony garden of Dr. R. F. Jackson, Cambridge, on June 22. About 125 varieties are grown, including eighteen of Richardson's seedlings. Other hardy plants were very interesting in this attractive city garden.

Peony specialists are already making plans for a big show when the society visits Boston next year. The exhibition is destined to eclipse anything seen in America.

An account of the annual rose show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be found on another page in this issue. W. N. Craig.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade conditions are no better this week and prospects from now on are not very flattering to the trade in general. We have had some good rains and cooler weather prevails, which should make stock of better quality. As it is, stock at the wholesale houses has been very unsatisfactory as to quality.

Much replanting is going on among the growers at present, which should shorten up stock considerably from now on. Carnations are selling well, but blooms are very small and off color. Enchantress is about the best in size. White is selling better than colors.

Roses are not of good quality. Brides and Maids are very poor and not overplentiful. Plenty of Liberty and short Beauties are to be had. Long Beauties are scarce. Sweet peas are shortening up considerably, the dry weather having caused the slump and the poor stock. Auratum lilies, daisies, gladioli, candytuft and cornflowers are the other flowers that go to make up the daily supply at the wholesale houses.

Various Notes.

Last week Tuesday a party of 200 horticulturists met in St. Louis on their way to the Texas fruit growers' meeting at Tyler. The party left on Wednesday on a special train. Among the party were representatives of the national and many state agricultural departments. There were also the editors of twenty-three horticultural publications.

Henry Lohrenz, who claims he has two birthdays in the year, celebrated his June birthday by entertaining a few of his many friends at the bowling alleys on Friday night. Those present were C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer, A. Y. Ellison, Fred Meinhardt, Rude Windt, William Adels and J. J. Beneke.

Frank M. Ellis spent a few days of the past week fishing on the Gasconade river with a party of friends. Some of the trade expected a mess of fish, but Frank reports that all he caught was a cold.

Ed. Buechel, manager of the Riessen Floral Company, left on Saturday morning for Indianapolis with the St. Louis Turners, who hold their annual meeting there this week.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be a most important one for the members, and it is hoped that they will come out in full force. One of the most important parts is the nomination for offices for next year. The new by-laws provide that there must be at least three or more nominations for each office. This meeting will take place at 2 o'clock July 13, in Odd Fellows' building.

Fred H. Weber, on Boyle avenue, reports a good trade during the school closings the past two weeks.

BUFFALO.

State of Trade.

Last week was sultry and a week of good business. The youth of both sexes, who will be the solid men of business and stately matrons of the future, graduated by the hundreds from our high schools and a younger class emerged from the grammar schools. The call for bouquets was never greater and has kept all hands busy for many days. That hot week told on the roses and carnations, which up to about June 20 were as good in quality as in midwinter.

The Shriners of the country met at the Falls last week and many wandered to Buffalo and made the town gay with their oriental savagery and garb. The chief object of the convention seems to have been to have a good time.

Various Notes.

Mr. Smith, a florist of Denver, who called today, says that it was altogether too hot and moist for him at Niagara and he left his crowd and spent the remainder of the week at Toronto. Mrs. Boldt, of Denver, wife of Ben Boldt, who left Buffalo five years ago and has become famous in the western city as a most successful grower of whatever he takes hold of, was also in town.

We are glad to see anyone from Denver and expect a large delegation with the Elks. Arches spanning our principal streets and reviewing stands are already going up and the whole city will be covered with flags and bunting. They must be a desperate lot. Although the decorations will be on an immense scale it will not be much in our line and and what flowers are needed should be white or pale in color, for these wild animals say they will paint the town a bright vermilion.

We hear that bowling will be a feature of the social part of the Washington convention. Buffalo dropped out last year, but will come in again at the national capital. George McClure, who would rather bowl than attend his kirk, although he's Scotch, is drilling a small crowd of aspirants and we are likely to have a good team not afraid of the "Quakers" or the "Windies." Excuse me, George! W. S.

Rutherford, N. J.—Referring to the note in last week's Review, Thomas Knight says that the Julius Roehrs Co. last season forced a few of the new azalea named for the head of the company and found it a splendid addition to the list. They expect to grow it largely this year. The flowers are scarlet-maroon and very large.

We esteem the Review very highly for its Seed Trade News.—Binghamton Seed Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The Market.

The past week has been one of the best of the June season in spite of the fact that school exercises are about at an end and this feature of the demand has been rapidly dwindling away. Shipping trade has been very good, most of the material being evidently either for wedding decorations or funeral work. Local trade, which has not been especially good this spring with most of the retailers, has taken a spurt in the last few days, largely because of a rise in the death rate. Funeral work has been and is in very brisk demand, but weddings are also numerous.

Since last report receipts have diminished to a considerable extent. This is particularly noticeable of carnations, which are by no means as plentiful as they were a week ago, and the result is that averages to the growers are much improved in spite of the fact that quality is no longer what can be called good. It begins to look as though carnations would realize pretty fair values, quality considered, from now until outdoor carnations and asters begin to affect the market.

There is a diminishing cut from old Beauties and an increasing cut from young stock. In neither is the color first-class, but the young stuff in general is much better than the old. Good Brides and Maids are very hard to find and command good summer prices. The low grade material has also shortened up, but still serves to pull down the average, as it is not wanted. A few Kaiserins continue to make good prices. Liberty is plentiful and so is Chatenay, but both are small.

Calla lilies are gone and there are fewer Harrisii than at any time in six months. Auratums are just beginning but candidums are coming in heavily this week, selling only moderately well. Indoor sweet peas are at an end, but the market is glutted with the outdoor stock, principally Blanche Ferry of only medium quality. Naturally prices are low. There are all kinds of seasonable outdoor flowers in quantity, especially Shasta daisies. Peonies are still abundant and will continue so to the end of the season. In fact, it is predicted that the market will have plentiful supplies to the middle of July and only moderate prices are being received, except for some special fancy stock. "Green goods" have been in good demand, but are very abundant and reports from the growers indicate that July will see the market badly glutted with this specialty.

Practically all the wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m. during July and August.

Exuent the Meteor.

The Meteor rose has almost disappeared from this market. One by one the growers have been dropping it until not one of them has planted it in quantity for next season. J. A. Budlong was for years very successful with Meteor and had quite a lot of it last year, but will not grow it again. Wietor Bros. have a few Meteor, but cut it down every year. The larger growers plant Liberty and the smaller ones have dropped red altogether. Richmond has been very largely planted here, considering its price, for one-third the sales of this novelty, or about 50,000 plants, are growing for the Chicago market, and doing nicely. Nearly all the growers have dropped Perle, and Ivory is no longer grown. On the other hand, Chatenay has been planted in increased quantity.

Various Notes.

In the absence of the president Ed Kanst presided at last week's club meeting. The principal business was the appointment of a committee to arrange for a special meeting to try to arouse convention enthusiasm. It will take place at 7:30 tomorrow evening at the Bismarck.

Bassett & Washburn report good business from Indianapolis and orders from Cleveland especially heavy the past week.

Albert Amling has decided to drop Bride and Maid and devote the space to Kaiserin for summer bloom. His records show that he has received the most money per square foot from his houses of Kaiserin, besides saving considerable coal by letting them rest in winter.

One of the week's visitors was Mrs. C. W. Pike, who has again engaged in business at Racine.

In Sunday night's storm Matt Neidermeyer, out Evanston way, put out into the lake in a boat to rescue two young women who were unable to make the shore. The gardener found himself in the same predicament, but all three were brought in by the Evanston life saving crew.

The market on glass is stiff, a number of the greenhouse sizes being in short supply. Manufacturing has practically ceased for the summer and an advance is predicted.

One of the week's visitors was W. H. Carney, manager for J. B. Murdoch & Co., Pittsburg.

J. H. Shelton, Rochester, Ind., has been in town this week.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Saturday's business was quite encouraging from the summer standpoint. The demand was universal and swept the wholesale market clean. Prices remained stationary, however, summer values being now established. The supply of southern gladioli proved too extensive for the outlet and the flood backed up and overflowed into the refuse reservoir. Shipments were materially lessened, with the consequent result of higher prices, so the 50 cents per hundred basis no longer holds.

Peonies have about vanished and prices for any good stock reaching the market are fair. The cut of outdoor flowers is tremendous. Almost every wholesale house has an abundance of Crimson Ramblers and the innovation is generally popular. Dorothy Perkins in small quantities also reaches the market and in another year will be quite as much called for and grown. These rambler roses are especially beautiful now around every suburban home and their popularity exceeds that of any novelty among the outdoor decorative climbers.

Lilies are abundant, auratum and candidum especially. Valley holds firm and will while the wedding bells ring and the sweet girl graduates elocute. This week will see the end of these special festivities, but the steamer recognitions and the funerals we have always with us. Orchids hold their values and better stock of Cattleya gigas than now in the market we have never seen. Large quantities are shipped daily to other cities and New York is and will be orchid headquarters for a generation.

Carnations were for a wonder scarce on Saturday. Many of the roses arriving are badly mildewed, but even this failed to lift the best Bride and Maid stock above the summer rate. Top at any time was $5 per hundred and this only for the choicest. It is the same old story every year at this time, but we forget. On Monday receipts were light and demand good.

Here is another dollar. We cannot get along without

Various Notes.

Elliott's final auction sale in the old place drew a large crowd of buyers on Tuesday and the "farewell" was full of reminiscences for those of us who have caught the eagle eye of the auctioneer in other days, when the venerable Wm. Elliott presided. The new store on Fulton street, with its five floors and modern conveniences, will give the house a permanent home. Two entire floors will be devoted to the auction department when the fall season opens in September. At Tuesday's sale stock from Chas. Zeller's Son, Louis Schmutz, A. F. Schrader, Siebrecht & Son, Frank Manker, John Tschupp & Co., John Nicol, Holliday & Smith and others was sold.

The Joosten Plant, Bulb and Seed Co. has established offices at 202 West street. Its officers are E. Shaepke, president; W. A. Prosser, vice-president, and G. A. Joosten, secretary and treasurer. The secretary is a nephew of the late C. H. Joosten. Mr. Shaepke and Mr. Prosser have each represented some of the leading nursery, bulb and seed firms of the country and are well known.

Arthur T. Boddington reports great activity at present in shipments of cold storage longiflorums.

M. A. Donohue had charge last week of the Millard F. Smith wedding at Ticonderoga, Lake George. Pink and white peonies were used profusely and the bride's and maids' bouquets were lily of the valley, gardenias and Enchantress. Mr. Donohue was best man at the wedding here on Saturday in the "Little Church Around the Corner," of Fred Rowe, of Joliet, brother of Harry Rowe, of Chicago. The bride was Miss Trempler, of England, who arrived on the Campania at 9 a. m. and was speeding on her honeymoon trip south a happy bride at two o'clock. This is a very rapid city since the subway opened.

Tuesday, A. Lange and Mrs. Lange, of Chicago, sailed on the Kronz Prinz for a three months' holiday in Europe. Geo. T. Schuneman, of Baldwin, L. I., was on the same boat.

sailed June 22 on the Deutschland for a two months' pleasure trip. The exodus to the old country is large this summer.

The water lilies are already arriving in floods. Geo. Cotsonas & Co. handled several thousands of them on Saturday. The famous lily pond in Connecticut is the source of supply for N. Lecakes & Co.

S. Masur, of 238 Fulton street, Brooklyn, has the sympathy of his friends in the serious illness of his wife and the loss of his baby boy. Mr. Masur has been very busy lately with graduation work and contemplates doubling the capacity of his store this fall. His headquarters are on the heights near Beecher's church.

Fine stock of Victory reaches the New York market daily. There is a great future for this carnation and Guttman & Weber are making ample preparations for the anticipated demand next season.

One of Young & Nugent's force, A. Henshaw, was married this week to Miss M. Brown, of Brooklyn. Their wedding trip will be to Europe, where they will meet the veteran, Samuel Henshaw, of Staten Island, who is spending the summer in Europe.

Another wedding of interest to the trade took place at Walter Sheridan's summer home at Sea Gate, N. Y., where his niece was married on Wednesday. The outing lost a regular attendant thereby, as Mr. Sheridan and his family were thus unable to attend.

The early closing movement is now almost universal. Wholesale houses find little excuse for keeping open after 4 p. m. Many close before.

The annual housecleaning has begun. Some elaborate changes are promised before October. The retailers all close early and employes show marked appreciation.

Mr. Trumpore, of Small & Sons, who made such a fine record in the mile race of last year's outing, has for some weeks been laid on the shelf with rheumatism.

Carl Bernhard, head bookkeeper of the Lucas & Boddington Co., left June 14 for Germany on the steamer Rhinedam for a six weeks' visit and Herbert Greensmith, nursery superintendent of the same company's Sparkill nurseries will sail July 5 via steamer Oceanic for England and the continent on a business and pleasure trip.

The Outing.

All fears as to the great success of the outing of the Florists' Club vanished Wednesday morning. The long spell of storms and rainy weather was shelved for the occasion. A more perfect day could not have been selected, and the attendance was entirely satisfactory. The sail up the sound and through Hempstead bay lasted two and one-half hours, an ideal trip, about twice the distance to the resort of other years. Glenwood, selected by the committee in preference to any summer outing place near New York, proved to be all that was claimed for it and every facility for comfort, enjoyment, rest and sport gave general satisfaction. Full particulars, with prize-winners and other matters of interest, will appear in next week's issue.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business, which has been fair, is falling off, with prospects of continued decline until the glorious Fourth, the florists' holiday. Receipts of most varieties of flowers are lighter, sweet peas being the exception. Lilium candidum, useful for design work, is coming into the market in larger quantities. Japanese iris is also more plentiful. Double white petunias will be a staple until frost. Southern asparagus is showing the effects of the heat.

A Farm Scene.

A window display of more than ordinary interest may be seen at the Century Flower Shop. The entire window is filled by a real farm scene in miniature. A farm house, windmill worked by water power in full operation, a barn, stable, pigpen full of pigs, a pump, a rustic bridge and, best of all, a pond in the center full of ducklings alive and very active. Every detail from the dwarf Japanese maples to the rockery has been worked out with skill and accuracy. The window is crowded all day by appreciative passersby.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club meeting will be held on the second Tuesday in July, not on the glorious Fourth.

Emil Gerschick, acting for himself and for a partner, has purchased the Enterprise Greenhouses and store, Main and Johnson streets, Germantown, from Mrs. David Cliffe. This place was started about twenty-five years ago by the late David Cliffe and operated at different times by him and by each of his three sons. The sons being otherwise occupied Mrs. Cliffe has carried on the business since the death of her husband.

Henry Lewis, formerly with Samuel J. Bunting, has leased the La Roche place at Collingdale.

The suspension of payments by the City Trust Co. has been a blow to many of our florists. It falls hard on Oscar Young, who had deposited with this company the funds intended for rebuilding his place at Twenty-first street and Passyunk avenue.

J. Frank Blakeborough is erecting a store adjoining his greenhouses at Clayton, N. J.

Myers & Samtman have solved the problem of Beauty growing by cutting from their young stock before ceasing to cut from the old plants.

John Burton is sending in nice Liberty to the Flower Market.

The estate of the late Mark Reeves is badly tangled. The assets appear to be only a little over one-third the liabilities. The creditors, who met on Monday, hope to have the Leo Niessen Co. and Fred Ehret appointed administrators.

William Stevens, the popular representative of John Burton, now hustles in the greenhouses instead of in the city. He is greatly missed by his constituents, as well as by his associates at the Flower Market, who look eagerly forward to the fall, when his cheery ways will again brighten their daily work.

G. C. Watson is arranging a game of baseball for July 11, retailers vs. wholesalers.

Hugh Graham is rejuvenating his place at Logan. He has had an exceptionally good June, steamer trade being notably heavy.

M. Rice & Co. have a tastefully filled row of cork and birch bark window boxes in front of their new store. Boston ferns, ivies, begonias, livistonas and tradescantias are effectively grouped, an object lesson for other business houses.

D. T. Conner, of Lord & Burnham Co., is off on his vacation. First he goes to Baltimore on a business trip, thence to Minersville, Pa., on a ditto ditto. A Pittsburg glass magnate is not in it with D. T. Conner.

W. J. Sherry, of Johnson & Stokes, reports an exceptionally good season in both vegetable and flower seeds.

It is said that Berger Bros. are seriously considering ejecting their eleemosynary tenants, even though they be from la belle France.

Now that G. C. Watson has publicly absolved S. S. Pennock from being a loafer others may hope.

F. J. Michell reports a good early demand for fall bulbs.

Hope you will have a great Fourth. Don't do anything rash. PHIL.

AUBURN, R. I.—J. A. Budlong & Son Co. has built a new house 50x500 feet and planted it to Bridesmaid.

SOMERVILLE, N. J.—Ernest F. Hoehl has closed out his business here and is temporarily at Cetronia, Pa., while looking for a new location.
